Mr. Omer Cleek of Walton reported last Monday he had visited six tobacco raisers in various parts of the county on that day and five of the six had beds injured by the above pests. Numerous reports have been received by the county agent of injury by this pest.

FRUIT CROP NOT INJURED SPRAYING MOST IMPORTANT

The fruit crop in Boone county had not been injured up until last Monday nite according to reports from a number of leading Boone county orchardmen. The bloom this year is the heaviest in several years, the bloom clusters being unusually thick and a high percent alive.

Spraying to produce clean fruit is the most important items in the fruit business at the present time. Three or more fruit sprays should be applied to apples, peaches and grapes. These sprays instead of being complicated are quite simple when a general plan is followed. The spray schedule on all should begin immediately.

Apples

Spray No. 1—Just before the blooms open—for scab—use liquid lime sulfur one gallon to 50 gallons of water.

Spray No. 2—When 3-4ths of blossoms have fallen —for scab, bud moths and curculio—use same spray as above with addition of one and one half pounds of arsenate of lead.

Spray No. 3—Six weeks later—for bloteh, rots, codling moths—use 2-4-50 Bordeaux mixture and 1 1-2 pounds of arsenate of lead.

Peaches

Spray No. 1—One to four days after blooms fall—for curculio or peach worm —use poison spray of arsenate of lead 1 pound, lime 4 pounds and water 50 gallons.

Spray No 2—10 days after bloom fall—same as above.

Spray No. 3—For scab, brown rot and curculio—use Mulsoid, Dri-tomic or some of the prepared sulful-lime spray mixtures with the addition of 1 pound arsenate to 50 gallons of solution.

Sprays 4-5 and 6—If necessary for brown rot control—use spray No. 3 less arsenate of lead.

Grapes

Spray No. 1—Just before bloom appear—for moths, rots and mildew—use 2-4-50 Bordeaux, 1 1-2 pounds of arsenate of lead.

Sprays No. 2-3 and 4 at two week intervals—same as spray No. 1.

Many back yard growers could save all their grapes from rotting if they would apply the simple spray schedule above. Bordeaux mixture at a slightly higher cost may be bought ready prepared. For a more complete schedule write the county agent, Burlington, Ky.

Last Friday night Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kirkpatrick were surprised at their home with an old time shower. This happy young couple received quite a number of very useful gifts.

UNDER DAIRY PROGRESS

There has not been a time during the past six years when there was a greater need for dairy progress in Boone county from a dairy cattle improvement standpoint. There has also not been a time during this period when there was less interest in improvements from the breeding standpoint. Both male and female breeding stock is the cheapest it has been during this period and in many cases the cheapest it has ever been when quality and breeding are considered.

We might ask the question, "When is the best time from a breeder's standpoint to Begin—building up a good herd"?

"Should it be when breeding stock are at their highest or at their lowest"?

"To every action there is an equal and opposite reaction", this is a sound law of physics. Interpreted in terms of prices of cattle we might say that they go from one extreme to the other. Good purebred Jersey and Holstein bulls of excellent breeding and from known production dams can be secured at little more than market prices. A few day old male calves fro mreal good registered cows that would improve 75 per cent of the herds of the county can often be had for the asking or for slightly more than veal calf prices. Under conditionsof this kind no man unless very wealthy can afford to use a scrub, grade or nondescript bull for a herd sire.

Dairying is Boone county's most valued livestock industry. It is not a come and go business. While many farmers will always be in and out the dairy business has, come to the county to stay. The herd sires used this year will mean more toward high production and more value on the cows of the county during the next four to ten years than any other one factor. Use only good strong purebred animals out of cows with known production records.

LEGUMES FOR PASTURE

Legumes must be included in Boone county's pastures if they are going to produce at their lowest cost per animal carrying unit. Legumes must be used to build up our soils. Grasses like soils rich in nitrogen. Demonstrations carried on in Boone county the last two years and inspected by a large number of farmers have shown conclusively that Blue grass, timothy, red top and other grasses growing side by side with lespedeza, sweet clover and other legumes not only benefited but grew quicker, tallen and furnished more pasture and hay than where growing alone.

We can ot afford to buy nitrogen fertilizer for our pastures. We can afford to seed a few pounds of legumes per acre which when properly innoculated set immediately to work to change large amounts of the eighty percent nitrogen in the atmosphere to plant food. Legumes are a fertilizer factory that one put in motnon work while we sleep

Japan clover furnishes one of the best soil building and nitrogen manufacturing plants. Grasses in particular benefit by growing with it. Many farmers have not sown Japan clover in their pasture mixtures this spring for two reasons; first because of the drouth last year and the bad year previous and second because of the fear that Korean is going to make Japan a back number. Japan clover is still one of the best pasture improvement crops and is one of the few that can be sown in an old pasture and will make good. It is not too late to seed this crop in pastures that have already been sown.

WOOL POOL MEETING

The second meeting of the Boone county wool pool is scheduled to be held at Burlington, Monday, May the 4th at 1:30 p. m. Precinct chairmen are reporting that more farmers than usual are pooling their woll, this year.

The wool pool is organized as a selling organization and has given splendid results in Boone county for a good many years.

W. M. S. REPORT

Mrs. Minnie Rogers entertained the Womens Missionary Union of Bellview at her country home on the first Thurs in March.

We had rather a small meeting but a very pleasant one.

There were eighteen present five of these being visitors.

We had our mission study in the afternoon which was enjoyed by all. There were a lot of good thots gathered from it. We also had several songs and our chain of prayer. Our Social Service leader is reporting quite a lot of good work too.

Our next meeting will be in the 7th of May at the home of Mrs. Bertha Rice. We always have a good meeting there. So we are inviting every one, both members and visitors that can to be present.

Mrs. Frances Buffington,
Pub. Chairman.

Non-Conducting Wool

Rock wool is the same as mineral wool. It is a thin, vitreous fiber, used as a non-conductor. Some mineral wool is made from slag, but the rock wool is made directly from the rocks.

"Laminating" Paper

Two thicknesses of paper may be joined together (laminated) without difficulty by simply pasting together with a starch or dextrin paste and allowing to dry under sufficient pressure to prevent curling.

RESOLUTIONS BY BOARD OF FARMERS' MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE CO.

WHEREAS, On the 14th day of March, 1931, the Lord took unto himself one of his most faithful earthly workers when J. H. Stevens passed away.

WHEREAS, The Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company has lost a valuable and esteemed officer, the community a useful and loyal citizen and the family a devoted brother.

WHEREAS, To the directors who remain, his memory is precious, his example a perpetual incentive to more strenuous endeavor and exalted achievements. While we miss him from our meetings, let us not forget there will be gladness untold in the Great Beyond.

RESOLVED, By the Board of the Farmers' Mutual Fire Insurance Company that, in recognition of the valuable services rendered to the Company, a page of our minute book be dedicated to his memory and that these resolutions be copied therein, that copy be sent to the family of our deceased officer and that a copy be sent to the local press for publication.

Local News

Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Lamb returned to that place in Benton, Ky., on Monday of this week. Mrs. Lamb plans to attend summer school at Murray State Teachers College and to return to her post here at the end of the fifth and sixth grades.

Mr. Lamb, after a summer's vacation, will complete his college work at Murray. He plans to do this so that he may be able to take up high school work year after next. Mr. Lamb is one of the best liked and most efficient school men Burlington ever has had and it is with sincere regret that his going, even for one year, is noted.

Mrs. Lamb's return next year will be anticipated with much zest, as it is difficult, if not altogether impossible, to place her even second to her better half in the class room.

Mrs. Carrie R. Riddel and Geo. A. Porter spent Sunday afternoon with Howard Huey and family near Petersburg.

Two of the gentler sex demonstrated that the aformentioned term is a misnomer when two feminine colored ladies indulged in a cutting scrape at Richwood last Saturday. The two women gave their names as Deary Walker and Geneva Logan. Deary was placed under arrest and Geneva, who proved to be the prosecuting witness, was ordered to appear before acting county judge Cropper for trial on Tuesday. Neither was very seriously hurt. This is the second battle that has taken place in the negro railroad settlement near Richwood, recently.

Mrs. Herbert Snyder visited her father, J. C. Bolen, in Louisville the past week-end. Mr. Bolen is recovering from a broken hip sustained in a fal lrecently.

Friends of Judge N. E. Riddell, who is sojourning in San Antonio, Texas, for a few weeks, state that overcoats are very comfortable there. Something very unusual in that climate, especially at this season.

Bailey Greenup assisted the American Legion minstrel troupe in exhibiting their program at Verona on Friday night of last week.

A nice crowd attended the "Chocolate Weddin'" at Petersburg last Saturday evening in spite of a very damp and disagreeable evening.

Emmy Cason, youngest daughter of Tax Commissioner and Mrs. J. S. Cason, is absent from school this week on account of an injury received in a fall from a horse last week. Miss Cason is expected to recover soon.

Mrs. Lillian Presser, of near Waterloo, returned to her home last week, after several weeks spent with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kirkpatrick, here.

The common graded school students started their summer vacation period on Friday of last week. The eighth grade students will gather at Burlington next Friday morning for the county wide examinations.

Supt. and Mrs. D. H. Norris entertained for dinner last Sunday, Prof. and Mrs. E. E. Kirkwood, of Hamilton, Prof. and Mrs. C. G. Lamb, of Burlington, and Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Brodt, of Ludlow.

County Clerk A. C. McMullen, Mr. and Mrs. Leslie McMullen and family and Jerry Delph and daughter, were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Ryle last Sunday.

DONALD ANNESS

Donald Anness, aged 4 years, beloved son of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Anness, passed away early Friday morning at the home of his parents, No. 228 West 4th Street, Covington, Ky., aftera short illness of measles, followed by pneumonia. The remains were taken to Hinton, Ky., Sunday and after appropriate services at the grave he was laid to rest in the Raven Creek Cemetery.

Little Donald is survived by his parents, three sisters and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn his untimely departure.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Primitive Beds

In the time of the Normans chests and benches were used for beds. The bedding was kept inside.

Adobe Now Turned Out by Modern Machinery

The lowly adobe has gone modern. No longer is one of this cheap and pore proletarian building material restricted to the Mexican peon and to the lonely homesteader. The sun-dried mud block of the West, says the Los Angeles Times, has been adopted by the people of means and by the Twentieth century builder accustomed to working in stone, and concrete, and brick, and lumber.

Modern machinery is now employed in the manufacture of the adobes. Once the mud and the straw which helps to hold it together were mixed by bare feet treading industriously in a big box, a trough or a mere puddle in the ground. Now this is accomplished by a concrete mixer.

The tradition that only a Mexican can make good adobes has been exploded in Arizona and the veil of semi-mystery thrown about the art has been rent. Formerly it was thought that the "paisano" possessed some mysterious sixth sense, some faculty inherited from remote Indian ancestors which no mere white man could hope to acquire. Now it is known that any competent workman can turn out adobes as durable as any molded by the Aztecs before the days of Cortez, and a really bright one is likely to figure out improvements in the process.

Great Moghul Emperor Also Inventive Genius

India never had a greater king than Akbar, the Moghul, who at thirteen years of age found himself shouldered with the cares of an empire which showed unmistakable signs of collapsing into ruins. During the 40 years of this remarkable man's power he turned back the tides of dissolution, rebuilt his kingdom, enlarged and extended it throughout India, brought it under unity of organization. He died in 1605.

Akbar was a great lover of sports and hunting. He rode with all the address of his Moghul ancestors. His courage was reckless and astounding —once inducing him to attack with but 40 followers a whole hostile army, which was promptly routed. He disliked luxury and was a modest eater. His spare time, during the earlier years of his rule, was given over to inventions. One of these was a machine for cleaning 16 guns simultaneously, and another a device for firing off 17 cannon at the same time. Both aided him greatly in his campaigns.—Boston Globe.

"House in the Wood"

Situated in The Hague wood in Holland is the famous "House in the Woods"—a royal villa erected about 1645 for the widow of Frederic Henry of Orange. Here Mary Stuart, wife of William II, passed the happiest years of her life. At The Hague in 1899 was held the international peace conference. The Hague is rapidly extending to the popular seaside resort of Scheveningen. Close to this popular resort is the Peace palace, erected at a cost of $1,600,000, donated by Andrew Carnegie. The foundation stone was laid July 30, 1907, and bears the inscription: "Paci justis firmandae hanc aedem Andreae Cornegii munificentia dedicavit." The building was founded after the first peace conference and was intended to be the meeting place of the permanent court of arbitration.

Unwelcome Reform

Queen Victoria's bonnets belong to history. Mrs. A. M. W. Stirling, sister-in-law of William de Morgan, the novelist, has told in her reminiscences, "Life's Little Day," how her mother who patronized the same milliner as did the queen, once begged the bonnet maker to become a "national benefactor and persuade the queen to wear less hideous bonnets."

"Oh, madam, I did try," cried the milliner in despair. "I ventured to modify the shape ever so little and put a pretty bow at the side, and they were sent back to me with a crushing message: 'What her majesty requires is a bonnet—not a cap.'"—Kansas City Star.

Ancient Slave Ship

Comparatively sound, despite its great age, the hull of the only remaining slave ship known to have brought "black ivory" to the coast of North America lies drawn up on the beach at St. Croix, Virgin Islands. The vessel, the property of Cornelius Penthony, bears the name of the Vigilant. She was operated under the Danish flag until slavery was abolished in the Virgin Islands in 1848. Both before and after that time she was engaged in the slave trade, landing slaves illegally in United States territory, Cuba, Porto Rico and Brazil.

Lawmakers Rowed to Work

Washington's first legislature, says an article in the Seattle Times, with two exceptions, was composed of west side men, the two from the east side of the Cascades being representatives of Clark county, which at that time spread all over eastern Washington. Nearly the entire membership journeyed to and from the capital in boats, and it required two good days at the oars to reach Olympia from Seattle, a journey more or less hazardous.

Durable Food

We once put a mark on the edge of a railroad lunch-counter sandwich and found it there two years later. It had been newly half-soled, but it was the same sandwich.—Woman's Home Companion.

MRS. MARGARET LUCAS

Mrs. Margaret Lucas, aged 81 years, widow of P. M. Lucas, passed away Friday at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. T. King, Huntington, W. Va.

As a tribute to her husband, who had long been a faithful member of Washington Lodge, I. O. O. F. of Covington, Ky., six members of this lodge acted as pall bearers.

Mrs. Lucas is survived by one daughter, Mrs. King, and numerous other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Tallaferro Funeral Home in Erlanger Monday at 2:30 o'clock by the Rev. R. D. Martin, pastor of the Erlanger Baptist Church, after which the remains were placed by the side of her husband in Highland Cemetery.

Formed of Alloys

Pewter and Britannia metal were the names applied to the soft tin-base alloys from which metal household articles have been made for centuries. Formerly pewter generally contained lead together with antimony and copper while Britannia contained no lead. The distinction was not strictly adhered to. At the present time, the term pewter covers both types, although most of the alloys do not contain lead.

Crocodiles Victims of Their Own Bad Temper

Crocodiles have been endowed before other creatures with the gift of tears and are believed to find it a useful asset. While the world has stood gaping at the spectacle of so tearful a reptile, the crocodile has stooped to greater purpose. Now, however, he is to lose the advantage of surprise and his tears will be a puzzle no longer, says the London Times. Imperial scientific research has found out something about crocodiles which it would be very decidedly worth their own while to know.

Researches carried on in Uganda have shown that crocodiles have a secret grief. They are very human in some ways and are inclined to sleep with their mouths open. There is nothing wrong so far, and if crocodiles pass most of their lives in a snooze nobody will complain. But it appears that the tsetse fly is addicted to walking around the open mouths of sleeping crocodiles and to biting the softer parts.

Crocodiles let this irritation master them and pay a terrible price for their bad temper. They snap their jaws and swallow the flies and with them the germ of the sleeping sickness. It is the old story of the lion and the mouse—that kindness, or at least forbearance, from the bigger beast pays in the long run.

One Mushroom Variety Expert Had Overlooked

One of the most nourishing viands to be found in the fields is the mushroom, and while they are rather liberally consumed, there are many persons who will not risk eating them for fear of mistaking the poisonous toadstool for the edible mushroom.

But it is rare that one hears of a man dying through experimenting with foods. Yet it happened a short time ago. A famous expert on mushrooms, M. Cottin, died of mushroom poisoning.

This Frenchman was probably the greatest living expert on mushrooms, and wrote a book on his pet subject. He was also careful to illustrate the book with pictures showing mushrooms that could be eaten with safety and those that were dangerous. Apparently M. Cottin discovered a mushroom that he had not listed. He ate it to make sure and died.

English Like Pantomimes

Englishmen in exile seem to cling to pantomime as tenaciously as to plum pudding, writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. When the Resolute wintered in the ice at Melville island in 1852 Christmas was celebrated by the production of a pantomime, which had the novelty of being played entirely for the fun of the performers. There was no audience, for every member of the crew took part, with the commander, Sir George Nares, starring as Columbine.

In 1875, when on another polar expedition in the Alert, Nares "reopened the Royal Arctic theater" after it had been closed for 25 years, and pantomime was again the favorite pastime of all concerned.

"As You Like It"

Various commentators have advanced different theories as to why Shakespeare's play was given the name "As You Like It." Braithwait, however, in his "Barnaby's Journal," speaks of "As You Like It" as a proverbial motto, and this seems more likely to imply the true explanation of the title of Shakespeare's play. The title of the comedy may on this supposition be exactly parallel with that of "Much Ado About Nothing." The proverbial title of the play implies the freedom of thought and indifference to censure which characterizes the sayings and doings of most of the actors in this comedy of human nature in a forest.

Shows Good Census

"How many are there in your family, madam?"

"Just my husband and I."

"No children?"

"No."

"Any dogs or cats?"

"No."

"Do you have a radio?"

"No."

"Now, have you any saxophones, pianolas, ukuleles or other musical instruments?"

"Indeed not. And why all these questions?"

Head or Heart?

"Lately," informs a Tablet subscriber, "I am importuned, day and night, to subscribe to this and to that. Considering the times, wouldn't it be better to give a bit to each and ask no questions than to be considered hard-hearted?" "That," replies the editor, "we can best answer by quoting Theodore Roosevelt, the beloved. He said: 'Hardness of heart, is a doubtful quality, but it is doubtful whether it works more damage than softness of head.'"—Exchange.

Spinach Cook

Ruth Ellen and her mother were taking their first dinner with friends. After the four-year-old was served she surveyed her food with a critical eye and said:

"My Aunt Rose has a cook that can cook doughnuts but ours is just like yours, a spinach cook."

Napoleon Made Careful Study of Art of War

Napoleon's coup d'oeil and the lightning flash of his genius is well known, but there was far more to his campaigns than coup d'oeil or the most brilliant of improvisation. It was the result—the result of genius in systematizing data—of long and painful study not merely of the technicalities of his profession, but of its "divine parts," of which he found details in the theoretical work of his predecessors and in the campaigns of those who alone are his rivals. There was, as Professor Wilkinson shows, nothing miraculous about that first campaign. Napoleon's own special gifts amounted to genius, especially his comprehension of men and his swiftness of decision, but his peculiar grasp of the art of war was the result of long study and meditation. Before he was in command in Italy he had written the memorandum that forms the basis of his campaign, a memorandum which laid down the conditions of success and was derived from a study of earlier campaigns, of political history, of the map and of manuals like Bourcet's. His own special scheme of a frontal attack combined with a turning movement was deduced completely before it was applied. His campaigns are applied doctrine, and nearly all the doctrine he had worked out in his head before he attained supreme command in the field.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Production of Pottery Throughout the Ages

Varnished or lustrous pottery was produced in Greece from about the Fifth to the Third century B. C. Instead of being covered with a true glaze it possessed a lustrous surface, the exact nature of which is not definitely known. Glazed pottery was produced in Egypt, Babylonia, Persia and the countries bordering the Mediterranean sea. Various methods were employed in producing the surface. In Spain the art of glazing with glass was practiced to some extent as early as the Fifteenth century, having probably been introduced from Persia. Lead-glazed pottery is produced in practically every country of the civilized world. It has been used in the Orient, the Near East, and throughout Europe and the United States. Green pottery was made in China during the Han dynasty, 202 B. C.-200 A. D., which was the earliest lead-glazed ware of which we have knowledge.

Electric Light and Phone

The first homes in which the electric light bulb shed its rays were the houses in Menlo Park, N. J., where Mr. Edison's laboratory was situated then. The invention of the incandescent lamp itself took place on October 21, 1879, and the lighting system was invented before the end of that year.

But two years before the residents of Menlo Park bathed in the glow of the first electric lights, Charles Williams, Jr., of Somerville, Mass., talked over a telephone installed in his home. This was the first home in the world equipped with a phone, and a similar installation was made at the same time in Mr. William's office at Boston, so he could have some place to call up.

Endowed Church Bells

The bells of the hoary Twelfth century church of St. Mary's, Melton Mowbray, in Leicestershire, England, perform a double duty each evening. They toll the curfew, and also the day of the month. Hence the townsfolk do not need calendars because from time immemorial this practice has been followed without a break. Tradition has it that 300 years ago a wealthy follower of one of the Leicestershire hunts became lost in a maze of woodland for more than a day after the rest of the party had returned home. Eventually the wind-borne chimes of the church bells set him in the right path and in thankfulness he created an endowment fund to ensure the ringing of the bells in perpetuity.

Speedometer

Quail which hunters have always described as "shooting up like bullets," do not fly as fast as their startling whirr of wings would indicate, an investigator has discovered after trying days of racing the game birds in his automobile. Donald D. McLean, of the California fish and game department, has informed the American Game association that the greatest burst of speed he was able to time with his speedometer was 58 miles an hour. The average "cruising" time was around 40 miles an hour, he stated.

Happily Forgotten

"How is Mrs. Clemens now?" asked Hapgood.

"Much better," he drawled. "In fact the whole Clemens family has been so surprisingly well of late that I have begun to think that Providence has forgotten us."—Kansas City Times.

No Wonder It's Hard

One reason a foreigner has a hard time learning our language is because we ourselves talk it all up. We say we drink up a pint of milk when we drink it down. We also say we drink a glass full of soda when we drink it empty.—Florida Times-Union.

3 "Inspiration" Menus For Weary Housewives

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

WHEN you feel as though you cannot possibly plan another menu, it is time to go to your cook book or read the food pages of your favorite newspaper for suggestions. And right now is the season when many housewives are making up their minds to allow someone else to plan the meals for at least a little while.

Accordingly, you will find below several menus that are especially suitable to serve this month; and they will be most helpful when you feel that your supply of ideas needs to be replenished. While most of these dishes are old favorites, they are so carefully combined that the menus are decidedly interesting as well as practical.

Try one of these dinners tonight:

Swiss Steak — Baked Potatoes
Buttered Carrots and Peas
Sweet Mustard Pickles
Rice Flake Muffins
Peach Custard Balls — Coffee

Cream of Tomato Soup
Crisp Crackers
Vegetable and Meat Salad
Hot Rolls
Quince or Grape Jelly
Caramel Pudding — Fruit Macaroons

New Style Chicken Shortcake
Buttered Asparagus
Spiced Pears — Hot Biscuit
Molded Vegetable Salad
Peach Tarts with Marshmallow Sauce

Swiss Steak: Have round steak weighing about 2 pounds cut 1 inch thick. Mix ½ cup flour with salt and pepper and pound into the steak. Cook in butter until golden brown on both sides, and sprinkle with ½ onion, chopped, and ½ green pepper, chopped. Add 1½ cups boiling water blended with ½ cup Tomato Ketchup. Cover and simmer slowly until the meat is tender—at least one hour.

Rice Flake Muffins: 1 cup flour; ½ teaspoon salt; 2 teaspoons baking powder; 3 tablespoons sugar; 1 cup Rice Flakes; 1 egg; ½ cup milk; 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Sift together flour, salt, baking powder and sugar. Add Rice Flakes crushed with a rolling pin. Beat egg and add to the milk. Add to the dry ingredients and mix lightly. Add melted butter and bake for 15 minutes in a moderately hot oven—400-425 degrees F.—in well greased muffin tins. This makes six large muffins.

Peach Custard Balls: Drain juice from canned peaches and put two halves together with a spoonful of Currant Jelly in the center, to form a ball, and coat with thick boiled custard. Roll, just before serving, in chopped nuts or ground macaroon crumbs.

Vegetable and Meat Salad: 2 cups cold cooked meat cut in cubes; 1¼ cups cooked peas; 3 hard cooked eggs; head of lettuce; 6 Stuffed Spanish Olives; ¼ cup French Dressing.

Mix meat and peas together, sprinkle with French Dressing and chill thoroughly for about 1 hour. Place in deep crisp lettuce cups or in a large bowl lined with lettuce. Top with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing and garnish with slices of hard cooked eggs. On each slice of egg place a slice of Stuffed Olive.

Fruit Macaroons: 4 egg whites; ½ cup granulated sugar; 1 teaspoon almond or vanilla extract, or ½ teaspoon of each; ¼ pound pitted dates, chopped; ¾ cup almonds or pecans; 1 cup Rice Flakes.

Whip egg whites stiffly and fold in sugar. Add flavoring. Mix together, and add the dates, nutmeats and crushed Rice Flakes. Drop on a well greased baking sheet and bake for about 20 minutes in a slow oven—300 degrees F.

New Style Chicken Shortcake: 2 tablespoons butter; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 medium-sized can Cream of Celery Soup; ¾ teaspoon salt; Dash of pepper; 3 hard cooked eggs, sliced; 1½ cups diced cooked chicken.

Melt butter, add flour and mix until smooth. Then add celery soup and cook until creamy, stirring constantly. Add salt, pepper, hard cooked eggs and chicken. Serve between the halves and on top of hot biscuit. Garnish with slices of egg, Stuffed Spanish Olives, and sprigs of parsley.

Spiced Pears: 1 large can pears; 1 cup sugar; 1/3 cup Distilled White Vinegar; 1½ dozen whole cloves; 1 stick cinnamon.

Drain juice from pears, and add to it the sugar, vinegar, cloves and cinnamon. Boil until syrupy about 10 minutes. Drop in the pears and simmer for 15 minutes. Cool in the syrup, drain, and serve with meat. A small amount of red coloring may be added to the syrup when cool, if a bright color is desired.

Arabic Treasures in Cities of Sunny Spain

Reading one of the many stories of any country where the others is always dangerous, but in the case of Spain few would question the right of its glorious and varied monuments of architecture to a pre-eminent position. More fortunate in this respect than other Continental countries, lily Gothic and Renaissance masterpieces of art are supplemented by the mosques and palaces left as a heritage to the nation by the Moorish occupation of southern Spain.

Romance and magic lie in the very mention of the Spanish place names and treasures of art—the storied Alhambra and the stately Alcazar of Granada, the Mosque of Cordoba, the Pillar of Zaragoza, the massive Cathedral of Burgos, with its lovely towers; Seville's magnificent cathedral, the famed Giralda and the Alcazar, the immensity and beauty of the Monastery of the Escorial, the richness of the facade of Santiago's cathedral, the University of Salamanca, the Roman aqueduct of Segovia, the arabesque treasures of Valencia (the city of the Cid), the royal palace of Madrid and the splendor of Toledo's cathedral. All these and many more are gems of art and symbols of a rich history. Their beauty is rivaled only by their surprising variety.—Exchange.

Trace of Absurdity in This Legal Phraseology

The witness, being duly sworn, did affirm, assert testify and declare, without mental reservation, and neither impelled, persuaded, coaxed, cajoled, bribed, begged, besought, urged, pressed or in any way whatsoever importuned by another, but of his free will, unrestricted, unobstructed, clear, independent, unchecked, unfettered, unhindered, untrammeled and undisturbed:

To wit, that he was the possessor, owner, master and keeper of a dog, and hereafter when the name of the dog shall appear it shall be construed, interpreted, defined and accepted as meaning neither a cat, bear, pig, elk, pony, mule, civet, deer, squirrel, lynx, wolf, fox, lion, cow, horse or other four-footed beast; neither fowl, fish nor insect nor other living creature, nor such creature as may have lived in a past age, nor such as it may be conceived will live in ages to come, but as a plain dog, which is to say, a four-footed, carnivorous, domesticated mammal of the family canis.—Exchange.

Ye Simile

"He's false, Marie, as false as Neptune's beard in a beauty pageant."

"Oh, I don't know, I think he's clean—like a head waiter's shirt-front."

"And as tight as a rubber band around a bootlegger's bankroll."

"No! You know if he would fake you out, you would be as happy as a red ant on a picnic plate—"

"Bored as an aviator on a tricycle, you mean."

"Well, he's prominent—"

"Yes—like knees in Scotland."

"Elderly—perhaps—"

"I know—but he wears his age as gracefully as a last week's newspaper. Ha! Ha!"

Hamilton and Burr

The rivalry between Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr began when they were studying law. Alexander Hamilton completed his study and passed the bar examination first. Later when the election of Burr and Jefferson was thrown into the house of representatives, Hamilton, although disliking Jefferson, threw his influence in favor of him and secured the defeat of Aaron Burr. Still later when Burr ran for the office of governor of New York and was defeated, he blamed this defeat on Hamilton and challenged him to a duel.

End of Famous Pirate

Edward Teach, or Thatch (?-1718), an Anglo-American pirate, popularly known as Blackbeard, became widely known and feared for his robberies and atrocities throughout the West Indies and along the coast of Carolina and Virginia. At Pasquotank, N. C., in 1718, he was attacked by two small sloops under the command of Lieutenant Maynard of the British navy, and by a successful ruse led to board the vessels, when he and several of his men were killed.—Washington Star.

Age-Old Tradition

The ground hog superstition is the American descendant of a tradition ages old. Its foundation is the general truth that a mild February is apt to be followed by change and a chilly spring. Our pagan ancestors were more familiar with the habits of hibernating animals than they were with calendars, and the premature return of these creatures became a forecast of bad weather. The notion persisted in Christian times and attached itself to Candlemas day—February 2.

Diplomatic

Bobby had been warned that punishment awaited him if he asked for candy during a visit to a neighbor with his mother.

The little fellow spied the appetising sweets, took the most tempting piece from the plate, saying: "What's a piece of candy like that good for, Mrs. C?"

First American Theater

The first building in the United States to be designed especially as a theater was erected in Williamsburg, the Colonial capital of Virginia, in 1716.

Sticking Doors

If doors tend to stick, especially the swinging door into the dining room, first try scraping all the outer edges. If this doesn't work, look the door over, discover just where it sticks and shave off a little of the surface.

"So great was my suffering that I hardly cared whether I lived or not. Every bite I ate gave me the most severe pains—the indigestion, heartburn, bloating and biliousness were simply terrific. Even nights were torments to me—night after night sleep would never come. I began losing flesh rapidly. I began to look twice my age. I was truly in a terrible condition. My neighbor advised Karnak for which I will thank her to my dying day. It is the most marvelous medicine in the world. It not only rid me of my suffering but it has caused me to gain in weight and I feel better than I ever felt in my life and sleep like a child. I thank my neighbor and I thank Karnak."

Bill Rogers Stars In Belleview Victory Over Burlington, Saturday

COUNTY SEAT TEAM GETS TWO HITS IN CONTEST — HEBRON AND WALTON ARE WINNERS

Big Bill Rogers turned in one of the best pitching efforts that he, or any other pitcher in the Boone County League, ever has produced, last Saturday on the Belleview diamond against the Burlington team.

It might seem rather useless to state Belleview was the winner. However, to Sim Afterkirk also must be handed a great deal of credit for a well pitched game. Belleview bunched four hits for three runs in the fatal second, but from then on it was a shut-out for both pitchers, but Afterkirk pitching against odds, while Rogers was coasting on three-run lead.

Rogers allowed but two hits, according to the Burlington scorer, but it was reported that one of them was scratchy. Afterkirk, himself, drove out the only real safe one off his rival. Rogers fanned ten men.

Afterkirk fanned but four and allowed six hits, two of these coming in the first and four in the second, when Russell Miller doubled with the bases filled to count 3 runs. Afterkirk pitched no-hit ball after the second.

Hebron Wins

Hebron surprised Boone county fandom last Saturday afternoon at the Petersburg park when they handed a 4-1 defeat to the latter team with George Boehler, of Lawrenceburg, a former big leaguer, in the box.

Although Boehler pitched very fine ball, Brown, for Hebron, showed plenty of stuff to better him a shade.

Three of the Hebron hits were made by Hinges, catcher, while Stull, third sacker, drove out two. All of the Hebron hits were made in the second inning.

Walton Holds Lead

Walton retained their hold on first place by defeating Rabbit Hash at Walton by the score of 4 to 1. It was a pitchers battle between Glenn and Brady. Further particulars were unavailable at press time, though the Recorder will make an especial effort to supply its readers with all of the dope from now on.

BULL KILLS

Jerry Estes, 86, Years Old Resident of Boone County

An infuriated bull killed Jerry Estes, 86, North Bend road, Monday. Estes died a few hours after he had been trampled and gored by the maddened animal.

Estes had gone to the barn to loosen the bull when it attacked him. He was trampled and badly injured before help could reach him. He died shortly before noon.

Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at Francesville.

4-H CLUB COWS MAKE RECORDS

The 4-H club cows owned by Carol Rice of the Blue Ribbon club, Lloyd Kelly Jones, of the Silver Leaders club and Wilbur Harris, of the Willing Workers club are making splendid records in the state butter fat production contests. Complete feed and cost of production records are kept by each of the above contestants. The cows are tested once each month under the supervision of the county agent.

Hilleigh's Dark Lindy No. 782013, a registered Jersey cow owned by Wilbur Harris, averaged better than 40 pounds of milk per day during April with a high butter fat test. The cows of Rice and Jones are making equally good records according of age and lactation period. The rules for the contest are practically the same as on Register of Merit test except that complete cost of production records are kept.

D. R. Blythe installed a new Majestic radio for Sheriff Herbert Snyder, Tuesday.

BURLINGTON PHYSICIAN RETURNS FROM HOSPITAL

Dr. E. W. Duncan, of Burlington, returned to his home Monday cinnati. Dr. Duncan had been confined to the hospital for three weeks. His friends learned on his return that his condition is much improved.

School Notes

The Junior and Senior classes of Burlington are presenting their annual play on Friday and Saturday evenings, May 15th and 16th. They have chosen the play entitled "Diamonds and Hearts" and are working hard to make a success. Come and bring the entire family.

Rev. F. E. Walker has been invited by the Senior class to be the speaker for the Baccalaureate service which will be held on next Sunday evening at High School Auditorium May 17th. Everyone is invited to be present.

Commencement exercises will be held on Thursday evening May 21.

GIRLS CLUB MEETS

The 4-H girls sewing club of Belleview, held their first meeting May 6th at the High School building. Our leader Mrs. Wallace Clore, gave us some very helpful points in sewing, and each of us made our first garment in Unit 1 after which the following officers were elected: President—Irene Cason; Secretary—Lou Ella Berkshire; Publicity Chairman—Mary Jane Brady; Yell Leader—Lou Ella Berkshire; Program Committee—Virginia Kruse, Margie Berkshire and Mary Emily CasonBurcham, Song Leader—Dorothy Sprague, gave our club the name "Busy Bees." We have planned to meet twice a month. Urge each one of the members to be present at the next meeting which will be May 20th at the home of our leader Mrs. Wallace Clore. We wish to thank Mr. H. R. Forkner, for the interest he has shown.

LOCAL BOY

MAKES GOOD IN BASE BALL CIRCLES. LEFTY SPRAGUE MOVES UP

Clifford (Lefty) Sprague, who was in a large part responsible for Burlington's championship team of 1930, has been sent to the Davenport, Iowa, team it was reported this week. Sprague went from the Burlington team to Peoria, Ill. for the first month of this season. His excellent work with this team, it was stated, won him a place with Davenport. In addition to a rise in the ranks of base ball Sprague also received a substantial increase in pay.

Sprague made an unusual record while playing in Boone county. Since he left this county this mound as continued to such an extent that it is rumored that he will be given a tryout in the major leagues as soon as he has been given more seasoning in the minors.

Sprague's pitching for Peoria was unusually good in the month that he played with them. He won the attention of the fans in his first game when he proved his ability as a hitter as well as a pitcher by bagging a home run and a three base hit.

The work of Sprague with Burlington last season was largely responsible for that team winning the championship of the Boone County League.

The Girls Reserve of Burlington held a mother day party at the bank hall in Burlington, Saturday afternoon. Mothers of the girls were guests of honor and were entertained with an interesting pageant. The pageant was presented under the direction of Miss Hazel Cubbage. Refreshments were served and each mother was presented with a carnation.

A combination of fall rye and winter hairy veteh is to be seen on the farm of Mr. Ben Paddack, of near Hebron. While such a combination has been recommended by the various agricultural colleges for years few farmers in the county have tried this combination. The stand is excellent and those farmers who have an opportunity should pay it a visit.

A combination of oats and Canadian field peas is also to be seen on the farm of Mr. Paddack. This is also a new crop combination locally and is worthy of observation this year.

DEMOCRATS

OF BOONE COUNTY SELECT STATE CONVENTION DELEGATES

On May 9th, 1931, at 2 o'clock p. m., the Democratic voters of Boone county met at Burlington, ing a convention to select delegates Kentucky, for the purpose of holding to the State Convention at Lexington.

The meeting was called to order by R. E. Berkshire, who read the call as Democratic County Chairman for this convention.

After this, on motion of O. W. Cleek seconded by George Tupman, O. R. Russ was made chairman pro tem of the convention.

A motion was put before the house by C. L. Cropper to submit the following resolutions to a committee of three:

"Resolved that all resolutions be offered in writing and that the chair refer them to the committee on resolutions."

The resolutions were then offered by Newton Sullivan, Jr., and were referred to a committee consisting of the following: Mrs. Geo. Ransom, Verona; J. T. Williams, Bullittsville, and Benjamin Osborn, Florence.

After the adoption of the resolutions the convention was adjourned.

BIRD DOG KILLED AFTER ATTEMPTED ATTACK

Shortly after former Sheriff L. T. Utz, of Florence, had left for the Democratic Convention at Lexington, Monday, a valuable bird dog owned by him was killed by Deputy Sheriff W. B. Cotton. The deputy was called after the dog had attempted to attack children. It is believed that the dog may had been afflicted with rabies.

The A. B. Renaker Realty Co., made the following sales this week:

Sold 2 lots in Park Addition for J. W. Kelly to A. G. McMullen.

A. G. McMullen traded two lots in Park Addition to B. E. Aylor for two lots belonging to Mr. Aylor which gives Mr. Aylor two lots near his residence and places all of Mr. McMullen's lots together. Mr. McMullen owns some of the best lots in Park Addition and it is rumored that Mr. McMullen will erect a residence on his lots facing Burlington.

Sold 8 lots in the Bradford Subdivision for the C. H. Youell estate to S. C. Garnett.

CORNCRACKERS MEET

The Corncracker 4-H Club of Constance met with H. R. Forkner, county agent and the leaders Friday afternoon at the Constance school. The school purchased a new piano for the school and was delivered a few minutes before the club met. The club members were the first to use the instrument.

Club projects and demonstrations were discussed. The Corncrackers will have two teams at Burlington Saturday May 23rd to compete with other teams for honors to represent Boone county at the state contest at Lexington in June. Ida Regenbogen and Louise Klassenner will demonstrate the "Free Hot Lunch in Rural Schools," and Omer and Gilbert Dolwick will demonstrate the germination of seed corn.

WALTON TRIMS RABBIT HASH 4 TO 1—HETIC MOUND DUEL BETWEEN BRADY AND GLENN

(By Hot Shot)

The Rabbit Hash nine from the vicinity of Hassenpheffer (or something) invaded the Walton Ball Park Saturday and proved to be anything but hash for the Walton nine as the results show.

Joe Brady was doing the casting for the Raboit Hashteam, and incidentally fine casting, but was opposed by Ace Glenn of Walton whose work was a shade better.

Glenn allowed five hits, walked, one caused five to churn the air while Brady gave out seven hits, two walks and sent seven Walton sluggers, back to whence they came carrying the timber.

Hacker Johnson, Walton rotund slugger who does quite a bit of left fielding turned in the finest defensive game of the day and had gathered two smashing hits.

Les Ryle, the boy who swings a wicked club was in the Rabbit Hash lineup and played good ball at first base. Ryle went hitless against Glenn's curve ball until the ninth inning when he shot one thru third for two bases.

Saturday the Petersburg sluggers headed by their slab artist, Boehler will visit the Walton Park to cross bats with the locals and a real game is anticipated.

An old fashioned surprise party honored Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Hickman Sunday. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fryman; Mr. and Mrs. Fryman, and parents; Mr. and Mrs. Joe Fryman, of Cynthiana; Dr. and Mrs. McCauley and family; Mr. and Mrs. Claude Stuart, and family, of Ludlow; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Light Hickman and daughter and Mr. Floyd Harrison, of Covington, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hickman and son of Burlington.

Those present were J. D. Lucas and wife, Stanley Lucas and wife, Broadus Lucas and wife, Emmett Baxter and wife, Albert Lucas and wife, Dr. E. F. Wolf and wife, Cecil Martin and wife, Mrs. Addie Hutchinson, Willford Stella Mae Lauretta and Harold Glenn Baxter, Alice Sayre and Archmarie Lucas and Mabel Foster Martin.

MAKES SHEEP RECORD

Mr. Ezra Aylor, Grant, Ky., R. D. has an exceptional sheep record this spring. He owns 54 ewes that dropped 109 lambs during February, March and April and has 101 living lambs to-date. We speak of a lamb and a quarter to the ewe as being good and a lamb and a half to the ewe as being good but two lambs per ewe for 54 ewes is exceptional. It represents not only good sheep management but good luck included.

Mr. Aylor not only believes in taking care of his lambs but is a strong believer in purebred sires. He used a purebred Hampshire and a purebred Shropshire ram to head his flock. The flock was treated for stomach worms and put on good fresh pasture before the breeding season last fall.

Agriculture is our chief industry and we are alwayt proud of the successe's our farmers make. In most cases we find that greatest success is the result of application of mind and body to the job or in other words a good deal of hard work. We rather expect that Mr. Aylor spent a good many late hours taking care of his flock at lambing time.

"Operator" Has New Toy; Recorder Has New Linotype

Howard better known as Jake Kirk, is the proud operator of a brand new Linotype machine. His old machine has been relegated to limbo, or where ever old Linotypes go after useful service on this earth, and Jake is the proud operator of the latest model that Mergenthaler Linotype Company puts out.

Jake has been operating all kinds of things that he graduated from doing chores around the house since he was sixteen.

This new Linotype that Jake won't allow the editor to play around, is the latest thing in typesetting according to Jake and the man who sold it to the editor. Anyhow Jake and the editor both claim that they are now fixed to set any kind of type in the fastest manner known to modern man.

Jake says that all of that work that had to be set by hand can now be fixed up by him on his new machine in faster time than any printer could put it in the stick. Jake says that this is going to be a big advantage to all of the Recorder's customers that want job work in double quick time.

At the end of his speech on the new machine Jake calls attention to the fact that after all the Recorder's increasing circulation demanded this new Linotype and that from now on there will never be any comas where words ought to be.

Anyhow after it is all over the Recorder freely admits that has one of the best typesetting machines in Kentucky.

SKED LOANS MADE AVAILABLE THRU FEDERAL DROUGHT RELIEF

Forty eight Boone County farmers secured a total of $6,386.20 from the $45,000,000 Federal farmer's seed loan according to C. L. Cropper, chairman of the county loan committee. The last date for receiving loans was April the 30 All but a few of the last applicants have received their loans in full for the purchasing of seed, fertelizer and feed for work stock.

The county agent was in touch with the county seed loan committee from time to time during the period the loans were being passed upon. The question of the law making available the seed loan was not left up to the committee but they were responsible for the proper supervision of all applications from Boone County. This job they did exceeding well and with out pay. Three months of time the required keeping informed on a large amount of ever changing information governing conditions on loans, the going over and figuring out with individual farmers what and how much of a loan could be secured, the attending of some times several miles apart, the securing of supplies, the careful keeping of records the mailing of seed loan checks received and the last but not least the careful filling out of a large number of reports for each individ- which would cause the report to be returned for correction.

The responsibilities of the counual applicant, a single mistake on ty committee and the careful way in which they discharged their duties is deserving a word of thanks, not by individual applicant but from the county as a whole. We wish to take advantage of this occasion with the cooperation of the county as a whole to thank Mr. C. L. Cropper, Burlington, Mr. Hubert Conner, Hebron, and Mr. Willford M. Rice, Walton, for their splendid patriotic service in this work.

GOING BACK TO THE FARM

We have been hearing for many years about the movement from the farm to the village and the city. Commentators who have let their imaginations roam have pictured a future civilization for America in which there will no rural life at all. Everybody will live in cities, and food will be produced by chemical processes in factories to which these city dwellers will go every day to work. Light and sunshine and ventilation and exercise and all of the other essentials of health will be provided, according to these dream-ers, by artificial means provided by engineers.

As a matter of fact, it turns out the tide of migration from the farm to the municipality has been slackening for many years, and now has definitely turned in the other direction. For the first time in twenty years the records of the United States Department of Agriculture show that there was a gain in farm population during 1930. There are 208,000 more people living on the farms than there were a year ago. One reason for this is that life on the farm is more comfortable and less strenuous than it used to be. The average farmer is no longer isolated from the world. Most farms today have electric light and power, access to communities in every direction over good roads, and automobiles with which to go to town to see the movies or take part in social gatherings. Most of the farmers who haven't already got radio sets will soon have them, while the telephone, now almost universal, brings the whole country within speaking distance.

The commercial farmer — the farmer who makes a business of farming—has been affected by the present wave of economic depression even more than the manufacturer. But the great majority of small farmers, with whom life on the farm is more a mode of living than it is an industry, are the people in America who have suffered least by reason of the economic slump. The drought, to be sure, has hit hundreds of thousands of these, but the drought hasn't been universal, and in the sections where nature has not interfered there seems to be little doubt that the greatest security and contentment to be found anywhere in the United States is found on the nation's one-family farms.

That sense of security, of having a piece of solid ground under one's feet from which at least a living can be obtained by whoever is willing to work, is doubtless the reason why, in a season of widespread industrial unemployment, there has been what amounts almost to a rush of migration back to the farm. And it seems to us that the unemployed industrial workers who have removed themselves and their families from the congested industrial centers to the healthful security of the farm have displayed a high degree of prudence and intelligence.

The Family Garden

TOMATOES, EGGPLANTS PEPPERS

(By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture)

These are so-called "warm" crops, and their setting time is now, or as soon as the ground has become definitely warm. Tomatoes are not so particular as the two other crops, but even in their instance, not much is gained by setting them too early.

FERTILIZING—All these are fruit crops and need a generous proportion of phosphorus in the fertilizer that is applied. Although manure is an excellent general fertilizer, it is prone to cause too much top-growth, and a shy setting of fruit, when used too fresh, and too generously. If manure is used, superphosphate should be added. It may be mixed directly with the manure at the rate of 50 pounds to the ton, or it may be used in the "hill" mixing a cupful in the soil, over a space 18 in. square. Better still, is to broadcast the phosphate at the rate of 1 pound to 20 square feet, and working it in. The best commercial fertilizer for these crops is 4-12-4, used in the "hill" or broadcast as explained above. 4-10-6 or 4-10-4 may be used instead.

SETTING—It is always best to have as much soil adhering to the roots as possible. If the plants are of the gardener's own growing, he may block out the soil around them with a large knife a few days before setting. In this way each of the plants will have a clump of earth sticking to the roots and the shock of transplanting will be negligible. If the plants are simply "pulled" and the roots are bare, a wise precaution is to dip them in soupy mud before they are set. A small amount of water should be poured in the hole setting as well. Both these practices serve as guaranty against excessive wilting, and will carry the plants for the few days new roots are starting. In setting, the soil should be level. The plants should be set no deeper than they stood in the bed. In the event the tomato plants are leggy they should be laid in trenches about 2 inches deep, and their tips turned up. Thus roots will form along the stem, and at the proper depth.

CULTIVATION — Because the roots of these crops lie so close to the surface, cultivation should always be shallow, the soil stirred just deeply enough to break the crust, and to uproot weeds as they start. The surface should be left level.

PESTS—Of insect pests the black fleabeetle is the worst. The most troublesome disease is the blight. In tomatoes and peppers most of the insect damage is done just at setting time, but on eggplants it continues almost all season. The blight becomes apparent at about blossoming time, and, unless it is checked, or better still, plants are destroyed.

Happily, one control will do for both these pests; it is 4-4-50 bordeaux mixture. Most convenient, is to use the prepared bordeaux, to which water is added, after the directions given on the package.

Spraying should be begun when the plants are set, and repeated at least twice at ten-day intervals and better still, four times. A spray anticipated, continues until the er should be used to insure complete covering of the foliage.

REPORT SHEEP LOSSES IN CENTRAL KENTUCK

Reports of sheep losses have been received at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky from nearly all counties in the central part of the state this spring. In most instances deaths have been among ewes suckling lambs, although a few lambs have died. Losses have ranged from 5 to 20 per cent of some flocks.

In some instances ewes are found dead in the morning, after apparently being well the night before. In other cases the animals are sick for several days, sometimes as long as two weeks. In one flock the symptoms were bloody diarrhea, bloody urine and bloody nasal discharge, with post-mortem examinations showing marked changes in the liver, kidneys and blood.

The loss of lambs has in some cases been the result of infection following castration and docking. Tetanus or lock jaw sometimes occurs in lambs that have been operated on. In the majority of the older sheep examined no evidence of infection has been found. Direct animal inoculation, using rabbits, guinea pigs and sheep, have all given negative results.

The department of animal pathology at the Experiment Station is making an exhaustive study of the trouble, but so far has not been able to isolate the microorganism or otherwise definitely discover the cause of the losses.

POULTRY DEMONSTRATION MEETINGS

Mr. J. E. Humphrey, field agent in poultry work from the College of Agriculture will be in Boone county Thursday June 4th to assist in a tour and field meeting in cooperation with the Boone county clean chick program.

The clean chick brooding program has been carried on this spring by ten leading Boone county poultrymen in cooperation with the county agent. Five steps are included in the complete program. The steps are: Clean brooder houses that have been properly cleaned and disinfected; third clean ground on which no poultry has run for the last two years; fourth, balanced rations; clean management including the cleaning of brooder houses at regular intervals and sanitary feeding and watering.

Figures on the number of chicks raised, the cost of production per chick and other important information on the above demonstrations will be given out at the above meetings. The place of the meetings will be announced at a later date.

One of the big fights at the next session of Congress will be over one question of increasing taxes. The Republican policy is to oppose any increase. President Hoover has repeated his belief that notwithstanding the inevitably large deficit present tax rates can be retained if Congress will only hold down appropriations to the coming budget recommendations. His position is supported generally by business men. The United States Chamber of Commerce now meeting at Atlantic City, has been advised by its committee on Federal taxation to work against any increase of the rates on either corporation or individual incomes.

Business and industry throughout the country are looking hopefully to the United States Chamber of Commerce for leadership. Never before has a session of this great commercial association attracted such widespread interest. The United States is in the midst of one of the most severe depressions the country has ever experienced. Virtually every one believes that the bottom has been reached, but readiness to make commitments toward rebuilding the Nation's industrial and commercial structure is not yet in evidence. Business men are waiting to hear the advice of this national organization, and their plans will, in large measure, be shaped in accordance with the consensus of opinion expressed in Atlantic City.

One of the outstanding events of May 1 was a favor done by President Hoover for Alfred E. Smith, his opponent in the 1928 campaign. At 10:30 o'clock Mr. Hoover went to the telegraph room of the White House executive offices and pressed a button which caused the doors of the Empire State Building, in New York, to swing open to the public for the first time. Former Governor Smith is an official in the organization which constructed the building.

It is hoped that by July 1, 1932, the latest Congress will have provided permanent Federal cooperation in safeguarding the health of the entire citizenship of the country, and will have discontinued the practice of penny-pinching where the health of the nation is at stake. The conference on child hygiene of the Conference of State and Provincial Health Authorities declared. A report presentedby the state health officer of Mississippi, as one of this outstanding sessions of the final session of the conference. "Think of what the price of one battleship would do for the promotion of public health' the report continued. "Battleships are meant to destroy life—public health to conserve it. Wouldn't it be wise and constructive to leave off a battleship, cruiser or submarine occasionally in the interest of the health of the people?"

The task of advancing the additional loans to World War veterans on their adjusted compensation certificates, as directed by Congress over President Hoover's veto is rapidly nearing completion, Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs said as he left the White House after a conference with the President recently. A total of $971,800,000 has been loaned to veterans.

THE VACNNT LOT

Ten years ago, in the midst of the depression of 1920-21, I made a talk before a thousand men, representing one of the country's basic industries.

For weeks they had heard nothing but bad news from their salesmen. Their only mail was cancellations. It was a tough assignment for a speaker.

I showed these hopelessg gentlemen a photograph of a vacant lot, a big corner, a couple of hundred feet square, in a very center of New York.

"To them: "Doesn't it strike you as strange that here, in the heart of the greatest city, where land is worth thousands of dollars a front foot, there should be this vacant lot?"

They were only mildly interested, but I took a deep breath and ploughed ahead.

"I'll tell you why that lot is vacant," I continued. "It was part of a farm. Just a hundred years ago the farmer died; his will gave definite instructions to his heirs. They were at liberty to do as they wished with his other property, but this particular corner of his favorite pasture was to remain forever unencumbered with buildings, a resting place for his and the bones of his wife.

"Stop and think what that means," I said to my down-hearted audience. "Only a hundred years ago....only a little more than one life-time, this island was farms. Moreover, the people who lived on it, a city of six million people.

"Yet you men sit here in the midst of it and assume that because business has slowed up a little America is never going to buy any more shoes, any more houses, any more automobiles. Don't be like the owner of that farm. The country which was pastures only three generations ago is going to step ahead. This is the time to make plans for a bigger future."

They looked at me as much as to say: "Here is a bright young man trying his best to cheer us up. But, of course, he doesn't know what he is talking about".

The other day, by a curious coincidence, I was invited to address the same convention, in the same hotel. I made the same speech. through my hat ten years ago," I said to them. "But just look at the last ten years. Every man in this room has done more business than he would have dreamed possible in 1920."

I told them about the vacant lot again. They looked impressed and clapped their hands. But I suspect that most of them still think that I was talking thru my hat.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

BLOOD PRESSURE

All people have "blood-pressure" of one sort or another, "high" "low" or "normal." Each "normal" pressure is peculiar to the individual. It is a gross error to believe that one's normal blood-pressure is 100 plus the age in years. A man may be 75, he should not have a pressure of 175, if his arteries are in first-class condition.

If you desire to know a little more than your neighbor, then learn that correct readings of blood-pressure are "systolic" and "diastolic." Because the contraction of the heart, to force the blood trough the body, is called its systole; when the heart dilates, to receive the returning blood, it is said to be in diastole; and this "diastolic pressure" is, to me, fully as important for the patient as the systolic pressure.

This diastolic pressure the heart must bear every second of the time the systolic force is exerted at each pulse beat, and gives an interval for the heart-muscle to rest between beats. I feel safe in saying that a high diastolic pressure can alarm me quite as much if not more than a high systolic; the patient with a diastolic of 120 or more, must get it down, or he will not live much over two years, for, as said before, the heart cannot stand that constant burden any longer than that, as a rule.

If you have an abnormal blood-pressure, it should send you to your physician at once; stay by his advice until HE SAYS you are well enough to navigate for yourself. Many people stop taking advice as soon as they get to feeling better—they are so busy you know; and, they frequently make the mistake of their lives by so doing.

My experience has been that kidney disease sends one's pressure up very postively, but there are other causes than kidneys—and these are easier remedied. Your physician will set you right as to your condition. Medical "cults" are not safe to be trusted in conditions involving blood-pressure.

TRIPS TO JUNIOR 4-H CLUB WEEK

Three Scholarships which provide for tuition to Junior 4-H Club Week at the University of Kentucky, June 8-13 is being offered to one boy or girl from each of Kenton, Boone and Campbell counties.

The selection of the winners of the Scholarships will be determined by a committee composed of the County Extension Agents and the County Club Committee.

This is the third year that the Early & Daniel Company, millers of Tuxedo Feeds, has given scholarships. Last year the winners were Dorothy Connor, Boone County and Vernon Voss, Kenton County.

In 1929 the Scholarships were won by Francis Siekman of Boone County for being the Health Champion and Helen Grant for being the Boone County Style Show Champion in 4-H Clothing Work. Edith M. Finnell was also a winner of a trip to Junior Week at the University of Kentucky.

THE PARABLE OF THE POUNDS

Luke 19:11-26

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

A good story with a real point is effective in its teachings. Jesus often made use of a parable to drive home the truth. A parable can be defined as "An earthly story with a heavenly meaning." This time it is about a man of means who went away to receive an additional inheritance. Before leaving he handed over a pound, about $17 in value, to each of ten servants, and told them to make use of the money until he returned. It was mutually understood that there would be an accounting at that time. A pound then represented pay for 100 days of unskilled labor, and was an amount to command real attention.

We may idle time away or be busy meanwhile, but at last the hour comes when we must face the auditor. When the nobleman returned from the far country he asked for an accounting from the ten who had been tested by their use of the revolving fund. All do not have the same ability and the equal results ought not to be expected. A bit of understanding and sympathy would help the plodder who may be equally faithful as the one who can produce the larger result. The first man presents ten pounds as the result of his trading and is heartily commended for his ability. The next man declares that his stewardship resulted in a gain of five additional pounds, and he too is praised.

The last man to meet the auditor comes with excuses only as he returns the original pound without any increment. Fear is the reason that he gives for the failure even attempt to accomplish anything. His lack of energy shows that he is unworthy of any advancement and he is further distressed by utter condemnation.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

Cream Scouffle

Make a thick cream sauce of two small tablespoons each of butter and flour and one cup ice cream. Stir while cooking. Cool, and add two tablespoons of melted butter and the yolks of five eggs beaten with two tablespoons of sugar and flavored with vanilla. Fold in the stiffly beaten whites of six eggs, turn into a buttered mould, tie a sheet of buttered paper over the top, and set the mould in a pan of boiling water to reach three-fourths its height. Simmer slowly for forty-five minutes, turn out on a hot dish, and serve immediately.

• • • • • •

Custard Souffle

Make a cream sauce of two small tablespoons each of butter and flour and one cup of milk. Stir while cooking. Take from the fire, add the yolks of four eggs beaten with five tablespoons of sugar and a few drops of vanilla. Cool, fold in the stiffly beaten whites, turn into a buttered baking dish, and bake for twenty minutes in a moderate oven.

• • • • • •

Beef Hash

Measure chopped beef and add an equal amount of chopped cold cooked potatoes. Season with salt, pepper and juice from half a small onion. Melt a tablespoon of butter in a frying pan. Add the mixture with water enough to make it soft. Cover the pan and cook slowly until a crust has formed. Turn like an omelet on a platter.

• • • • • •

Hot Chocolate Sauce

In a porcelain saucepan boil together one cup of water and a half cup of granulated sugar for five minutes and then stir in slowly five tablespoons of grated chocolate that has been dissolved in a tablespoon of rich milk or thin cream. Stir until thick and very smooth, remove from the fire, add vanilla flavoring to taste, beat thoroughly and serve hot on vanilla ice cream or cottage pudding.

L. & N. SCHOLARSHIPS AWARDED AT 4-H CLUBS

The awarding of two full 4-H Club scholarships to Junior Week, University of Kentucky, June 8th to 13th by the Louisville & Nashville Railroad was officially announced the past week according to County Agent H. R. Forkner.

The L. & N. Railroad in the past has been one of the best cooperators in 4-H club work. The receiving of the scholarship awards is greatly appreciated by Boone-co., 4-H club members.

The scholarships will be divided equally between the winning Farm Practice demonstration teams selected at the county contest held at Burlington, Saturday, May the 23rd.

Stabilization Of Textile Industry Initiated At White House

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

Cooprative action in the cotton textile industry, initiated at a White House conference in January, 1930, has resulted in the stabilization of employment and a agreement to end night work for women and children, President Hoover was informed in a letter from the president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, Inc. Despite the depression and without sacrificing its competitive character, the industry has made progress thru the development of sound policies with respect to operation and merchandising. A greater uniformity of running time throughout the industry has been obtained, and a more definite knowledge acquired of production, stocks and distribution.

It was announced at the White House that Colonel Arthur Woods, chairman of President Hoover's emergency committee for employment, who will go to Europe for a study of unemployment insurance methods developed abroad will retain the chairmanship, leaving the active work to the vice-chairman. Colonel Woods was asked if he planned to resume active direction of the work of the committee upon his return and replied that if conditions of employment at that time were such that his assistance were needed he would.

Declaring that as a result of sacrifices made at the London Naval Conference, the United States and Japan, while retaining fleets guaranteeing security, had removed all clouds over the Pacific, Secretary Stimson felicitated Emperor Hirchito of Japan in a transpacific radio bzroadcast in celebration of the monarch's thirtieth birthday. Baron Shidehara, Foreign Minister of Japanfrom Tokyo, said that Japan was glad to participate in the work of naval disarament and to be a signatory to the Kellogg-Briand peace compact. Mr. Stimson expressed pleasure over the visit to this country of Prince and Princess Takamatsu and declared that "the ocean no longer separates, but rather unites Japan and the United States." Baron Shidehara echoed these sentiments, asserting that America is our next-door neighbor.

It is understood that the remarks of the former President Calvin Coolidge, with respect to the present American policy in Nicaragua: "We want her to walk alone, not always lean on us. Her government should deal with bandits. Secretary Stimson has consistently interpreted his Nicaraguan program as seeking to bring a sense of responsibility to the local government and to train it to handle all its own affairs in an orderly manner.

Senator Dickinson, of Iowa, the chairman of the Advisory Committee of the Republican National Committee, departed to open a campaign publicity bureau in Des Moines. Senator Dickinson's task is to answer Democratic charges that the Hoover Administration has not done as much as it should for the farmer. The Iowan has convincing arguments with him designed to prove to any skeptics he may meet that the Administration has provided greater market stability and ample relief.

With the final sessions concluded the majority of the delegates to tionalthe thirty-ninth associate council of the National Society, U. S. Daughters of 1812, left the city for their homes. Among the resolutions passed was one urging the members to continue their fight against Communism or any forces seeking to undermine this Government.

The White House has three distinguished visitors. They were King Prajodhika of Siam, the first absolute monarch ever to be received there, his Queen, Rambia Barni, and Bryan Untedt, the schoolboy of 13 who was the hero of the recent Colorado blizzard. The lad had just ended a half-hour's interview with the President when King Prajadipok and his Queen arrived. With abundant ceremony, counter-balanced by a lack of pomp, the King and Queen of Siam received a word of welcome from all leading officials of of the American Government and diplomats from foreign lands.

The most important feature of the visit of their Majesties to this country, socially and internationally speaking, was the dinner at the White House with the President and Mrs. Hoover as hosts. The formality attending the event preceding the dinner was a reversal of all such ceremonies taking place in the mansion and will become a precedent for future events of the kind. The President and Mrs. Hoover met their royal guests in the bed room, the President and the King, Mrs. Hoover and the Queen, walking together along the red corridor to the east room where, following the usual custom, the President and Mrs. Hoover made the round of the room presenting their guests of his majesty King Prahipok and Queen Rambai Barni. The King and Queen adopted the American custom of handshaking. The King wore the regulation evening dress, with his decorations giving it a mark of distinction, while the Queen was truly regal in her gown of gold brocade fashioned simply to fit her figure. Attached to the sumptuous gown were the necklace of emeralds and the jeweled comb in her sleek black hair, the gems being of unusual size and brilliancy.

The shy, sun-tanned, fair-headed schoolboy of 13 shared places with the king and queen in the honors at the capital as President Hoover followed out his determination to "get acquainted" with Bryan. Young Untiedt arriving in Washington, was met at the station by a White House automobile, just as were the King and Queen of Siam, was received at the White House, had luncheon with the President, and what is more, was invited to spend two days and a night as the President's personal guest. He went to sleep in the Blue Room of the White House, where many famous guests have stayed. The boy hero also had the rare privilege of watching his host, and members of the so-called"medicine ball cabinet' play volley ball in the rear grounds and later to sit at breakfast with the President.

With a broken gasoline line pouring raw fuel into her face and through the plane, Mrs. Opal Logan Kunz of New York, noted woman flyer and organizer of the Betsy Ross Corps, emergency reserve corps of woman pilots exhibited herself by a masterly exhibition of piloting skill, coolness and courage at Washington-Hoover Airport. She landed, half blinded, tearing down 40 feet of fence but climbed out without a scratch, calmer and more collected than any of the observers of the accident. Mrs. Kunz was flying here from Ntw York, in connection with the establishment of the Betsy Ross Corps as a governmental war reserve organization.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Barney Oldfield, America's speed trademark, will be the official starter for the International 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Oldfield, aging and out of competition since 1916, talked a comeback for awhile but decided against anything more active than waving the flags in the coming race.

Barney will have to discard his equally famous cigar during the race this year. The starter's cage is a tiny stand overhanging the track at the start and finish line. Under it the speed cars flash. Officials have ruled that a spark from Oldfield's cigar might start a fire.

Oldfield is one of the really historical characters of the great speed sport. Thousands of speed fans of yesteryear, who remember his daring on the track, will be on hand this year to see their speed idol in his more prosaic but nevertheless important task of handling the flags.

Race Car Burning Fuel Oil Instead of Gasoline Entered at Indianapolis

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—One of the outstanding sensations of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30, will be a car of Diesel construction—burning as fuel crude oil instead of gasoline.

It is a Cummins Diesel Special, entered by Clessie Cummins, a young engineer from Columbus, Ind. The car recently attained a speed of 100.75 miles an hour over the sands of Daytona Beach, Florida. It will be faster in the Indianapolis run, it is declared.

No driver has been named for this mount which will race through 500-miles at a total cost of $2.55 for fuel and lubricating oil.

Although Indianapolis Auto Race Will Not Be Broadcast First Four Hours, Railroads Reduce Fares For Fans Who Desire To Go

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Although there will be no radio broadcast of the first four hours of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30, when the greatest group of speed stars ever assembled compete for $100,000 in prize money, all railroads throughout the Central States have made an attractive excursion rate for race fans who will attend the big race classic.

The round trip fare on all railroads—to and from Indianapolis—will be only seventy-five percent of the usual one way fare.

Every ticket agent for every railroad is an authorized ticket salesman for seats for the 500-mile race, it also is announced. Tickets ordered from any ticket agent are immediately filled in Indianapolis and sent direct by registered mail to the purchaser.

The excursion area extends east on all lines to Pittsburg and Buffalo and west to Chicago, St. Louis and Peoria.

The loss of the steamship Titanic in 1912 is an answer to those who say that the age of chivalry is past. Seventy-four per cent of the women were saved, while only 20 per cent of the men were rescued. Of the crew only 192 out of 885 survived.

Restoring Old Manuscript

When writing on old manuscripts has become faded and illegible it can frequently be restored by the following method: Lay the paper as flat as possible and dampen it evenly with clean cold water. Brush over the writing with a flat camel's-hair brush dipped in a solution of sulphide of ammonia, then the writing will immediately appear plain and readable. The effect on parchment is usually of a lasting nature, but fresh applications are necessary on ordinary writing paper.

Legend of Shetland Knitters

A curious legend is connected with Shetland wool. Over three centuries ago a Spanish galleon was wrecked on the Shetland Isles when the Spanish armada was routed. The sailors who escaped taught the natives to make dyes from roots they found on the islands, which resembled those which grew in Spain. Few people know that the lovely colors of a Shetland pullover are a memorial of the armada.

DEVON

There will be a congregational meeting of the Ebenezer Lutheran church and Ladies Aid members at the home of J. B. Dixon on Sunday afternoon May 17th.

The X-I-All Club met at Florence school Thursday for their April meeting. There were twenty-seven members present. Several members gave reports on children and other activities. Mr. Forkner gave an interesting talk on chickens and their diseases. One new member, Jean Luts, joined the club promising to do good work.

Plans were made for the regular camping trip which will be at Camp Ernst August 11 to 15. Motion was made that we adjourn and was seconded by Gregory Reesor.

WALTON FEED MILLS

Where Quality Tells and Price Sells

LAMBS! LAMBS! LAMBS!

Everywhere you go in the country you see lambs and more lambs; which means we will have one of the largest crop of lambs in years. According to the Farm Relief Theory; the lamb raisers should curtail production; with which we do not agree. We say, "Let every farmer produce all he can that his farm is adapted to." Supply and demand will regulate the price and should regulate production. The way to win is to make the increase of lambs greater than the decrease in price; which puts more dollars in the country and gives the consumer cheaper lamb meat, who is hardly ever considered. In reply to the many inquiries about the prospective price of lambs, will say, "with the large supply, we are bound to have low prices," the best thing for the lamb raisers to do, is to get lambs fat, with weight of around 70 to 75 pounds; do not send in common; light weights, they will sell cheap. Good shipping lambs should start off at around $12.00 and may drop to $8.00.

When we say this, it does not mean that we will not try hard to get more; and will make our best fight to hold prices up, as are on the selling side. THE BIG KILLERS HAVE AGREED TO GIVE OUR MARKET THE PREFERENCE. If they do, we will have more orders than we have had for a good many years. If the raisers will make their lambs good and send them to this market, there is no reason why we cannot make this THE LAMB CENTER. It should be! as we are one day nearer the Eastern killing plants. Cincinnati is killing and consuming more lambs, which will help our market. Our best advice is to market your lambs as soon as they have good flesh and weight. It is useless to tell you they will dock heavy buck lambs in price, which you may expect. In connection with this will give you the following INDISPUTABLE FACTS which some of our customers call OUR LAMB STORY, saying, "It has done them good and saved them money as well as all the lamb raisers that come to the Cincinnati Market by truck 3 lbs., dock. Lambs selling at 10 to 12 cents is a saving of 30 to 36 cents per head. Multiply this by the thousands of lambs that come to Cincinnati and you will realize the thousands of dollars saved to lamb producers. In other words we have saved everyone the 25 cents commission, half or more of the yardage, how does this compare with the 25 per cent rebate of 6½ cents per lamb that we hear so much about? Some may say that NORRIS, BROCK CO., are blowing their horn, no we are not blowing our horn, just stating facts that we have fought for, for many years. We do not expect to handle all the truck lambs that come to Cincinnati, nor do we expect to put anyone out of business, and will leave the decision up to the lamb raisers (who are the judge and jury) who has fought hardest for their interests. If we merit your business we will appreciate same and render you our best SERVICE. We are making the same fight on cattle, calves & hogs as sheep and lambs to hold-up prices. WE ARE BULLS NOT BEARS ON THE MARKET.

NORRIS-BROCK CO.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas, it has pleased Almighty God in his infinite wisdom to call from earthly labors to the great beyond our Esteemed Brother Robert A. Brady, who departed this life March 12th, 1931. Therefore be it

Resolved, that the Post Office Department has lost a faithful employee, the community an honorable and highly respected citizen, his church a faithful member, our Rural Letter Carrier's Association a loyal member, and the family a kind, devoted and loving husband and father. Therefore be it further

Resolved that we, the members of the Northern Kentucky Rural Letter Carrier's Association cherish his memory and extend our sympathy to his loved ones, and their grief will be a part of ours and may God bless them. Be it further

Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this Association, and a copy sent to the family, and a copy sent to the local press for publication.

Double-Thumbed People in Old Spanish Village

A strange village, Talasnales, has been discovered in the mountains of Spain, says Capper's Weekly.

The strangeness of this hamlet lies in the fact that most of its people have six-fingered hands, two thumbs on each one. Few of the villagers ever have reached the outside world because the mountain trails are impassable to wheeled vehicles. So the world knew nothing about them until recently. Intermarriage caused by extreme isolation is believed by some anthropologists to be the cause of the double thumbs. Other scientists call attention to the fact that since most of the men work in stone quarries and have done so for generations their labor has tended to broaden their thumbs until finally Mother Nature produced an extra member.

The villagers do not regard their double thumbs as a deformity but consider them a mark of distinction. While a comparatively simple operation would remove the extra thumb of any child and give it a normal hand, the villagers violently object to any such suggestion.

Cholera Plague Buried in Scotch Churchyard?

The mysterious fog malady which caused so many deaths in Belgium recalls the experience of the Highlands when struck by cholera in 1832. The dread disease visited Inverness, Nairn, the Black Isle, Easter Ross, and Dingwall, and swept through the country with devastating results, whole families being wiped out. Rows of cottages were put on fire and burned to the ground. Tradition runs that the plague was brought to the Cromarty firth by a vessel, and that it flew slowly along the ground in the shape of a little yellow cloud. When it arrived at Nigg one of the inhabitants with an immense bag of linen approached the cloud cautiously and succeeded in enclosing the whole of it in the bag. He then wrapped it up carefully and secured it with pin after pin, and buried it in the Nigg churchyard. The spot is marked by a rude undressed stone, near which the grave digger never ventures to open a grave.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Saved by a Miracle

As a New York-Chicago train was speeding along the railway it encountered a great storm of wind and rain. The stoker persuaded the driver to stop the train, for he insisted he had seen a woman in black dancing before the engine. With lantern in hand, the driver left the locomotive and walked along the line to Rock creek. To his dismay, he found that the bridge had been washed away by the overflowing river. When he returned something prompted him to examine the lamp of the engine. He found imprisoned in it an insect, vainly trying to escape. The shadow of the insect magnified by the glass and reflected in the rainy air, had all the appearance of a dancing figure!

Scarlet From Persia

"Few of us know that we owe our most vivid hue—scarlet—to Persia, says a writer in the Manchester (England) Guardian. "Scarlet is the Persian 'saqulat,' and is believed to have been applied to have been applied first of all to cloth of that color imported into Europe from Persia. Easterners knew how to produce scarlet some 2,000 years ago, obviously, or we should not have had the Biblical phrase 'Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.'

"In the East Christ once was regarded as the patron of dyers, even by followers of Mohammed, and the Persians, who were skilled textile colorists centuries before Manchester came into being, knew a dye-house as 'Christ's workshop' as late as the Seventeenth century."

"Catch" Problem

The "banker's problem," the one that leaves a dollar in the bank after one has made several withdrawals and has finally taken out the deposit, is somewhat after this style: "A person deposits $50, then makes a withdrawal of $20, leaving a balance of $30; a withdrawal of $15, leaving a balance of $15; a withdrawal $9, leaving a balance of $6, and finally a withdrawal of $6, leaving no balance. Total of these balances is $51, which is $1 more than was deposited." The answer to this is that there is no reason why the total of balances should equal the total deposits, but the final balance plus the total of withdrawals must equal the total deposits.

"Cloth-Yard" Shafts

The Archers company of Pinehurst, N. C., says that toxophilites for many years have accepted 28 inches as being the length of the cloth-yard shaft. Elmer's "Archery" says: "Arrows for men are standardized, and have been for time out of mind, at 28 inches. That is the real length of the 'cloth-yard shaft' of the old English ballads because the Flemish weavers brought over the continental cloth-yard of 27 inches, and it was so called to distinguish it from the standard yard of 36 inches which survives today. With the inch-long pile added to it the cloth-yard shaft thus became a 28-inch."

Camels Find Refuge in Swampy Spanish Plain

Spain may pass through troublous times but there is one community in that country which is not likely to be disturbed whatever happens. This is the strange colony of wild camels which have made a home for themselves in the lower reaches of the Guadalquivir river. Many years ago an attempt was made to introduce camels for agricultural work in southern Spain. The plan was not a success, and those camels which did not die strayed off to fend for themselves. A few of them found a retreat in the vast alluvial plain through which the sluggish stream of the river winds its way to the Gulf of Cadiz.

One could hardly imagine a situation more unlike that to which a camel normally is accustomed. The land is largely water-logged and covered with a dense growth of reeds and rushes many feet in height. From the human point of view, the district is extremely unhealthy, although animal life flourishes.

At the least sign of danger the animals retreat to the swamps, where the ground is so soft that it is impossible for a man to follow. Of course, the broad feet of the camel, which help the creature to walk on loose sand, have also stood it in good stead in these marshes, where a horse or a cow certainly would never be able to travel safely.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Diggers Uncover Grave of Bronze-Age Chieftain

The 4,000-year-old grave of a Bronze age chieftain is among the many interesting relics discovered in the course of digging pits for brick works at Sedlabinitz, near Vienna. Twenty-one different caches, graves and living caves from the Second century, B. C., have been laid bare. The chieftain's grave has been reconstructed as it was first discovered and placed on exhibition in the Lower Austrian museum in Vienna. It contains two skeletons lying face upwards, stretched out close together, in contrast to the skeletons of ordinary tribesmen found in 11 other graves. These were placed in a crouching position, the legs being drawn up and bound in chains weighted with stones, owing to the fear of the resurrection of the bodies. The second body in the grave was doubtless that of the chief's wife, believed to have been buried alive.

He Had His Reason

He is cook on a schooner. Very timidly we poked our head inside the door. He was chopping some meat for hash.

"Come in," he said in broad Hungarianese. We went in. His name is Charley.

"How long have you been a cook, Charley?"

"Fifty year."

We whistled with amazement.

"How old are you, Charley?"

"Sixty-eight."

Fifty years a cook. Apparently the height of ambitionlessness.

We left him to interview the captain.

"Charley, back there—why does he stick to cooking?"

Taciturnly the captain replied:

"Darn good reason—cook gets $80 a month, sailor get $60."—Philadelphia Record.

Penguins Prefer Ice

When eight penguins arrived recently in Europe to be transferred to a Continental zoo, they caused great trouble because they found the climate too warm. The penguin, whose home is in the Antarctic, loves cold weather, and officials tried to devise a means of keeping them cool. All plans failed until a big "ice box" was built for them, and a "house" of heavy planks, with a roof of heat-resisting tar paper, was erected in the box. Each day, 600 pounds of ice, cut in layers, was spread on the floor, and then the birds were quite happy. They slept on the ice—standing up, as is their way! Shrubs and greens surround the "house," and there was a lake where the birds could satisfy their natural love for water.

Study of Languages Old

It is a great error to think that schools for foreign languages are a modern innovation. In almost prehistoric times, some 4,000 years ago, such a school existed on the shores of the eastern Mediterranean, the cross-roads between Asia, Europe and Africa. As many as six languages considered modern by the students of the Fifteenth century B. C. were taught in the university of a town called Zapuna, which was unearthed by two French archeologists. Clay tablets, which served as school books to the philologists of ancient times, and one of the world's first dictionaries, were among the outstanding finds made.

American Postal History

Samuel Osgood was the first postmaster general, appointed by Washington in 1789, after the Constitution was adopted. The first postmaster general in America, however, was Andrew Hamilton, appointed in Colonial days, in 1691. He was succeeded by his son, John Hamilton. Following him, there were four postmasters general, then in 1753 the American colonies were divided into two postal districts, with a postmaster general for each. Benjamin Franklin served as one of these from 1753 to 1774. In July, 1775, the Continental congress made Franklin again postmaster general, and he served until the following year.

China's Right to Title of "Mother of Gardens"

The late Ernest H. Wilson, who was undoubtedly the world's foremost authority on plant introductions from China and keeper of the Arnold arboretum of Harvard university, remarks that "China is, indeed, the Mother of Gardens, for of the countries to which our gardens are the most deeply indebted she holds the foremost place."

There is hardly a garden in this country or Europe that is not indebted to China for the plants that embellish it. The forsythia, the Yulan magnolias, the peonies, the parents of our modern roses, be they hybrid tea, rambler or polyantha; many of the azaleas and primroses, peaches, oranges, lemons and grapefruit have been brought to us from China.

The Portuguese reached China in 1516 and took back with them to their settlements in India the sweet orange, which was later introduced into Portugal. Mr. Wilson says that, so far as he has been able to discover, this was the first plant taken to Europe. From that time to the present era there has been a constant flow of new plant introductions from the East to Europe and America.—New York Herald Tribune.

"Latah" Sufferers Made Victims of Odd Pranks

An extraordinary disease called latah is prevalent in the Malay states, a contributor informs the Sydney Bulletin. To anyone who has never seen latah before, the gesticulations of the sufferers appear at first funny or offensive, until it is explained that a person afflicted with it will, if suddenly startled, fall into a hypnotic state and imitate the gesture of anything in sight. For instance, an old woman suddenly startled by a bicycle bell will violently imitate the pedaling of a cyclist until she falls down exhausted.

That the victims make these movements entirely against their will is evident when one considers the pranks that are played on well-known latahs. They have been known to jump off a lugger in shark-infested waters, drop trays of drinks and crow like a rooster at a sharp command. What causes latah is unknown; there is a theory that it is associated with betel-nut chewing.

American Cliff Dwellers

Cliff dwellers, although of broader application, means in America that prehistoric race that built the houses and villages whose ruins are found in the southwestern part of the United States and especially in the valley of the Rio San Juan and its tributaries. This river rises in the extreme southwestern corner of Colorado, and flows westward along the borders of adjoining states to a junction with the Rio Colorado. As to the origin of these vanished cliff dwellers nothing is known, but it is evident that centuries ago these valleys were occupied by a considerable, sedentary population, who had fixed homes and cultivated fields for crops of corn, beans, gourds and probably other things, by means of extensive systems of irrigation. They made pottery, cloth, baskets, etc., and stone implements, but nothing metallic.

Origin of Word "Dogma"

Contrary to common belief, "dogma" is not originally a word of authority, nor is it connected with "doctrine." "Doctrine" comes from the Latin "docere," "to teach"; "dogma" from the Greek "dokein," "to seem," whose nearest relation in Latin is "decet," "it is seemly," the ancestor of our "decent." "Dogma" at first therefore meant "that which seems to one," or "an opinion." But when the early Christian councils met to discuss the essentials of the faith, what they sought were the "opinions" held in common by all orthodox bishops. These were called "dogmas"; but since they represented the agreement of so weighty a concourse, the word soon acquired the sense of authoritative truth.

Fortune in Croquet Box

A manuscript worth hundreds of dollars a page was found in the lumber room of an English castle.

One summer's day the guests of Lord Talbot de Malahide decided to play croquet and sent servants to fetch the mallets and hoops from their box in an old lumber room. The servants opened a box and, instead of mallets, found a mass of musty crumbling papers yellow with age.

These proved to be the manuscript writings of James Boswell, the great-great-grandfather of Lord Talbot, and among them were 107 pages of his famous Life of Johnson. Only 15 pages of this manuscript had been found before, and their owner was offered $75,000 for them.

Score One for Henry VIII

A lady's position in the Fifteenth century wasn't particularly an agreeable one considering the fact that she sat in the balcony merely as a spectator at the royal feasts which her lord gave. Henry VIII, however, was a considerate old fellow, and allowed the fair sex to enjoy the elegant food. His queen, Catherine, presided at the head of one table, and he at another. "The party being assembled, and the king and queen seated in their chairs of state, it was the custom to begin the ceremonial of royal banquets by presenting thispeeres and wefers to the sovereign and his consort."—Kansas City Star.

Human Ear's Limitation

The human ear is formed to receive only certain sounds and the highest sounds we can hear are those of 70,000 air vibrations to the second.

BUILD MILK HOUSES

Dairymen in all sections of the county have been busy the last few weeks building milk houses to conform to city regulations for the shipping of whole milk. They were recently notified that if these houses were not built by a certain date their milk would not be accepted. While the ever changing city regulations governing the handling of our milk often work hardships they at the same time are helping to build up our dairy industry.

We build milk houses, have our cows T. B. tested, build concrete floors in our barns, cool our milk and many other things to be allowed to ship milk. These practices are put in force by health laws. We profit by them and at the same time would not practice them unless forced to do so by enforcement regulations.

The use of proven herd sires to build up our herds, the feeding of of good pastures for summer feeding and plenty of good legume hay for winter feeding, the keeping of an abortion free herd, the keeping of production; and cost of production records on the individual cows in the herd and many other things that would lower the cost of production per 100 pounds of milk and increase the number of 100 pounds of milk per cow for sale, would equally improve and build up our dairy industry. Many dairymen do not practice these regulations because there is no law other than pride, industry and good business to enforce them.

The whole milk industry in this county has expanded during the past year and during a period of large surpluse's and lower prices. The county is particularly adapted to the production of good milk of high quality. If we follow the road of some of the older milk centers we must prepare to give greater consideration to the higher efficiency per cow and the lower cost of production per unit.

Washington Not Hailed as "Second Cincinnatus"

George Washington has sometimes been called "the second Cincinnatus" in allusion to his having been called to the Presidency from his plantation at Mount Vernon, to which he retired after having voluntarily resigned his commission as commander in chief of the army. But it was William Henry Harrison, who was called from his estate at North Bend, on the Ohio river, to be the ninth President of the United States, who was termed "the Cincinnatus of the West."

In both of these instances the allusion is to the story of the Roman historian, Livy, relating that in the year 458 B. C., when the Aequi and Volsci had shut up the Roman consul, Lucius Minucius, and his army in a defile, and, Rome itself being in great danger, the Roman senate, in alarm, had made Lucius Quintius Cincinnatus dictator, the messengers sent to inform him of his appointment, found him at the plow. Modern investigators, however, have pronounced the most attractive parts of the story fiction.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dense Sulphurous Fog Precursor of Plague

In his "Scenes and Legends," Hugh Miller relates that "one night in the month of August, 1634, a cold east wind, accompanied by a dense sulphurous fog, passed over the country, and the half-filled corn was struck with mildew. It shrank and whitened in the sun, till the fields seemed as if sprinkled with flour, and where the fog had remained longest—for in some places it stood up like a chain of hills during the greater part of the night—the more disastrous were its effects." In November, a pestilence broke out, when many of the people were seized by "strange fevers, and sore fluxes of a most infectious nature." In the parish of West Calder, out of 900 persons 300 were swept away, and in a little village called the Craigs, inhabited by only six or eight families, there were 30 corpses in the space of a few days.—London Mail.

Air Scout's Pledge

The oath of the Air Scouts is as follows: "I am an Air Scout! I am living to the best of my ability the Scout oath and law. I believe in the slogan 'Safety in the Air.' I know that a healthy mind and body are the greatest factors of airworthiness. I shall strive to further aviation by applying the principles of scouting in all matters pertaining to flying. I shall always remember that a good flyer is an efficient flyer, and that efficiency comes through application. I will never forget that an Air Scout is first, last and always a Boy Scout, that he practices self-control, is a clear thinker, is cool-headed, a student of aviation and has respect for experience."

Airplanes and Birds

It has been asked, "Why can't airplanes be made to fly as the bird flies?" La Technique Aeronautique says: "It is well known that the primary feathers of a bird's wing are distinctly separated while in flapping flight. Tests made on models simulating this construction showed that the lift increased three times, and drag increased nine times. One of the most important assets of the bird's wing is its flexibility and control—a condition exceedingly difficult to copy mechanically. Many scientists are studying the flight of birds to find any hitherto overlooked details of nature's technique that will help man in mechanical flying. When inventors produce a material that has the strength, weight ratio of feathers and the hollow bones of birds with an engine which has the efficiency of a bird's digestive system and muscles, it will then be easy to build an airplane as safe as a bird."—Washington Star.

"Duce's" Greeting to America

The National Broadcasting company says that the first international program ever broadcast from Italy to the United States was staged on January 1, 1931, when Premier Benito Mussolini, speaking from Fascist headquarters in Rome, sent his New Year greeting to America through coast-to-coast networks. This was the first program ever heard in this country originating on the Italian mainland. Twice before, however, listeners had heard programs from Italian waters—from the yacht of Senators Guglielmo Marconi, the father of radio, anchored off the coast of the peninsula.

Keep Up Old Custom

It is significant that, although in the country, owing no doubt to stress of circumstances, many old customs have died out, in London ceremonies, distantly connected with them still linger. For instance, farmers once gave their laborers the traditional "Plow Monday Supper" to celebrate the beginning of another year's plowing.

It would be hard to find a farm where the custom is still kept up, but the lord mayor keeps the festival by giving a Plow Monday dinner to all the officials of the city corporation.—London Morning Post.

Happiness

Joy is a condition of the mind and heart, not a circumstance of environment. It is something we create, not a gift from the world. The real secret of happiness is not in doing what one likes, but in liking what one does.—Grit.

Timid Wife's Adventure Just Before the Dawn

One of those wives who hate the newspaper business because her journalist husband gets home at 3 o'clock in the morning, was recently given good reason to kick.

Of a timid nature, she became thoroughly alarmed early one morning when she suddenly awakened, heard a noise in the house, called to her husband and got no response.

Deciding the long-feared burglar had arrived at last, she clutched her two-year-old son under her arm and fled, clad only in her nightie, across the roof into the open bedroom window of her neighbor's twin house.

She explained the situation to her neighbors. When they had calmed her down a bit she decided to be real brave and call her home on the telephone.

A strange, gruff voice answered and she was more certain than ever that a burglar was in her home. Then she learned she had got a wrong number and tried again.

Her husband answered this time.

Imagine his surprise to hear the voice of his wife whom he had every reason to believe was safely tucked away upstairs.

"This is Edith," she said. "Is that you, Carl?"

"Yes, and where the heck are you, and why?" Carl wanted to know.

Then came the dawn.—Philadelphia Record.

Wonder Clocks Evolved by Old-Time Mechanics

The first clock of the type we know today was made by a Milanese at the beginning of the Fourteenth century, and built in a church tower of his native city, to the great astonishment of the inhabitants. A few years later a wonder clock made its appearance at Padua.

Besides indicating the hours, this was provided with mechanism that showed the course of the sun, the revolutions of the planets, the varying phases of the moon, the months and the numerous fetes of the year. In another hundred years people were marveling at a production which must have been the first alarm clock ever devised. At a stated hour this clock sounded a little bell, at the same moment lighting a little wax candle. How this was done is a secret that passed to the grave with its inventor, but it is worth bearing in mind that until a century ago our only means of obtaining a light was with a tinder-box!

Eighth Wonder of the World

Milan, the capital of Lombardy, is unquestionably the industrial metropolis of the country and essentially the sign and symbol of the new Italy. Indeed, there are few cities in Europe where the spirit of the Twentieth century is more firmly enthroned; yet it still radiates the atmosphere of a brilliant and glowing past and many great and ancient buildings remain to bear witness to the golden age of art. The marvelous cathedral of white marble is the eighth wonder of the world. Five centuries of effort and the genius of a whole series of gifted architects have gone into its making. The great edifice was begun in 1386 and reached its present form due to the generosity of Napoleon. The cathedral is a veritable architectural encyclopedia, a product of all the ages.

Keas' Victory Over Turkey

Keas (large dull green parrots native to the south island of New Zealand), are the most comical of our birds. A party of them were recently sitting up at the Hermitage watching the unwrapping of a crate containing a turkey. When the majestic turkey stalked out, determined to show the country fellows how they did it in town, the keas began to screech "Heha!" most derisively. The turkey gobbled back at them, but so persistent was their squawking and ridicule that soon he could gobble no more. The keas came back day after day to tease him, until he became thoroughly submissive, and accustomed to their jokes.—Christchurch (N. Z.) Press.

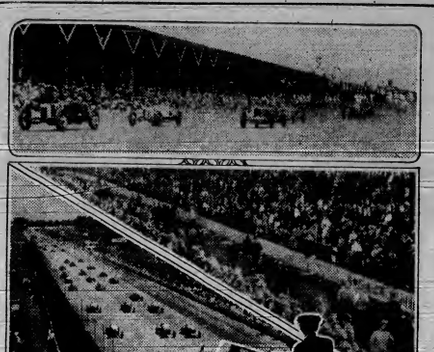
Scriptural Books

"Ecclesiastes" and "Ecclesiasticus" are the names of different portions of the Scriptures. The former is accepted by both Catholics and Protestants as one of the essential and canonical books of the Bible. "Ecclesiasticus," or "Wisdom of Jesus, Son of Sirach" as it is also called, is the name of a portion of the Catholic Bible. It was included in the canon fixed by the Council of Trent (1545-1563) and is classified as one of the deuterocanonical books. Protestants regard Ecclesiasticus as one of the Apocrapha and consequently, although they read it for inspiration and edification, they do not use it to fix points of doctrine.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Queer-Looking Crocodiles

Some of the queerest-looking crocodiles in the world have been received at the British zoo. They are of the kind known as gharials, and came from Borneo. They are most fantastic in appearance, as their alarming looking, well-armed jaws are drawn out into long, narrow snouts, swelling at the tips. They are the giants of the family, often growing to be well over 20 feet in length. They have the true crocodile teeth, these being set in a straight line and interlocking, the fourth tooth on either side of the lower jaw meeting a notch in the upper jaw.

First, Second, Third Place Drivers In Hoosier Race Compete Again This May



INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Billy Arnold, William Cantlon and Louis Schneider, win, place and show in last year's race, will ride against each other for premier honors in the 500-mile drive to be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Arnold will drive the same car he rode to victory last year—announcing that with changes it is ten miles an hour faster; Cantlon will roll to the tape at the wheel of a new 16-cylinder creation while Schneider has a brand new car which is much faster than the one he tooled to third place last season.

There is keen rivalry between these three pilots. Schneider was the first to arrive at the Speedway to begin his pre-race practice spins. Arnold's car is a front wheel drive creation. The others are conventional rear wheel drive types.

Forty Cars Face Starter In 500-Mile Race at Indianapolis Track This Year

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Forty cars—the largest number in history—will face the flags in the start of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

The flying getaway of the big field of cars in the 500 mile race is regarded as the most spectacular event in sports each year. The largest crowd to witness any sporting event each year attends the Indianapolis classic which was first run in 1911.

With indications that there will be at least sixty nominations for the race, all save the forty fastest cars will be eliminated in a series of qualifying trials to be run the week before the race.

De Paolo, Race Star, Still Carries Baby Shoes As Token But Son is Real Mascot

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Although Peter De Paolo, record holder of the Indianapolis track in his 1925 victory when he averaged 101.13 miles an hour, still carries the tiny baby shoes of his first child on the springs of his race car, he now has the growing wearer of those shoes as his mascot as he prepares for his competition in the International 500-mile race which will be held at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Tommy, Peter's shy, personable son, is an interested onlooker as his famous, speeding daddy works on the car he hopes will carry him to his second victory in an Indianapolis run.

Each year while preparing for the race, Peter and Mrs. De Paolo take a house in the country near the track. Here Mrs. De Paolo supervises the culinary training of her husband for the event.

Measuring Sunshine

One of the most difficult tasks in London is carried out daily at the air ministry offices, where the amount of sunshine penetrating the city is measured. The measuring apparatus consists of a small glass ball through which the heat of the sun passes to burn a special paper placed beneath it, the mark on the paper being used to compute the amount of sunlight passing through.

A Proper Dignity
Remember this—that there is a proper dignity and proportion to be observed in the performance of every act of life.—Aristotle

"Mr." and "Mrs."

The titles "Mr. and "Mrs." now common property, were not always so freely bestowed. In the Seventeenth century only such persons as ministers and physicians and their wives prefixed these titles to their names. The title for those above the rank of servant but below that of gentlefolk was "Goodman" or "Goodwife."

Original Phrase in Dispute

The original phrase "mad as a hatter" was probably "mad as an adder," according to Crowell's Handbook for Readers and Writers, but evidence is lacking. The phrase was popularized by Lewis Carroll in "Alice in Wonderland," but was well known earlier and was used by Thackeray in "Pendennis" in 1840.

Rheumatism So Bad He Walked the Floor in Agony

"Karnak has done me such a wonderful amount of good that I believe every rheumatic sufferer should give it a trial.

"No one will ever know the tortures I have gone through with rheumatism during the past three years. I ached all over. At nights the pains were so great that I walked the floor, and I've gotten out in the middle of the night to go to the doctor for a hypodermic. I tried every thing in an effort to get relief. Even serum treatments failed to help me. My relief finally came when a friend advised me to try Karnak. To my surprise this medicine went right to the roots of my trouble, and brought complete relief. Every ache and pain has disappeared, and I am now in condition to resume active duties once more, thanks to Karnak."

CONGRESSMAN FRED M. VINSON IN FOREFRONT OF CONVENTION—BATTLES LINE-UP IS WELL BALANCED AND IS READY FOR FRAY

The Boone county delegation returned in relays from the Democratic convention at Lexington last week thoroughly pleased with the selections made for places on the ticket that will "go to bat" in November.

Those who attended the convention from Boone county as delegates were: Mrs. Emmy Cleek, of Beaver; B. H. Riley, of Union; Herbert Snyder, Burlington; O. W. Cleek, Walton; R. E. Berkshire, Burlington; Emmett Kilgour, Hebron, and L. T. Utz, Florence. Alternates: Ed. Farrell, Verona; Arthur Maurer, Burlington; and T. W. Marshall, Walton.

Here's The Ticket

Governor: Judge Ruby Lafoon, Madisonville, Hopkins County, Second District.

Attorney General: Bailey P. Wooten, Hazard, Perry County Tenth District.

Auditor:, Dan Talbott, Bardstown, Nelson County, Fourth District.

Secretary of State: Miss Sarah White Mahan, Danville, Boyle county, Eighth District.

Treasurer: Elam Huddleston, Louisville, Fifth District.

Commissioner of Agriculture: Eugene Flowers, Russellville, Logan County, Third District.

From this entire line-up the Boone county delegation voted for but one "loser" and that was in the person of [illegible] when they cast their vote, under the unit rule, for Jack Howard, of Prestonsburg, for the chief officer of the Senate. Mr. Howard was known to have been favorable to Judge Laffoon and he also was known to have been brought into the race at the instance of Congressman Fred M. Vinson, who had done valiant service for the Laffoon forces in his home district at a great sacrifice to his personal political alignments. Aside from this one instance, however, the Boone county forces were on the "right side of the track" in every instance.

In passing the writer must mention it as his opinion, as well as that of the entire Boone-co., delegation, that Mr. Vinson came out of the convention much stronger from a state-wide political standpoint than before he went into it. He allowed himself to be made a candidate for temporary chairman by an overwhelming vote and served with becoming grace, ability and dignity. But when the big test came, as between his candidate (Howard) and Chandler, Mr. Vinson made one of the most admirable and spectacular fights ever before seen on a convention floor. He was making this fight against some of the same forces that had helped to make him the temporary chairman, but his "word was out" to Howard and he made it good. The race was the most exciting of the entire convention, with the decision coming when the Louisville delegation switched from Beauchamp to Chandler.

As a whole the ticket appears well balanced geographically and thoroughly capable of taking care of itself against either expected or unexpected opposition.

NORBEH CHAMPIONS MEET

The Norbeh Champion 4-H Club Miss Margaret Digney, Nursing of Hebron met with County Agent H. R. Forkner on May 11th. This was the Norbeh's fourth meeting. The club committees reported as to have done splendid work. The next meeting of the Norbeh's will be held June 18th. A social committee was appointed. Those who were appointed were Helen Grant, Woodford Crigler and Mary K. Jergens. The club is planning to invite another club to play a game of base ball between the two clubs. The club adjourned by repeating the club pledge.

J. M. Botts is engaged in remodeling the Recorder building so that an inside stairway will reach each of the two rooms upstairs. The front office upstairs will be used by the editor.

Mrs. Louise White spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall.

UNION BOOSTER CLUB

Wednesday morning May 4th, the Union Booster Club held their fourth4-H Club meeting. Nineteen out of their twenty members were present. Every member gave a brief report on their project and we found that we had an excellent standing. We had a chart program.

ONE DOLLAR

IS PRICE OF RECORDER FOR ONE YEAR—OFFER IS OPEN FROM MAY 25 UNTIL JUNE 25—OFFER ALSO IS OPEN TO EVERY SUBSCRIBER ON THE LIST

For some time the Recorder has been anticipating the making of a special offer in order to clean up its subscription list, so that the business relationship, as between subscriber and publisher, might assume a better balance.

We had thought of making a sharp cut in price for a given period, so that those who have become in arrears, due to a sharp decline in the price of farm products, lower wages and unemployment, might have a chance to catch up. But, in studying over the matter, we are confronted with the fact that such an offer would be unjust.

Why? Because many of those who are in arrears have become so through oversight. Would it be fair to let these get in on a "good [illegible] ways has paid promptly at the regular rate, bear the greater burden of keeping our business alive?

No, we have given the matter careful study and have decided to cut the subscription price to one ($1.00) dollar per year, with the offer open to everyone and for any term of years, whether arrears or advance.

This offer will begin Monday, May 25th, and close on June 25th, after which we will make our terms strictly cash in advance. Christmas falls on the 25th as does the publisher's birthday. So Mr. Subscriber you may make it a birthday present, or a Christmas present, and still save yourself some money. In fact its a present either way you look at it.

OF COUNTY LEAGUE REMAINS SAME AS FIRST DIVISION TEAMS WIN FROM LOWER HALF TEAMS — BELLEVIEW EASY VICTOR, WHILE HEBRON WINS BY NOSE

Belleview Runs Away

That ancient and fairly well preserved adage—youth will be served—received a kick in the slats at the Burlington base ball pasture last Saturday afternoon.

When we tell you that Ben Black, who was throwing base balls past Boone county batters like bullets more than a decade ago, held the locals to one run, five measly hits and fanned ten men it should be enough to prove our assertion in the opening paragraph.

We have no way of proving, however, just how old Ben is, but we do know that he shed his glove and spikes several years ago and was out of the game for some seasons, giving as his reason that it nearly killed him to pitch and that it took too much time from his crops anyway.

Of course Ben may have cut down his acreage this year, but there is one thing certain and that is that the players who stood up there swinging last Saturday entertain the unanimous hope to-wit: that when the time comes to play Belleview again that it will be tobacco "suckers" that will be occupying Ben's attention—and not them.

While Sim Afterkirk made as many Belleview boys sit back, via strikeout as did Black, yet he permitted 17 hits of more or less power and distance. Russell Miller, on the former occasion of the meeting of these two teams, led in the Belleview attack with four hard drives, three of which were doubles. A Rogers and Black himself pinched off three bingles each, while divers others cut in on the celebration.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Greenup and daughter and Mr. and Mr. and Mrs. John Allison and daughter, all of Hamilton, Ohio, drove down last Sunday for a day with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Greenup and family.

The base ball game between the Petersburg and Burlington second teams, which was played here last Sunday, was won by Petersburg by the close score of 9-8.

James A. Riddell, of Hebron, and W. T. Riddell, of Dayton, O., spent last Friday with M. Riddell and wife here.

Bell B. Fleeman, of Dayton, O., and Miss Nell G. Stephens, of Petersburg, enjoyed the class play exhibited by the Senior Class of B. H. S. last Saturday evening.

R. Lee Huey, of Ludlow, enjoyed the week-end at the home of his sister Mrs. J. E. Gaines and Mr. Gaines, on the Petersburg pike.

On Friday May 29th, there will in Petersburg.

W. A. Pettit and family and Miss Hazel Simons spent last Sunday in Warsaw.

Thomas Rouse and some friends of Pleasant Ridge, Ohio, spent last Sunday with Miss Nell H. Martin and Pink Cowen and Mrs. Laura Martin.

The Boone County Road [illegible] activity from the Beaver-Walton road, which they have completed, to the Hebron and Limaburg road. The latter thoroughfare also is badly in need of repair.

A little finger doesn't seem like so much when compared to an arm or a leg, but just ask David Williamson what he thinks about it. On April 23rd, while playing in a game of base ball with B. H. S. against Crescent Springs, Dave made a desperate slide for home. The result of his effort was that he was out—and then "out" some more, for when he regained his feet he noted that the little finger on his right hand was hanging by a mere thread. Dr. Yelton's best efforts were of no avail and on Monday night of this week the digit was amputated. So now, if anyone should charge that David isn't "all there" he will have no argument whatsoever.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Cordray, of Harrison, county, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Mark Cook at their home on the Camp Ernst road near urlington.

Walter Brown and L. C. Weaver are casting for the finny tribe in sundry ponds as we go to press. Although they intended to extend their investigation over a period of some three or four days when they started Monday morning, it is a safe guess that their luck will govern their stay to some extent.

Mrs. Laverne Buckler, of Waterloo, is spending a few days at the home of Dr. and Mrs. K. W. Ryle.

Mrs. M. A. Yelton fell a victim the measles late last week. She is doing nicely at this writing.

Mrs. Lillian Presser, of Waterloo, is back with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kirkpatrick after a few days spent with her parents.

Robert Utz and mother spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Sam lackburn, of near Lawrenceburg, Ind. Mrs. Blackburn formerly was Miss Mary Utz.

A number from Burlington attended the funeral services of Mrs. Nannie A. Stephens, at Big Bone, and N. C. Tanner, at Hopeful, on Sunday and Monday respectively.

Mrs. A. B. Renaker was hostess at a uncheon ast Wednesday in honor of Mrs. R. L. Cutterbuck and son of Beverly Hills, California. The place cards bore the names of Mrs. Sidney Gaines, Mrs. Menter Martin, Mrs. Earl Walton, Miss Nell Martin, Mrs. R. L. Clutterbuck and R. L. Clutterbuck, Jr.

Deaths

NOAH TANNER

Noah Tanner, aged 79 years, passed away Saturday morning at his home near Union, Ky., following a three week's illness.

Funeral services were conducted at the Hopeful church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock by the Rev. F. B. Heibert, pastor, in the presence of a concourse of friends and relatives, after which his remains were laid to rest by the side of his wife in the nearby cemetery.

The pall-bearers were Noah Zimmerman, Ira Tanner, Emerson Smith Jess Delahaunty, Lynn Wilson and Leslie Barlow.

Mr. Tanner is survived by his daughter, Mrs. Louis Weaver, two [illegible] grand children, besides two sisters and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

OBITUARY

Joseph Preston West, son of John and Ann West, was born December 9th, 1861, departed this life April 21, 1931,aged 69 years, four months and two twenty-one days.

He was united in marriage September 2nd, 1880, to Miss Julia Ann Hall. To this union were born five children, Mrs. Richard Koons, Mrs. Jesse Louden, Mrs. Charlie Fowler,, Charles Everett and Mrs. Erastus Rice.

Charles Everett preceded him to his grave April 11, 1906, aged 17 November 14, 1917, aged 35 years.

He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, three daughters, 20 grandchildren and 5 great-grandchildren, two brothers Noah and George and a host of other relatives and friends.

Uncle Joe, as he was always called was a kind and loving husband and father and was loved by everyone who knew him.

Dearest Father thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But it's God that has bereft us
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
[illegible] the day of life is fled,
Where no farewell tears are shed
We have lost our darling Father,
He has bid us all adieu,
He has gone to live in Heaven
And his form is lost in view.

Oh! that loved one, how we loved him,
Oh! how hard to give him up!
But an angel came down for him
And removed him from our flock.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness shown us during the illness and death of our dear husband and father, Joseph Preston West. Especially do we thank Dr. M. A. Yelton for his medical care, Bro. Carter for his consoling words, the choir for the beautiful singing and Mr. Steele for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

MOTHER AND CHILDREN

CIVIL WAR VETERAN PASSES

Mr. Jerry Estes, known to his many friends as "Uncle Jerry," passed away at his home near Francesville, Boone County, Ky., May 11th, at 11 a. m., aged eighty-seven years 9 months and 15 days. He was born in Estill county, Ky., July 26th, 1843, and served as a private in Captain S. F. Bowman's Co., C. 14th Regiment of Kentucky Cavelry. He is survived by four sons and four daughters, Mrs. Sevmour Wilson, Mrs. Wm. Brown, Mrs. Wm. Eggleston, Miss Kittie Estes, Mr. Geo. and Frank Estes, of Francesville, and Luther and Wm. Estes, of California—his wife having preceded him to the grave 18 years ago.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Avery, pastor of Sand Run Baptist church, assisted by Rev. Baker, of Richmond, Ind., and Rev. J. W. Campbell, of Bullittsburg Baptist church May 15th, at 2:30 p. m., at Sand Run church with burial at Sand Run cemtery.

The pall-bearers were Edward, Arthur and Harmon Eggleston, Jerry Brown and Lawrence and Alfred Wilson. Three beautiful hymns were sung by members of Hebron and Bullittsville church choirs. W. A. Bullock, Hebron undertaker had charge of the funeral arrangements.

The faculty, patrons and members of the graduating class of the Petersburg High School are to be congratulated upon obtaining the services of J. C. T. Noe, of Ky., University, at Lexington, to deliver the class address on Friday evening, May 29th. The commencement exercises will be held at the Christian church.

The class play will be the first of a series of graduating events and this will be presented in Berkshire's Hall Saturday evening May 23rd. The title of the play is "Son John."

Then on the following evening Sunday May 24th, Rev. Garriott, Methodist pastor, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon at the M. E. church.

WILL GRACE GRAVE MARKER OF MRS. NANCY ANN STEPHENS, WHO DIED AT PETERSURG AT HOME OF DAUGHTER

Boone county's oldest citizen has passed away. Mrs. Nancy Ann Stephens, aged 97 years, seven months and seven days, died on Thursday May 14th, at high noon at the home of her daughter Mrs. Robert Day, Petersburg. The cause of her death was said to be cerebral hemorrhage.

She was born in Indiana in the year 1833 and came to this county early in life to spend her remaining years here. She was the widow of the late Thos. Stephens, who preceded her to the grave some 22 years ago. She leaves five children—Lucien, of Lexington; Wood, of Florence; M. C., of Hebron; Mrs. F. J. Rue, and Mrs. Robert Day, both of Petersburg.

She also is survived by 10 grandchildren, 10 great-grand-children and 3 great-grandgreat granuchildren. A host of other relatives and friends of long, long standing remain to mourn her loss. She was recognized as a very religious wo- [illegible] more than 40 years and from which church the funeral services took place.

Services were conducted by Rev. Johnson the pastor in the presence of a very large gathering of relatives, friends and neighbors. After the services she was laid to rest by the side of her husband in the church cemetery.

The casket bearers were her grandsons. Chambers and Grubbs had charge of the funeral arrangements.

TAKES MEASURE OF BOEHLER WITH NORMAN, A NEW PITCHER, IN BOX — HIGH WIND MARS DAYS PASTIME

(By Hot Shot)

Saturday the Petersburg club from down on the beautiful Ohio invaded the Walton park, led by their handsome and artistic hurler, Boehler and were downed by the score of 7 to 3.

Norman limited the Petersburg boys to 6 hits and struck out two while issuing one intentional pass. Irish, better known for his offensive work lived up to advance dope by smashing three hits in five trips to the plate, triple, double and single.

This stocky sidewheeler, who consumes his soup from the off side of the plate was a tree of thorns in the side of the visitors.

Boehler, the visiting slabman was in good form and while hit freely at times, always had enough stuff in reserve to prevent a massacre. Boehler allowed 14 hits, no walks and caused seven Waltonians to fan the breeze.

Bunts, Bingles, Errors

Now fans hold your chairs.

Walton at Belleview, Saturday May 23rd—2:30 p. m. If this isn't the battle of the season, then there isn't a steer in Texas.

Among the distinguished visitors Saturday was the League President Bob Berkshire. Bob bosses the Boone County League with the grace and technque of a Heydler and is extremely popular with all the players.

Quite a number of Boone county ball players, changed their uniforms and cast their lot with different clubs this season. Among whom was Russell Miller, who played the keystone bag for Walton last year. Russ is wearing the Belleview uniform this season and endeavoring to fill a difficult role, that of replacing Bobby Brady, who made the trip from whence no traveler ever returned some few weeks ago.

On Friday May first one hundred and one young hopefuls from the various graded schools of Boone county came to Burlington to stand the common school examinations, their ultimate goal being to enter the portentous portals of Hi School.

Last Saturday Supt., D. H. Norris came into possession of the fateful and long awaited news. Of course news has a way of being both good and bad, and this was not an exception, for ten of the ambitious ones failed to attain a passing grade, though they will be given a second opportunity on May 28th.

But ninety one worries have been put to an end, for ninety one of the one hundred and one will be permitted to tip-toe into the mysterious realms of high school when the bell rings next September.

Verona Girl Wins

To Miss Madeline Vest, of Verona, goes the signal and traditional honor of winning the Rouse Medal, Miss Melicent Berkshire, of Burlington, being second. These two girls finished a considerable distance ahead of their nearest competitors.

The Rouse Medal is donated by former Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, who started the practice a number of years ago while serving the sixth district at Washington. Ironically enough, it is true, Mr. Rouse's old home school never has been able to take this honor, this year being the nearest Burlington ever has come to winning the prize.

After a search back through the [illegible] gently by Supt., Norris, obtained data to offer a brief resume of this contest over the past decade. The writer does not recall the exact year in which Mr. Rouse initiated this practice, although a further search at the superintendent's office would reveal it.

In the winning of this medal the Hebron school has made a phenomonal record, having taken the honor for seven straight years, beginning with the year 1923 and ending with last year. Starting with 1920, as far back as the writer has gone, it was won by Althea Williford, of Verona. Petersburg took the distinction in 1921, when Miss Emelyn McChord was first. In 1922 Miss Elizabeth Weaver, of Union, won.

It is a splendid tribute to the efficiency of the Boone county school system, when the fact is pointed out that ninety per cent of her 8th grade students passed this difficult test, which is compiled annually by state authorities. Boone county's record in state competition during the past year also is a brilliant one, demonstrating that a splendid corps of teachers, ably led by our competent and thorough superintendent D. H.Norris, deserve to be congratulted.

And, to get back to thread of our story, it cannot be overlooked that Mr. Rouse, donor of the Rouse Medal, also is in line.

W. M. U. NOTES

The W. M. U. of Big Bone met and held their regular meeting with Mrs. Lucy Ryle Thursday May 14th—there being about 50 present—21 lady members. All reported a fine day. Talks were made for the good of our society and we also had mission study book entitled "All the World in all the Word" which was very interesting.

On April 22nd 14 of our society women responded to the opportunity of going to the State District meeting being held at Emanuel church Covington. They were taken by the efficient truck driver Mr. Scott Jones, and to say the least had an enjoyable day and a fine lunch at the noon hour.

Elkhorn and Shelby counties received the A-1 Banner of which they were very proud. If any of the W. M. U. ladies get an opportunity they should try to attend one of these meetings as they are very inspiring.

Our next meeting will be held with Mrs. Addie Butler on Thursday, June 11th. Ladies please try to attend.

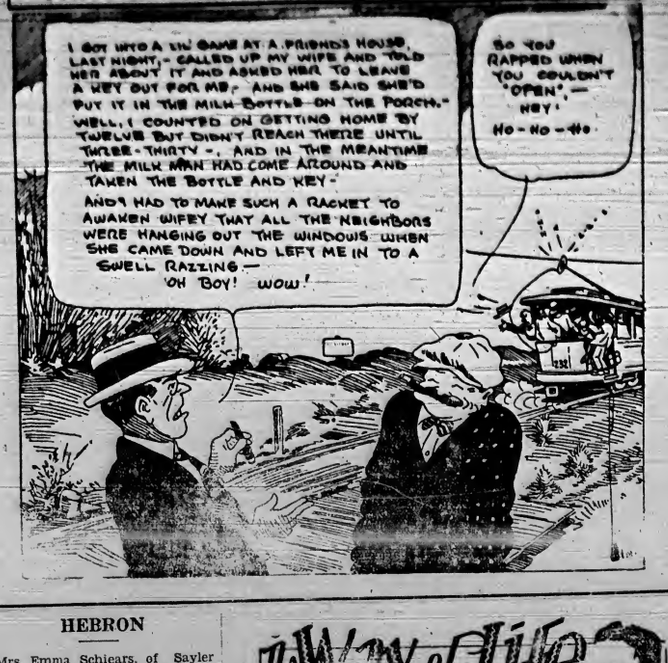
WHERE THE MONEY GOES



It costs the average American family a little more than one-third of its income for food. The average wage-earner has an income of $1,513.29 a year, or just under $30 a week, out of which he spends $548.51 for food, according to the most recent statistical compilation of figures on the cost of living. Rent, whether in the form of maintenance and taxes on a home, or in actual rent paid to a landlord, averages a little over one-fifth of the total income or, in the case of the average wage-earner, $342.14. Clothing for the entire family, on the same scale, comes to $237.60, leaving $385.04 of this average wage-earner's income for miscellaneous expenditures.

That is substantially a quarter of the average worker's yearly earnings, out of which he has to pay doctor's bills, cost of educating his children, all amusements, his life insurance premiums, if any, and everything else that he spends money for. On the same basis of figuring the average wage earner spends $16.33 for automobiles. Since the cheapest automobile sells for around $500, this means that only one wage earner in 30 buys a car in any given year. With ordinary care, however, even a cheap car will last for years. It is a safe assumption that at least one out of every ten wage earners in America owns an automobile.

Doctor's bills for the average family run nearly four times the cost of automobiles. Insurance accounts for $43.28 a year out of the average family income. And after paying for all of the things already mentioned, this average American working man has $90 a year left for cigarettes. Christmas presents or other non-necessary expenditures, besides putting $78.93 in the savings bank.

Those are figures which cannot be matched anywhere else in the world. Nowhere has the man who works with his hands such a surplus above his actual living as he has in America. For that matter, no worker under any other flag has as comfortable living quarters or as good and ample food. It is this surplus of earnings above expenses that has enabled American workers to carry thrpugh a long period of depression and unemployment without being reduced to beggary and starvation.

HEBRON

Mrs. Emma Schiears, of Sayler Park, was the week-end guest of Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Hafer and Mrs. Hossman.

John Conner, of Kentucky University, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Conner.

The social given by the Lutheran Sunday School last Saturday night was well attended.

Lunch will be served by the Ladies Aid of the Lutheran church Decoration Day at the church.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Tanner and son Omer, left last week to resume their work on the Ottawa Government boat, after a few week's stay here at their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawson Brown and family, of Bromley, were Sunday guests of Lester Aylor and son.

Baccalaureate services for the graduating class of Hebron High School took place at the Lutheran church Sunday night. Prayer and scripture reading by Rev. F. B. Helbert of the Lutheran church and sermon by Rev. Brown, of the Bullittsville Christian church. Anthem by the young people. The members of the class were Misses Martha Lillian McGlasson, Alberta Mae Baker, Martha Grace Reeves, Lucy Lee Grant, Etheleen Jackson and Norris Riddell, Lloyd Selkman, Elmer Tanner and Geo. Yates, Jr. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and the rainbow colors.

THE MELON CROPS

(By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture)

With the ground definitely warm the time kas come for starting the melon crops which include squashes and cucumbers besides cantaloupes and water melons. Since they are "fruit" crops, they need adequate amounts of phosphorus, but their nitrogen needs should not be overlooked, for thrifty vine growth is necessary as well.

Fertilizing

The general custom is to make up hills with manure, using from a small fork full to half a peck. This serves to give the plants a start, after which the roots forage in the surrounding soil. The extent of the roots is as great as if not greater than, that of the tops. Because this is so, a more logical way to fertilize this class of crops is by broadcasting the manure to a 2-inch coat), working it in. Since manure is lacking in phosphorus, of 1 pound to 20 square feet of phate at the same time, at the rate it is wise to broadcast superphosspace. If manure is not to be had, a complete fertilizer should be used. 4-12-4 is an excellent analysis, and the rate is the same as has just been given.

The seed may be dropped in groups or "hills" or, better still, drilled in rows, which should be thinned to a stand corresponding with the stand in hills. The drill method has the advantage of making insect and disease control more easy.

Cultivation

Since the roots lie shallow, so should the cultivation be. All that is needed is to discourage weed-growth. The ground should be left level at all times.

PESTS

The most troublesome insect is the striped cucumber beetle. Although its most obvious damage is gnawing and girdling the stems, more serious is the injury done the seedlings. At about the time the seedlings break through the adult beetles enter the cracks in the soil, to do some feeding, and to lay their eggs. These hatch into cream colored larvae which feed on the rootlets, sometimes wholly destroying the plants, at least weakening them to the extent that they die later; this we recognize as "wilt."

Since the injury begins so early, it is necessary to take steps for control as soon as the ground over the hidlls begins to heave. The control is dusting with a poisonous mixture of 20 pounds of gypsum and a pound of calcium arsenate.

After this dusting, at least five others should be given, 3 days apart. As many as 15 dustings will pay well.

Another insect is the melon louse. In common with the lice that attack other vegetables, their control is contact spraying with nicotine extract. The commercial forms of nicotine sulphate are more satisfactory to use than the homemade tobacco tea, tho the latter, made of proper strength, has given good results.

The most serious disease is the blight, whose control is applying bordeaux mixture, either liquid or dust. In some sections of the state it has become impossible to wilt. The only control for this trouble is to use varieties that are specially bred to be resistant. A card to the writer will bring you directions for securing these special varieties.

Varieties

Squash, White Bush, Crookneck; Cucumbers, Long Green for both slicers and picklers; Cantaloupes, Rock yFord, Hearts of Gold. Tip Top; Cushaw, Green Striped; Watermelons, Stone Mountain, Klecksley, Irish Grey.

Cow-Country Songs

Cowboy songs are interesting chiefly as human documents, for the light that they throw on the conditions of frontier life, and for their reflection of the old-time cattle baron and his crew. The whole cycle of the cowboy's experience—its monotony, its fun, its heroes, its love affairs, its dangers and the epic of the long drives overland from Texas to Montana—is set forth in the songs made and sung by the men themselves.

Tribal Signaling

For tom-toms the native tribes of the Amazon valley use hollow logs with ends covered with skin and a piece of hardwood that is hit with a club or mallet. Drums of various sorts are common and are known under the general heading of tom-toms. They are used for ceremonies, dances, signals and such purposes.

"Congregational"

The Congregational church derives its name from its fundamental principle, that each congregation is an independent body, having a right to elect or depose its pastors, settle all disputes regarding matters of faith, and exercise necessary discipline over its members without the interference of the other congregations.

Halved for Transportation

During the World war large ships were cut in two to bring them from the Great lakes to the coast. The vessels were cut in two by means of an acetylene torch while in dry dock. The sections were then boarded and calked, after which the dock was flooded and the sections were hauled apart and towed. The halves were later rejoined and made seaworthy.

Coeds Fenced Off in 1856

Co-educational colleges have not always permitted men and women students to mix freely, the Butler College, student publication of Butler university, said, after pointing out a ruling of September 2, 1850, which ordered the university president to erect "certain fences for the separation of the groups for the use of the male and female members."

Game of Billiards Old

Frank Menke's All-Sports Record Book says that there is no definite record as to how long the game of billiards has been played. Some authorities declare that the Egyptians played billiards hundreds of years before the Christian era. There is evidence that the Greeks indulged in billiards about 400 B. C.

Discretion's Value

There is no talent so useful towards rising in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune, than discretion, a species of lower prudence.—Swift.

Earliest Book Clubs

At first book clubs had reprintings of rare books and manuscripts made. The earliest of these clubs was the Roxburghe club, founded in 1813, which imposed upon each member the printing of one book. The Ballantyne club, founded in 1823 by Sir Walter Scott, took for its field the reprinting of really important works.

Broadened in Meaning

"Carcen" was originally a purely nautical term derived from a word meaning "the bottom of a ship." When a vessel was careened it was turned over on its side for cleaning. The verb is also used intransitively and could be employed to such a vehicle as a truck that turned over on its side.

Little Known of Shakespeare

Despite the constant studies of Shakespeare it is still unknown exactly on what date Shakespeare was born; what he did before he was eighteen; the date and place of his marriage; where he lived afterwards; which year he reached London, and when he first joined a company of players.

Indians' Status

The bureau of Indian affairs says that Indians on reservations may leave said reservations at any time to establish a residence elsewhere. It is not necessary to obtain permission to do this. An Indian moving from a reservation enjoys the same citizenship privileges as any other American citizen.

Remunerative Admiration

"We give admiration to one who has great wealth," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown. "It costs nothing, and if wealth returns the compliment in its own terms, we may find the bargain profitable."—Washington Star.

Letters "U" and "V"

The letter U is a form of V, with which it was formerly used interchangeably. In the Eleventh century U came to be used by preference as the capital initial form. In dictionaries they were not given separate alphabetical position until about 1800. The V form is still used frequently in inscriptions.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

DON'T SEND IT

Some years ago I met a man who spoke as follows:

"The boss issued a memorandum today with a lot of new instructions. Some of them were all wet, an I didn't hesitate to him so. I shot a memo right back at him, and, believe me, it was a hot one."

Said another man:

"I received my first business training under a wise old bank official. One day a letter came in from a customer who made unreasonable complaints and asked for an unwarranted favor.

"I sat up almost all night drafting an answer to that letter. It was a beauty, and I took it in to the old man next morning with pride. His head nodded approvingly as he read it.

"You've put the case just right," he said. "The position you have taken is based on sound banking principles; it states our attitude with dignity and force. All in all, it's a very fine letter and I congratulate you on it.

Afterwards, I learned that the man I first quoted was paid $4,000 a year; the other is paid $40,000.

Like every other man in business, I receive a certain number of communications which are both unkind and unfair. Having red hair and naturally quick temper, I used to let such letters hoist my temperature considerably. Sometimes I carried them around in my mind for several days, forming red hot phrases in reply.

Now I play a much meaner trick on the writers. I do not answer them at all. I can imagine one of my critics going down to the front gate every morning to meet the postman, looking eagerly for my answer, thinking up what he will say in his next outburst.

Day after day goes by, and no answer comes. The fire that was to burn me up, burns him up instead.

This method of dealing with one's enemies is certainly not spectacular and maybe it is unmanly. If so, I can reply only that as I grow older the glory of being spectacular appeals to me less and less in comparison with the comfortable joys of peace.

Life seems somehow too short for controversy and much of my income in these days is received not so much for what I do as for what I have learned not to do.

Patience, I have learned, is almost as important as work; while judgment uniformly commands a much higher rate than well intentioned activity.

What is judgment? you ask. Well, it's the little voice that whispers: "That would be brilliant, but don't do it." Or, "That's a smart one; very smart indeed. But, for Heaven's sake, don't send it."

"ROUGHAGE"

We hear it, read it, sense it in the very air, "roughage." It's the slogan of the swivel-chair patriot, whose colon has been on a strike for the last twenty rubber-tired years. Treat 'em rough, these tired, lazy-stuffed colons; just got to have roughage!

Well, the prodigal son ate the husks which the swine didn't take—and repented of his sins right away—the first victory for roughcraft—the smooth diet—time getting back to the fatted.

Let's talk about bran—shorts, have you? The sort recommended "taillings," husks of wheat or what by solemn physicians, smug dietitians and artful manufacturers; age, so to speak. Then he lost no and, let's talk sense.

I have not found one in twenty-five routine investigations, upon whom bran had the least effect in obstinate constipation. I have tested carefully in my own case; I might as well have taken that much Portland cement, so far as laxative effect was noticeable.

Sometimes I wonder how many recks of bran one would have to eat, to acquire a single grain of iron? And what form of iron? Possibly a trace of ferrous oxide—rust! There is as much iron in a single Blaud pill as there is in a bushel of wheat—so there.

One of the latest and best books I have found, condemns "roughage" as a routine procedure in lazy colons—a practice that many actually do serious harm, and I agree most emphatically. The "smooth diet" is far more rational to coax the weary organ back to normal function; I do not believe in whipping the tired horse to restore his vigor.

If commercialism were taken out of this country, and our people used real food and exercise instead of substitutes, we'd live longer.

Briefly Told

All things come to the other fellow if you sit down and wait.

Birds Lured From Seedlings

Scarecrows of various kinds were unsuccessful in keeping birds from the pine seedlings in a Texas nursery. The tender plants were repeatedly attacked by the birds and thousands of plants were destroyed. The birds were offered a substitute meal in the shape of oats planted between the rows of seedlings and the result was they soon went after the grain and left the seedlings undisturbed.

No Chance for Disappointment

Blessed is the man who expects nothing, for he shall never be disappointed.—Pope.

Recalling Historic Mutiny

After the famous mutiny on the British warship Bounty, Christian, who had taken charge of the ship, returned to Tahiti and remained there ten days. When the vessel put to sea nine Tahitian men, twelve women and eight boys were aboard the vessel and they begged to remain. Others were taken aboard after visits to islands in the vicinity.

Sunday School Lesson

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

It is recorded by Mark, following the narration of the events in the upper room in Jerusalem when the Lord's supper instituted, "And when they had sung a hymn, they went out into the Mount of Olives." Jesus knew about all that impended and He would be ready for those terrible events thru strengthening prayer. For this purpose He led His beloved disciples to the Garden of Gethsemane.

Prayer is the great recourse when there are problems to face and spiritual strength to be obtained. Though Jesus would pray alone he wanted Peter, James and John to be near Him and invited them to come further into the Garden. The scene is best depicted by Hofmann's great painting of was the "cup" that Jesus prayed might pass from Him? Surely He not want to quit the mission for which He came from heaven to earth. Many think that He was afraid that His strength, both physical and spiritual, might not hold out until all had been accomplished. We know at least this for a certainty: He prayed that the will of the Father, not His personal will might prevail.

The three close friends failed Him. These men slept, and returned to sleep though JesusJesus came thrice to awaken them. The contest had been won, however, by Jesus in His solitude as He faced the throne of God.

It is in such quiet places that we win the big battles of life, rather than in the open and when we cannot do otherwise as the crowd looks on. The greatest decisions are made when we are thus alone with God. Then Judas comes to the place where He knew Jesus had an altar of prayer and gives the signal for arrest as he betrays the Son of Man with a kiss.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS FOR SHEEP MEETING

Leading authorities in sheep and lamb improvement work will appear on the program of the fifth annual meeting of the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Growers' Association at Lexington May 22nd.

R. S. Mateson of Chicago, will conduct a lamb demonstration at the day meeting, and at the banquet in the evening he will speak on quality in relation to price, as well as the probable future demand. A noted woman authority will discuss the preparation and use of lamb in the diet, at the banquet.

Several other states will send specialists to tell of their improvement work. These will include J. W. Burch, Missouri; B. F. Creech, West Virginia; James Lacey, Wisconsin; D. H. LaVoy, Michigan; and H. E. Letton, Virginia. Richard C. Miller of the Kentucky College of Agriculture will speak on the improvement work in this state, and several Kentucky farmers will discuss the production of prime lambs.

C. W. McDonald, a meat specialist, and Prof. E. J. Wilford of the College of Agriculture will demonstrate both the commercial and farmers' methods of cutting up lamb. The control of parasites will be discussed by Doctor E. H. Nighbert of the United States Department of Agriculture.

A feature of the day meeting will be a lamb grading demonstration, to be followed by the slaughter of the lambs and the return of the carcasses for the inspection of the visitors.

Many of the speakers and visitors will attend a meeting of the native lamb improvement association, as well as the meeting of the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Growers' Association. Out-of-the-State visitors will be taken on a tour of Kentucky flocks the day preceding the meeting.

The meeting will be held in the livestock pavilion on the Experiment Station farm beginning at 10 o'clock.

No Proof of Meteor

Coon butte is a large depression near Canon Diabolo, Ariz. The crater is 4,000 feet across and 550 feet deep. Since several tons of meteoric iron have been found nearby, it is believed that the crater was formed by the fall of an enormous meteorite, although this has not been definitely established. Borings have so far failed to locate any large mass within it.

Water Vapor in Gas

The bureau of standards says that usually both coal gas and water gas leave the manufacturing plant saturated with water vapor at the temperature of the coldest piece of apparatus through which they have been passed. This may be a condenser or scrubber or it may be the gas holder. The amount of water vapor in the gas depends upon the temperature and not upon the character of the gas.

IN congratulating the winners in the great Camel contest we want at the same time to thank most cordially the approximately million men and women who displayed their friendly interest by sending in an entry.

We wish also to thank the millions of smokers throughout the country for the appreciation they are showing for our new Humidor Pack as is evidenced by the notable increase in the sale of Camel cigarettes.

By means of this dust-proof, germ-proof, moisture-proof Cellophane wrapping the rich aroma and full flavor of choice Turkish and mellow Domestic tobaccos have been air-sealed in Camels for your enjoyment.

If you have not tried Camels in the Humidor Pack all we ask is that you switch over to this brand for one day.

After you have learned how much milder, how much cooler, how much more enjoyable it is to smoke a perfectly conditioned fresh cigarette, go back to the harsh hotness of stale cigarettes if you can.

Blind Malefactors

A person who becomes blind while serving a prison sentence is cured for in the same manner as prior to his loss of sight, except of course in the management of stairway marching, reading, etc. In large up-to-date prisons vocational education is provided if available; if not available, he is usually sent, after completing his sentence, to an institution for the blind, there to be taught how to read and write, and learn some trade at which to earn his living.

Australian Finds New Way of Making Living

A Smart British gentleman has invented a new way of making a livelihood, reveals the Sydney Bulletin. It consists of going to church and forbidding the banns of any prospective sportswoods. He merely rises and says in a hollow tone, "I object," and goes outside and waits.

If either principal has anything to conceal—and most of them have—a crushed individual generally comes out, gives him all the money in the personal exchequer and implores him to keep the secret deep and dark. Sometimes both the bride and the bridegroom fork over loose change and even jewelry.

Of course, if both the man and the girl are confident of their respective rectitude, he does not get a cent, but on the whole, the Bulletin says, there is a decent living in the business.

Rose Saved Indian's Life

There is a legend of New England concerning an Indian named Joe English, whose real name was Merruwacomet. He was friendly to the colonists and was used as a guide for scouting parties. While hunting he was surprised by hostile Indians and retreated, his pursuers following him. Finally he came to a small mountain, perhaps a little less than a thousand feet high, on which there was a sharp precipice. The Indians believed that they had caught Joe English, but as they were about to capture him he leaped over the precipice and disappeared. His pursuers naturally thought that he was dead, but in reality he had merely jumped to a ledge where he remained hidden until his pursuers left. At night he returned to the English fort at Old Dunstable. The incident occurred in Vermont.

Simplified Refrigeration

READ THESE QUICK FACTS about the new SERVEL
HERMETIC

1 The operating unit is hermetically sealed to eliminate the bother and expense of repairs in your kitchen.

6 The handy Temperature Control for fast freezing is out of reach of children.

7 The beautiful new Servel cabinets have a graceful smartness that every woman appreciates.

8 More usable shelf space than others of equal rating.

LITTLE JULIUS SNEEZER — BY BAKER

REPORT OF BOY CROSS RIVER HAS ACTIVITIES FOR APRIL 1931

April brought an unusual number of cases needing attention in Health problems, on ten different days I carried children to the Children's Hospital or the new Clinic that Hospital, that they might receive for children in connection with expert examinations and care This Clinic Building was opened in January and already it has afforded our county much assistance in our Health Activities, and I wish that a goodly number of our people interested in making the health of our county people better and safer would visit and see this wonderously constructed and equipped place. I also would be so very grateful for volunteer help in the carrying in to this Clinic our children who need to go, for you can easily see how streneous for one person to make so many trips, men there are so so many, many different tasks for that ONE PERSON to do every day.

Since a Rural County Nurse falls heir to all the Public's odds and ends of business, there was consigned to me by a probation officer in Cincinnati the task of locating a truant run-away girl from the city court. I found the girl, but not being an officer I used the only power I possessed—I sat down and talked kindly to her of her misspent time. I tried to picture to her how her life could be spent for herself and for others, and the subsequent happiness and good to be gained by her filling her days with useful deeds, and without my suggesting, she requested me to take her back to the Detention from, which I did, and received from hr offior a letter of gratitude for the "miracle" she declared to have been wrought. Is this a part of Health work? Well, I tried to weave in some positive health and mental instruction, and I can hope the seed shall grow.

On April 23rd the county school tournament was held at Burlington and since we as a county do not observe May Day I presented the Blue Ribbons to the nine children entitled to them this year. They were the following: George Yates, Olan Elliott, Betty Crigler, Vera Goodridge, Gaines Stevens, Geo. H. Riley, Maurice E. Willis, Josephine Grant and Betty Eastman, and yet there are sure to be some more to receive ribbons at Walton and theirs will be awarded there during their commencement week.

EUNIE B. WILLIS,
Red Cross P. H. N.

Last New Year's day one of our subscribers handed another the following dissertation on the contrast of 25 years ago to now. One day last week it was handed to us:

Twenty-five Years Ago We Remember

When hens were $3.00 a dozen; roosters 10 cents a piece, eggs 3 dozen for 25c; butter 10c a pound, milk was 5 cents a quart, the hired girl received two dollars a week and did the washin'. Women did not powder and paint (in public), smoke, vote, play poker or shake the shimmie.

Men wore whiskers and boots, chewed tobacco, spit on the side wilk and cussed. Beer was 5 cents and the lunch was free. Laborers worked ten hours a day and never went on a strike. No tips were given to waiters and the hat check grafter was unknown.. A kerosene hanging lamp and a stereoscope in the parlor were luxuries.

No one was ever operated on for appendicitis or bought glands. Microbes were unheard of, folks lived to a good old age and every year walked miles to wish their friends a Merry Christmas.

TODAY YOU KNOW

Everybody rides in automobiles, or flies; plays golf; shoots crap; plays the piano with their feet; go to the movies nightly; smoke cigarettes; drinks Rukus Juice; and blames the H. C. of L. on their neighbors; never go to bed the same day they get up,and think they are having a Hell of a time.

These are the days of suffragetting, profitteering, rent hogs, excess taxes and prohibition. If you think life is worth living, we wish you

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

Added to Language

GRAIN CONSUMED IN FEEDS

Prof. J. B. Turner, head of the department of feed stuffs in the experiment station of the University of Kentucky, has been named by the national committee named by the Association of Feed Control Officials of America to study the subject of grain screenings as a feed material.

It is estimated that 3,500,000 tons of grain screenings are sold in the United States annually, costing farmers and feeders a vast sum of money. "More fraud is practiced in grain screenings than in feeds or through any other source," Prof. Turner declared. "There is no objection to the proper use of screenings in feeds, but there is a real objection to the illegitimate use of screenings refuse and waste materials used in feeds under the terms 'grain screenings.'"

Prof. Turner's department at the Experiment Station annually analyzes thousands of samples of commercial feeds, and requires each bag to carry a tag showing the manufacturers guarantee, this giving the analysis and a complete list of materials used in the feed. Buyers thereby are fully informed regarding the quality of feeds. If they want high standard feeds, they can get them. If they want cheap, trashy, yellow tag feeds, they can get them. The tag will tell.

RASPBERRY GROWING DEVELOPS

Forty acres of raspberries will be harvested in Boyle county this year, with 20 more acres planted for bearing next year, and a goal of 80 acres for 1933, when plans call for carlot shipments. County Agent C. E. Miller encourages farmers to obegin with a quarter to a half an acre, increasing their plantings as they learn more about raspberry culture. Plantings so far have been confined largely to Parksville, Junction City, McDonald and Mitchellsburg communities. Many 4-H club boys and girls are growing berries.

Great British Order

The British Order of the Bath, which was founded in 1399, consists of three classes: Knights of the Grand Cross (G. C. B.), Knights Commander (K. C. B.), and Companions (C. B.).

Indian Irrigation

Irrigation was used in Arizona many centuries before the coming of the white man. Early Spanish travelers found Indians using water carried by ditches for their crops.

New Fishing Bait

Artificial worms that bear a remarkable resemblance to the genuine have been invented for fishermen, being made in lengths that can be cut to any size desired.

Milkman, Housewife, Sportsman, Winners in $50,000 Contest

Pictures show the three major prize winners in the Camel cigarette contest. James Thomas Sharkey, 32, a milkman in Boston, was awarded first prize of $25,000; Mrs. Walter Sweet, mother of three children and wife of a Marine Corps captain stationed at the Brooklyn (N. Y.) Navy Yard, won second prize of $10,000, and Julius M. Nolte, real estate dealer, and former secretary of the Duluth Commercial Club, received the third prize of $5,000. In addition, five prizes of $1,000 each, five prizes of $500 each and twenty-five prizes of $100 each were awarded.

The three fortunate prize winners will go to Winston-Salem, N. C., where Camel cigarettes are manufactured, to receive their checks.

A Variety of Main Dishes For Every Day Dinners

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

EVERY busy housewife is constantly on the look-out for suggestions regarding practical main dishes. Planning the remainder of the dinner is not a very serious problem, once you have decided upon the principal course. And in most homes this main dish usually is meat, or some nourishing meat substitute—such as beans, fish, eggs or cheese.

Today I am giving you recipes for some oven, casserole and braised dishes which are both practical and economical. These, however, should be chosen for serving on those days when one expects to remain at home, since they require long, slow cooking.

However, I also am including several recipes for excellent courses that are quickly prepared. And you will find all the suggestions listed below most helpful in planning seasonable dishes for the every-day dinner:

Smothered Veal Chops: 6 veal chops, 1 inch thick; 1 cup Cream of Tomato Soup; ½ cup water; ¾ cup cracker crumbs; 1 egg; 1 large onion.

Salt and pepper the veal and dip in beaten egg, to which has been added 2 tablespoons water. Roll in cracker crumbs and brown on both sides in melted butter. Lay thin slices of onion on chops and pour over them the Tomato Soup mixed with ½ cup water. Cover and bake in a moderately hot oven—400 degrees F.—for about 1 hour. Serve garnished with sprigs of parsley and slices of Fresh Cucumber Pickle.

Surprise Potato Balls: ½ lb. sausage; 2 cups mashed potatoes—white or sweet; 2 tablespoons Tomato Ketchup; 1 egg; 3 tablespoons flour.

Add Tomato Ketchup to the sausage and make into small thin cakes. Fry slowly until golden brown. Add the egg and flour to potatoes and blend thoroughly. Make into thin cakes slightly larger than the sausage cakes. Place a meat cake between two potato cakes and press firmly together. Fry until both sides are browned.

Salmon and Pickle Loaf: 1 can of salmon; ½ cup bread crumbs; ½ cup milk; ½ cup Preserved Sweet Gherkins, chopped; 1 egg; 1 teaspoon butter; 1 teaspoon salt.

Mix ingredients and pack into a small buttered can. Bake, covered, in a moderate oven for about one hour. The last few minutes uncover and brown slightly. Remove to a platter and pour 1 cup white sauce over the top. Arrange thin slices of hard cooked eggs on the meat and in the center of each yolk lay thin slices of Stuffed Spanish Olives. To make the white sauce, melt 2 tablespoons butter, add 2 tablespoons flour and blend thoroughly. Gradually add 1 cup milk and ¼ teaspoon salt, and stir over hot water until thickened.

Fricasseed Veal on Toast: 2 lbs. veal cutlet; 2 cups bread crumbs; 2 tablespoons melted butter; ½ cup milk; 1 teaspoon salt; dash of pepper; 6 Preserved Sweet Gherkins, chopped.

Cut veal cutlet into six pieces, about twice as long as they are broad. Mix the bread crumbs, melted butter, milk, salt, pepper and chopped sweet gherkins. Spread a thin layer of this over the veal. Roll and fasten with skewers or toothpicks. Dredge with flour and fry until golden brown. Pour 2 cups thin white sauce around the rolls, cover and bake in a moderately hot oven—400 degrees F.—for 45 minutes. Baste frequently. To prepare the sauce, melt 2 tablespoons butter, add 2 tablespoons flour, stirring until smooth. Gradually add 2 cups milk and stir until thoroughly heated. Last add ½ teaspoon salt, a dash of pepper and several chopped sweet gherkins.

Flank Steak: About 2 lbs. flank steak; Aylor, F. H. Sebree, Hubert Ryle, R. P. Hughes, T. F. Helle, Sterling Rouse and others.

College of Agriculture circulars Nos 118 and 176 on the spray schedule and orchard management are available at the county agent's office at Burlington, free of charge on request.

FARMERS BUSY IN CORN PLANTING, SHEEP SHEARING

Boone county farmers are busy in corn planting and sheep shearing operations the past two weeks. While the rain the past week check ed the operations the central and south end of the county the north end of the county particularly north of Hebron, was not affected. The farmers in that section report that they have had little or no rain the past month.

The acute part in the corn planting operations this year was lack of Boone County White and Johnson County White seed corn from local sources. A number of growers who have made a speciality of growing seed of the above varieties report that their seed had been killed by early freezes the past two years. There is plenty of seed of other varieties of corn available locally. Some of the farmers who have reported they have good seed corn for sale include A. C. Johnson (Yellow Dent) Walton; Geo. Dennler (Yellow Dent) Burlington; J. M. Mathews (White and Yellow mixed), Burlington; D. R. Elliott, (Yellow Dent) Florence; J. W. Carpenter, (Yellow Dent) Richwood; Sterling Rouse, (Leaming) Limaburg; Clay Hensley, (Riley's Favorite) Petersburg and Robt. Graves Burlington scored their lone tally in the first when Snyder led off with a double and scored on a single by Connley. The final score was 10-1.

Hebron A Winner

In a loosely played game Hebron managed to eke out a victory over the stubborn Rabbit Hash team on the home grounds of the latter last Saturday afternoon by a one run margin. The final score was 8 to 7.

Brown opposed Brady on the hill, but neither possessed the skill that they have shown on some former occasions, although ten errors behind Brady and six behind Brown no doubt played a big part in their ineffectienessess.

Rabbit Hash was leading 7-4 as late as the sixth inning, but Hebron came thru in the seventh with a duo of tallies and again in the ninth with another pair to gain a slim margin of victory. With the bases full in the ninth and one down Bob Hayden Wilson took the mound and retired the side on three pitched balls, a double play, pitcher to home to first, doing the work.

FINE PEACH ORCHARD

Mr. J. C. Aylor, Burlington R. D. 3, has around 500 young Elberta Early Elberta, Carmen and Hale peach trees that are in their fifth growing year. They have made good growth and have an unusual heavy set of fruit on them this year.

Mr. Aylor has followed a recommended orchard program. Clean cultivation or the cultivation of the orchard each year has been practiced from the start. Careful attention has been given the training of the young trees to from three of five main scaffold consisting of one gallon of lime sulfur to 8 gallons of water. Branches a dormant spray for scale and leaf curl has been applied early each year. The result is that Mr. Aylor has one of the best young peach orchards in the county.

This year an exceptional heavy set of fruit is to be found. Unless the June drop plays an important part some thinning of the fruit may be necessary. Mr. Aylor has already applied one fruit spray and was ready for the second early this week. The first two sprays consisting of 1 pound of arsenate of lead and 4 pounds of lime to 50 gallons of water are for curculio or peach worm. The next spray applied a month after the bloom have fallen is for scab, brown rot and curculio. Ready prepared sulfur-lime mix 1 pound of arsenate of lead to 50 gallons of water will be used in this spray. Sulfur-mix is a different product from regular lime sulfur-lime mix, sprays may be applied later for the control of brown rot. These sprays will be applied as necessary.

There are a number of other young peach orchards in the county where the owners are following a similar program. A few of them are owned by C. O. and Chas. Hempfling, C. L. Hempfling, Frank McGlasson, Doc Goodridge, E. J.

Add 2 tablespoons Prepared Mustard; 1 teaspoon salt, 2 cups dry bread crumbs; ¼ cup melted butter; ½ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon pepper; ¾ cup milk.

Remove some of excess fat from meat, and score both sides. Rub mustard and vinegar into steak and let stand two or three hours. Mix the crumbs, butter, milk, salt and pepper and spread on one side of steak. Roll tightly and fasten with skewers or toothpicks. Fry in butter until brown. Pour 3 cups water around roll, cover, and bake for 1½ hours. Cut crosswise and serve with gravy that remains in the pan.

Spaghetti and Dried Beef: 1 large can Cooked Spaghetti; 1/2 lb. dried beef; 2 tablespoons butter; ¼ cup milk; ¾ cup bread crumbs.

Shred dried beef and brown in melted butter. In a buttered casserole, place a layer of cooked spaghetti, thin alternate layers of beef and spaghetti. Pour milk on top, and spread with buttered bread crumbs. Bake at 400 degrees F. for about 30 minutes.

Goldsmith Pact Sold

Oliver Goldsmith's agreement to write a "new natural history of animals," dated 1769, was sold at London for $1,025. Under the agreement Goldsmith was to be paid 800 guineas (about $4,000) to write the eight volumes.

Work of Madison

James Madison proposed the resolutions for the creation of the first three executive departments, and a series of 12 amendments to the Constitution, out of which the first ten were finally adopted.

Jobs

Most men want to climb to the top, but continually changing ladders is not making progress. Concentrate on the job you have. Learn it to the last detail; give it your best, and you will find that you are on the ladder to success.—Grit.

Deputy Sheriff W. B. Cotton and family have moved from the W. R. Rogers property on Jefferson St. into the handsome residence purchased from Dr. M. A. Yelton by F. H. Rouse.

Mrs. Mabel G. Sayre, Secretary of the Boone Co. Red Cross Chapter, together with Miss Eunie B. Willis, Red Cross County Nurse, attended a luncheon in Lexington last Saturday May 2nd, held for the State Red Cross workers and their local chapter officials. At this meeting interesting reports were given by the threeNurses of the county chapters of Woodford, Boyle and Montgomery counties who attended the recent National Red Cross Convention at Washington.

Mrs. Sayre and Miss Willis then went on to Berea, Ky., for Sunday, visiting Miss Lorena Hafer, Supt., of the College Hospital there and Field Director of the American Red Cross, for Kentucky.

Last Wednesday evening Miss Nell Martin entertained with a six o'clock dinner for Mrs. R. L. Clutterbuck and son. Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Bodker and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Renaker.

Mrs. G. C. Jarrell left Tuesday for Cincinnati where she will undergo treatment for goitre at Christ Hospital preparatory to an operation.

Mr. and Mrs. John Lassing, Jr., and little daughter, Mary Lina, Mrs. J. M. Lassing, Sr., and W. F. Hensley, returned last week from St. Petersburg, Florida.

The Hebron school has a class in Bible study and, as is their habit over there, they displayed their "class" in that subject also.

The class was under the direction of Miss Mary Bess Cropper and study covers a period of seven weeks. The classes are directed under the auspices of the State Y. W. C. A., and each year all classes in the state undergo examinations.

This year Miss Cropper's class was placed in Group Two, with 94 schools in the group. Now comes the story—Miss Cropper's class finished first in the group, a silver loving cup being their reward.

Mark Cook, of Camp Ernst road, near Burlington, has accepted a position as clerk in D. R. Blythe's store. Mr. Blythe is fortunate in securing a man of Mr. Cook's ability, which he satisfactorily demonstrated to the Boone county public during the four years that he served as Deputy County Clerk under A. G. McMullen during his first term of office. Now, if Mr. Blythe gets all of the "cooks" into his grocery department, Mark should be in line for a sharp advance in salary.

Church League Results

The Recorder sports editor received only a few of the results of the games in the church league this week, which are published herewith Bullitsville defeated Petersburg 9-2, in a well played game. The attendance at the Bullittsville Sunday school was 101. Burlington-port defeated Bullittsburg 14-8. Attendance at Bullittsburg 81. Hebron defeated Waterloo 11-5. Attendance at Hebron Sunday 98. With the co-operation of some one from each Sunday school in the county this can be made an interesting column each week. The league standing cannot be published until we have the complete results of all games played. Burlington defeated Big Bone 21 to 4. Burlington attendance at Sunday School 153.

The latest report from "Lefty" Sprague was that he had turned in a one hit game. Since he is the property of the Cincinnati Club it might not be a bad guess to say that he may some day be sifting them over for the Queen City aggregation, if he keeps up the work that he has been doing out west this spring. Somebody said that he might help them now, but none of Sprague's friends would wish him that kind of luck this year.

SHEEP MEETING

The first Kentucky native Lamb Improvement Conference will be held at the College of Agriculture, Lexington, this coming Friday, May 22nd. The program will begin at 9:30 a. m., and will be held in connection with the fifth annual meeting of the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Growers Association. One of hte best program line gotten together to-date is promised by Mr. R. C Miller, secretary of the meeting.

Lamb grading demonstration, lamb butchering demonstrations and factors pertaining to the production o fprime lambs at low cost will be discussed by a number of prominent sheep authorities. The speakers on the program includes E. S. Matherson of Swift & Company, C. W. McDonald of Iowa State College; J. W. Burch, of Missouri; B. J. Creech of West Va., B. H. LaVoi of Michigan, James Lacy of Wisconsin, Dr. C. D. Lowe of Washington D. C., and others.

A number of Boone county sheep men are interested in attending the above meeting. Parts of the county tre particularly adapted to sheep raising. Our problem is one of producing the highest quality market lambs at lowest cost production. The meeting promises to be one of interest. The county agt. has been making arrangements for several farmers to go down to the meeting together. He will be glad to hear from all farmers who are interested.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—It is a family affair when Billy Arnold, winner of last year's 500-mile race, rolls to the starting tape to defend his championship honors in the running of the event this year, on May 30, at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, in the front wheel drive car entered by Harry Hartz.

Harry's pretty wife and Billy's young mother, frequently identified as his sister, sit in a front row box immediately across the track from the Arnold-Hartz pit.

Billy's younger brother, a copy boy on a Chicago newspaper, helps Harry in the pit while Billy whirls around the two-and-one-half brick and concrete speed ribbon.

They have a big reunion after the race. Last May it was unusually large after Billy won the race with Harry's car.

Leon Duray, Indianapolis Record Holder, Returns to 500-Mile Contest May 30

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Leon Duray, who rode the fastest lap ever driven over the two-and-one-half brick and concrete course at Indianapolis—124.018 miles an hour—returns to racing after a retirement of one year when he competes in the International 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Duray, a husky, speed blown veteran will be making his first ride in many years in two man cars—demanding riding mechanic as well as pilot—when he drives at Indianapolis this year. The new rule was established last year.

He is one of the oldest of the present crop of speeders and is regarded as one of the most spectacular pilots of all time. His driving in the lap which was the fastest ever breezed over the Indianapolis bricks is regarded as the most perfect circle of the track ever made.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., May—Four previous winners of 500-mile races are scheduled to stage a race within a race in the Nineteenth running of the 500-mile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, May 30.

Billy Arnold, youthful winner of last year's race; Louis Meyer, winner in 1928, Peter De Paolo, 1925 victor are all set for the contest and Ralph De Palma is making definite plans to enter a new car.

De Palma and De Paolo are uncle and nephew but kinship is forgotten on the track. De Paolo holds the track record for 500-miles with an average of 101.13 miles an hour.

Korean lespedeza seed will be grown on a commercial basis in every community in Henderson county. C. tified seed was rown.

GOOD POULTRY PRACTICES PAY

Good poultry practices still pay even in times of depression and low priced eggs according to the April reports of four demonstration poultry flocks on which complete records are kept in cooperation with the county agent. The flocks are owned by Grant Maddox, of Florence, Mrs. L. R. Miller, Big Bone, Kile & Purdy, Burlington R. D. 2, and R. and N. Chambers, of Walton. They represent 946 birds consisting of Rhode Island Reds, White Rocks, Wyandottes and Leghorns.

The flock owners received for their labor income from $16.61 on 46 hens to $131.55 on 233 hens. There was considerable variation in the labor income per hen in the individual flocks during the month. Eggs sold from 13c per dozen to 22c per dozen. The feed fed the young stock was charged against the flock. The number of hours of labor required in caring for the flocks during the month varied from 30 to 200 hours.

Poultry like many other enterprises are not paying many farmers at the present time. Good practices properly managed at the same time are paying dividends. A time of low prices requires greater efficiency and economy in production. One of the above poultrymen who is breeding 1600 head of young stock this spring is giving extra time and care in brooding. He is burning two weeks more fuel and is giving more hours on labor in watching temperatures, cleaning houses and keeping the chicks supplied with an abundance of clean fresh feed and water. His aim is fewer chick losses and quicker and more economical gains with strong vigorous healthy chicks.

KOREAN SHOWS UP

Mr. Joel Gray of near Burlington, is a bit proud about a 15-acre field of Korean lespedeza on his farm. He says that he does not know what it is going to make before the year is over but it sure is making a fine start.

Mr. Gray seeded a mixture of four pounds of sapling (red) clover, four pounds of sweet clover, four pounds of Japan clover and four pounds of Korean clover per acre last spring a year ago with oats. The oats did not make sufficient growth so they were grazed off during the drouth. This spring the only thing left was the Korean. While grazed fairly close last year there is a splendid stand. Having no sweet or red clover this spring he had decided to plow the field. In the mean time the Korean came up. Now he is going to leave the entire field for a pasture or hay crop.

KOREAN

Many farmers were interested in seeding Korean lespedeza this spring but the price was considered too high. During the last few weeks the price has dropped almost half. It has dropped to a point where it will be a good deal cheaper than many of the other clovers. It is still time to seed this crop if the ground is given a light harrowing and the seed a light covering.

Farmers who are interested in seeding a small acreage of this crop and have not secured their seed may do so from the Farm Bureau in Florence where a limited supply of seed is available.

'POSSUM HOLLOW

A large crowd attended the funeral of Mrs. Tom Stephens at Big Bone Baptist church Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harmond Tanner spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Black.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Aylor and family spent the day with Mr. Jno. Satchwell, who has been very sick for some time. Glad to hear that he is improving.

Sorry to hear that Uncle Billie Shinkle is feeling bad again.

Mrs. May Hubbard is improving at this time.

Albert White spent Sunday afternoon with Otho Hubbard pitching horse shoes, and there were Geo. Harris and son. Bill joined them in their pitching.

There was a large crowd attended the W. M. U. at Mrs. Lucy Ryle's Thursday.

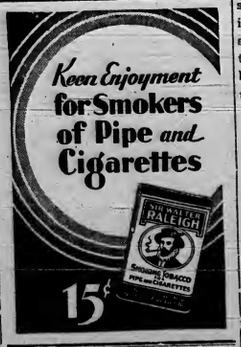
Nationalism, like any form of individualism, must be exercised in harmony with the whole of humanity, just as collectivism must provide for the full development of each human unit composing it.—Exchange.

PECAN PLANT RASPBERRIES

Mr. Wilford Stedman and Cecil Conner, of Hebron, members of Boone County Utopia Club each planted an acre of Latham raspberries in their Utopia club project work. The plants were put out during March and April and are making splendid growth.



Raspberries and a number of other small fruit and truck enterprises give promise of bearing considerable expansion in Boone county if properly managed. The above Utopians are going in raspberries on a large scale to give the project a try out.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Farmers In Northern Boone County Suffer From Storm Damage

ENTIRE CROPS OF TOBACCO AND CORN WASHED AWAY—SOME TOBACCO GROWERS HAVE FEW PLANTS FOR RESETTING — GARDENS HARD HIT—

A storm vented its fury upon the farmers in the northern section of the county Monday night and left in its wake devastation that might be likened to some of the storms of nation wide notoriety in its ferocity and the comparative damage inflicted.

In Petersburg for instance, a little town noted for its fine, productive gardens, not a garden spot was left in the same thrifty condition, in fact most of them were wiped out entirely. This alone is an appalling item of loss in a small town.

There is no way of computing the total losses farmers in the Petersburg and upper Belleview bottoms at this time,as itemized notes have not been taken, but it means a great deal to say that all crops of corn, consisting in many instances of forty to fifty acres, were washed away. Whole crops of tobacco gone---and in some cases no plants left for re-setting.

Where these crops belonged to tenants it means more than words can speak, especially following a year of such depression and drouth as was seen last year.

INJURIES

RESULTING FROM FALL FROM WAGON ARE FATAL TO GROVER YORK, 38, GRANGE HALL COMMUNITY

Death came to Grover York, of the Grange Hall neighborhood, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. York was 38 years old and a veteran of the World War, also a member of Boone Post No. 4, American Legion.

Several days ago while Mr. York was driving a farm wagon it broke down suddenly, throwing him to the ground with terrific force. He sustained severe bruises and internal injuries. Prior to his death he suffered violent hemorrhages.

Wednesday morning of last week the remains were removed to Bethel Cemetery near Falmouth, where he was laid to rest beside his mother.

He is survived by his father, Frank York, and other relatives and friends.

Local News

All banks in Boone county will observe Saturday, Decoration Day, a legal holiday.

The Recorder made an error in its last issue when it stated that no Burlington student ever had attained the honor of winning the Rouse Medal. Miss Margaret Hughes took the prize in 1911. However, the writer, as stated in the story, emphasized the fact that he had not searched farther back than 1920.

Harold Conner, local greyhound fancier, sold last week to Joe Glaze of Miami, Florida, three of his thoroughbred racers. Mr. Conner still has some of the best dogs in the country in his kennels and expects to race them near Cincinnati this summer. He had splendid success in Florida last winter.

Howard Kirkpatrick, who has set more lines of news for the Recorder than any other man living, is enjoying a much needed vacation. "Jake," as everyone knows him, has been on the job for the Recorder for about 30 years (he won't tell anyone the truth about it) and during all that time he never has had what might honestly be termed a vacation. "Jake" always has liked the big outdoors, but, strangely enough, picked an inside job for his life's work. For the next few weeks he will visit with his niece, Mrs. Lamar Congleton, on their farm a few miles west of town.

Mrs. Herbert Snyder and Miss Hazel Cubbage left Sunday for Louisville, where Mrs. Snyder will visit her father, J. C. Bolen. Miss Cubbage will remain in Louisville during the stay of Mrs. Snyder, after which Mrs. Snyder will accompany her to her home at Vine Grove, Ky., for a short visit. Miss Cubbage will spend the summer months with her parents at Vine Grove. Miss Cubbage has completed two terms here as assistant principalsof Boone High School and her work has been most satisfactory. However, she will not return to Burlington next year, as she has obtained a fine position closer to her home.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler spent Friday with their son, Jerry L. Fowler and wife at Hebron.

Wallace Rice and wife spent Sunday as the guests of Mr. Rice's parents, Ed Rice and wife, and sister, Mrs. Lallie Eddins.

A number of local people attended the Sixth District P. T. A. meeting, which was held at Ludlow last Friday, May 22.

Mrs. Lorena Cropper spent a few days last week with her daughter, Mrs. Chester Grant and Mr. Grant, of near Idlewild.

The Burlington second team won over the Limaburg sluggers on the home lot last Sunday by the close score of 6 to 4.

Mrs. Grant Williamson and sons spent Thursday with her sister, Mrs. Irvin Rue, at the home of Mr. and Msr. Rue in Norwood.

W. C. Hughes, local mail carrier, and oldest in point of service in this section, is the owner of a new Chevrolet roadster.

W. A. Pettit, Stanley Easton and Newton Sullivan, Jr., spent last Sunday at Redland Field, Cincinnati, where they witnessed the Reds double header between the Reds and the St. Louis Cardinals. Incidentally they saw the Reds break the persistent Cardinal "jinx," which had pursued them since one year ago last July.

W. T. Allison and son of Ft. Thomas, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Claude Greenup.

SURPRISING

DEFEAT BY SHUT-OUT SCORE IS RESULT OF WALTON-BELLVIEW CONTEST—IRISH NORMAN, COVINGTON HURLER, IS TOO GOOD—

(By Hot Shot)

Saturday the league leading Walton club invaded the Belleview ball orchard, and neatly, but artistically, hung nine horse collars around the necks of Hensley's pets. This Walton aggregationin proving to be one tough hombre for Boone County opposition, as their nearest approach of defeat this season being a ten inning tie with Hebron in the initial game of the season.

Irish Norman , Walton's sturdy side-wheeler, was in fine form and hel the har hitting Belleview club to seven hits while causing ten to churn the air, Wild Bill Rogers was on the rubber for Belleview an after allowin gone run in the 1rst inning on a double and single settled down to pitch sterling ball, only to weaken near the finish. Bill was touched for 14 hits all told and struck out six. Rogers was removed in the ninth inning after retiring one man in favor of Ben Black, who retire m dehtsdie etaoln mbb who retired the side with two strikeouts.

BUNTS, BINGLES, ERRORS

Decoration Day afternoon Walton will visit the Petersburg Park to cross bats with the natives of that village in a league scheduled game. This game should be one of the best of the season, as Petersburg will have fire-ball Boehler on the mound with Klopp on the receiving end. This capable battery will be opposed by either Irish Norman or Cannon-ball Thomas on the rubber with Peck Shearer donning the catching outfit.

Roland Glenn smashed out three hits Saturay and played a bang-has played at the second. Ayers was satisfity answers a manager's dream like a sheik answers an old maid's prayer. He can play any infield position well and when it comes to casting he is hard to trim.

Wild Bill Rogers, Belleview's pitching ace, is rapidly developing into one of the best flingers in the county. Bill possesses an abundance of deception and has stamina to back it up. When Rogers acquires the pitching knowledge, which comes only by experience and better control of the apple, he is going to be one tough egg to beat. Wild Bill's pitching should serve as a criterion to all interested in the development of Boone County ball players.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS

The Boone County Woman's Club met Thursday afternoon, May 21, at the home of Miss Pearl Botts.

Quite a number of the members were present who enjoyed the occasion.Sorry some could not attend the meeting.

A very interesting program was rendered, though several who were on the program were present.

The writer hopes the members will attend the next meeting to be held June 25, week later than the usual time of meeting. Mrs. Missouris Rice will entertain the club at that time.

TWO VICTORIES

FOR SECOND DIVISION TEAMS AGAINST LOSS FOR BURLINGTON LEAVES LATTER ALONE IN CELLAR—BOEHLER BEING GROOMED TO STOP WALTON—

Who said they wouldn't?

Some of the best boosters of the Rabbit Hash Club in the Boone County League, after three straight losses, had become pessimistic, some even said that they had been heard to hint that their performance of last year might be repeated, to-wit: to lose every game on the schedule after having won the opener.

But this year's nine from the East Bend metropolis is a much improved baseball team and one that is likely, in fact certain, to give any team in this league some very stiff competition in every game.

Last Saturday although aided by some of the most erratic playing any ball club ever displayed, they were able to take advantage of their opponents' wabbles, taking care to commit none of their own. Anyway they came out on the long end of a 9-5 score and that is what counts after all. Their fielding certainly left nothing to be desired.

Neither team was shy in the pitching line as the brilliant curve baller, Joe Brady, was on the hill for Rabbit Hash and, aside from one bad inning, Joe was all there. On the hill for Burlington was a Mr. Tucker from down Ludlow way. Two years ago he played third base for Burlington and was recognized as quit a neat performer. Somehow or other it was learned that he could pitch and those who came out to the Burlington park last week to look him over found out that he could.

The nine-run score of the visitors means nothing out in the final analysis, when it is taken into consideration that Rabbit Hash made ex-Brady. Behind the ... ton disciples of the national pastime committed no less than nine costly errors, some of which were of the most ridiculous nature.

Tucker has a nice reportoire of curves and fast ones and nice control. Even decent support would have saved his game for him.

The loss was a sad one to Burlington, as it placed them in sole command o the cellar, while the victory boosted Rabbit Hash into a commanding position in the race.

There is one thing very noticeable in glancing at the Rabbit Hash line-up and that is it is typically a Rabbit Hash team, as Ryles, Wilson and Stephenses make up almost the entire line-up. A Hodges, or two, and it would be complete.

After losing two games in a row the Petersburg team handed the fast moving Hebronites a sock on the chin last Saturday afternoon on the home lot of the latter nine.

Although the weather was rather chilly Boehler zipped them across with such tantalizing regularity that he let Hebron down with two runs and five hits over the regulation distance. Brown was not such a puzzle to Petersburg and they solved his delivery for nine hits, all singles, and five runs, Boehler's mates gave him an early lead and he never appeared to be in serious danger. The Indiana twirler halted his opponents with 4 bingles, one a double, and neither flinger permitted a pass.

The hitting stars were Boehler, Matthews, Bradburn and L. Hitzfield, for Petersburg, each accounting for a duo of singles, while Brown hit a double and a single for Hebron.

Next Saturday the Petersburg team will have its hands plent full when they entertain the league leaders in their own front yard. Walton has been going at a dizzy clip, while the Petersburg team has been more or less an enigma to Boone county fans. Many thought that, with the acquisition of Boehler,, that Petersburg would be invincible, but a couple of his efforts in the chilly spring breezes have been rather ineffective. Many good baseball men, however, predict that with the arrival of warmer weather that Boehler will mow down Boone county opposition like Father Time's scythe.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Riddell moved Wednesday from their flat over the Building into their new home on Washington street.

A fine pointer belonging to deputy sheriff W. B. Cotton was killed by an automobile last Sunday.

Kishmee Grotto Team Guests At Walton's Big Masonic Meeting

THREE CANDIDATES INITIATED —PAST GRAND MASTER PRESIDES— GUESTS ATTEND FROM FAR AWAY SASKATCHEWAN

The membership of the Walton Masonic Lodge staged one of the greatest fraternal meetings ever before held in this county at Walton last Saturday night.

Three candidates were initiated in the Master degree, namely Elmer C. Werks, D. L. Maddox and Florian Lusby.

The degree was exemplified by a team from the Kishmee Grotto, of Covington, who sent their degree team, their drill team and their band. Before the meeting the teams and band staged a parade on the streets of the town.

Forty seven lodges were represented from as far away as Lower Saskatchewan, Canada. At least half a dozen states were represented. More than two hundred were said to have been present.

J. F. Hawkins master of the Walton lodge, gav way to C. S. Rankin, of Newpo past Grand Master of Kentuc y, who presided at the meeting.

It was said that every lodge in Boone county also was represented at the meet

Deaths

RITA MILLER

Rita Miller ,aged 12 years, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford M. Miller passed away early Saturday morning at Good Samaritan Hospital, Cincinnati. The remains were brought to the home of her parents, 30 Clay street, Erlanger. Funeral services were conducted at St. Henrys Church Tuesday morning, with requiem high mass at 9 o'clock by Rev. George C. Bealer, pastor, after which she was laid to rest in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Rita is survived by, her parents, three younger sisters, her grandmother ,Mrs. Mary Zumbiel, and a host of other relatives and friends who mourn her untimely passing.

Six little girls acted as honorary pall bearers. The active pall bearers being her uncles James, John and William Zumbiel and her cousins Charles, Robert and Richard Zumbiel.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

THREE TEAMS

WIN 4-H CLUB HONORS IN CONTESTS AT BURLINGTON LAST SATURDAY —RESULTS SHOW SPLENDID TRAINING

Hebron, Constance and Mt. Zion 4-H Clubs were winners in the 4-H Farm and Home Practice Demonstration Teams contests, girls' sewing style show contest and boys' 4-H health contest held at Burlington Hi school last Saturday afternoon. The X-Li-All Club of Florence was runner up in the contests and showed outstanding sportsmanship and training.

Miss Adelia Riddell and Miss Helen Grant assisted by Miss Dorothy Conner representing the Norbeh Champion 4-H Club of Hebron scored highest and won first among the Home Practice Demonstrations. The Hebron team demonstrated "Changing the Linens on the Bed of a Patient Using a Few Simple Improvised pieces of Equipment Found in Every Home." The following clubs had entries in the Home Practice Contest: Corncrackers, Norbeh Champions, X-Li-Alls and Mt. Zion Eagles.

Messrs. Omer and Gilbert Dolwick of the Constance Corncrackers 4-H Club won first place among the Farm Practice Demonstrations. Their demonstration, "Three Most Practical Methods for Farmers To Test Their Seed Corn," was scored slightly higher by the judges than the demonstrations "The Demonstration Dairy Herd,"by Mt. Zion Eagles or "Five Steps in the Clean Chick Program" by the Norbeh Champions.

Miss Ruth Tanner of the Mt. Zion Eagles won first place in the girls' sewing club style show. Her costume made in Unit IV Sewing work was a beautiful blue tailored outfit with handbag, hat and handerchief hand-made to match. The complete costume was made at a cost of $12. Miss Ester Kottymer of the Corncracer Club and Miss Dorety Conner of Norbeh Champion Club were other members who exhibited outstanding 4-H costumes in the show.

Mr. Woodward Crigler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Crigler of Hebron and member of the Norben Champion 4-H Club scored highest in the health contest and was declared Boone county's most healthy 4-H Club boy for 1931. Gregory Rasser of the X-Li-All Club and Gilbert Dolwic of the Corncracer Club were other high scoring members in the contest.

Each of the winners in the county contests will represent the county in the state contests held at the University of Kenucy, Lexington, June 8th to the 13th. The L. & N. Railroad and the Early Daniels Feed Company of Cincinnati are co-operating by offering prize scholarship trips to Junior Week to the winners in the contests.

CHURCH LEAGUE SCORES

Bullittsville defeated Sand Run 9-6 in a church league game last Saturday afternoon. The attendance at Bullittsville was 113. Burlington downed Idlewild 9-5, attendance at Burlington 148. Big Bone, having the bye with Boone county teams this week, journey down to Warsaw and handed that team a defeat by a 6-4 score. Big Bone also showed a remarkable attendance at Sunday School last week when 128 turned out. Rev. Johnson is very enthusiastic over the way the church league has increased the interest in his Sunday School, saying that his attendance has increased more than 100 per cent.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Gulley and James Pettit and wife spent Sunday with Sam Pettit and family on Gunpowder.

There will be a Junior Order meeting at the school house in Hebron on Thursday night, May 28th. There will be a good speaker and lunch after the meeting.

WHITE HAVEN

WILL BE NAME OF NEW CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL BETWEEN UNION AND BEAVER—NAMED FOR ACADEMY WHICH STILL STANDS TODAY

Several weeks ago the Recorder carried an item requesting suggestions for a name for the new consolidated school, which is to be located on the new Federal Highway about midway between Union and Beaver.

The school board has adopted the well-known name of White Haven, derived from the famous academy by that name.

This old academy, now owned by J. L. Fraser, cashier of the Union Deposit Bank, is situated near the new school and still is in a good state of preservation.

So White Haven Consolidated School it shall be in the present and future generations, and not White Haven Academy, as it was known in the past.

THE HORSE COMES BACK

The day of the horses as motive power on the farm is far from becompiled by the Minnesota agriculing over. Some recent figures, tural authorities, show that for a great many kinds of farm work, which used to be done by horses but lately have been done by motors, the horse is again the cheaper motive power. Oats and hay are selling for the lowest prices in years. Even though gasoline is down, there are a great many farmers who are finding it now more economical to use horses.

On the other hand, race horses and riding horses are more expensive than ever before. The United States Army is finding it difficult to get enough high-grade horses, part thoroughbred, for cavalry remounts. Numerous sales of saddle horses, or co-called steeplechase or hunter type, have been made in the east at prices ranging above $3,000 apiece. Horses of a similar type and quality were easily purchasable for $500 or $600 until a few years ago.

There is still money in the horse. There is money for the breeder of thoroughbreds and saddle stock, and there is profit for the farmer who can utilize horses instead of motors. Probably there never will be a time when the small farmer will not use horses, especially in rough or hilly country. A farm to the youngsters, but older people feel that it is not a real farm, without horses may look all right There is nothing about a tractor to get sentimental about. A horse has inidividuality and character, and often becomes one of the family.

JESUS CRUCIFIED

Rev. Samuel D. Pribe, D. D.

Here is the most meaningful event in history. Nothing else has been written about as much. The entire social complex of the nations has been changed thereby. The approach to the cruelty that was enacted just outside the walls of Jerusalem began when Judas came forward with his kiss of betrayal as Jesus had completed His preparatory prayer season in the Garden of Gethsemane.

Many think that Calvary, the place of the skull, was just north of the Damascus gate and that it could not be at the site of the present Church of the Holy Sepulchre which is within the city. Two thieves were crucified with Him. Look through the accounts in the four gospels and make note of the Seven Words or sayings from the cross. He certainly was a kindly man who could say under such circumstances, "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Then followed six trials that were packed with illegalities. Three were before Jewish authorities and three under the auspices of the Roman government. Pilate sought to evade the issue and even offerd to release Jesus, but Barabbas was chosen for freedom according to the custom at the Jewish Passover.

When all was over the Centurion gave his testimony as he declared: "Truly this man was the son of God." The Bible teaches that Jesus Christ was making an atonement or the sins of the world. The Golden Text is plain: "He was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities; the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.' Isaiah 53.:5.

The Family Garden

THE MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE

(By John S. Gardner, Ky. College of Agriculture)

The opinion prevails that because the crop of garden beans last year was short, this year's crop of bean beetles should be short too. Although this may happen, it is scarcely safe to be too sure about it, for enough of the beetles may have survived to give quite some trouble.

The cool nights have made the beans grow slowly and many of them show insect injury. Since it is too early for the Mexican bean beetle it is likely that the cucumber beetle and the Southern bean beetle are the offenders. The holes they make in the leaves are roundish, and they are cut clean through.

Although the warm weather enables the beans to grow out of this damage, it may be wise to administer a poisonous dust or spray. The spray is made of a tablespoonful of magnesium arsenate and a gallon of water. For a larger quantity use a pound of magnesium arsenate and 50 gallons of water.

The dust to use is any one of the commercial bean beetle dusts, provided the poison carrier is calcium arsenate, and provided that it amounts to at least 16 percent of the mixture. Such a dust is safe as regards leaf burning and has quick killing power.

For beetles that cause the round holes, the spray or dust may be applied anywhere on the leaves, and one application is usually enough.

The true Mexican bean bettle, on the other hand, stays and feeds and eeds on beans until they are totally destroyed. This makes it necessary to follow a definitely laid-down spraying schedule.

The first few adult beetles to appear in the spring do relatively little harm, eating merely enough to support them until the eggs are laid. This occurs in from 6 to 15 days after the beetles first come. The eggs hatih in aout 10 days into the ravenous, spiny larve with which everybody is acquainted. If the gardener has delayed until hatching is completed he is faced with an almost impossible job.

An early start is essential, and the first application of dust or spray should be made when the first egg clusters appear. These are pale found on the undersides of the leaves.

Ten days after the first, the second should follow, whether damage is seen or not. Two such applications have given over 92 percent of control. Each lot of beans should be so treated. The materials are those given earlier in this article.

Since the Mexican bean beetle almost always attacks from the undersides of the leaves, the control material should be put there too, with equipment whose nozzles are upturned.

MARKET DEMANDS HIGH QUALITY STRAWBERRIES

It will be especially important to market high quality strawberries this year, says a statement issued by C. D. Phillips of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, to strawberry marketing associations. With a generaly weakened buying demand for strawberries existing this spring, the premium paid for quality products should be good. Poor quality berries, when placed on the fresh fruit market, cause wide differentials in price and lower the general price level of all berries. Standardization of quality, therefore, is important in preparing strawberries for market.

Strawberry marketing associations are endeavoring to secure high quality products by several methods and with varying degrees of success. Most associations send written instructions to members just prior to the picking season, in order to encourage better sorting of berries and to standardize the method of preparing them for market. A few associations hold packing demonstrations in the field or at the delivery points. In all instances, inspection is provided and the berries are graded upon receipt at points of delivery.

Plating the baskets of berries is also practiced in order to improve the appearance and to enhance value. This practice is apparently desirable and results in higher prices. It is important, however, that plating not be used to cover up poor quality fruit in the bottom of the baskets and also that all baskets in the crate be plated.

From all indications strawberry in their campaign to improve qualassociations are making progress in their campaign to improve quality. Improvement in the quality of marketable strawberries can only be brought about slowly as strawberry growers and shippers gain a better understanding of market requirements and their significance.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of June 1. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

June 1—Timely dairy hints, Fordyce Ely.

Poultry pointers for June, J. E. Humphrey.

Maintaining the beef cow, W. J. Harris.

June 5—What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

Alfalfa withstood the drouth and promises to make a good hay crop in Meade county. One farmer thinks he will cut a ton and a half to the acre the first cutting.

River bottom farmers in Boone county are interested in sweet clover. It is seeded with wheat in the spring, cutt for hay, grazed in the fall, and pastured or turned under as a green mature crop the following spring.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

CORNED BEEF HASH

Mix equal quantities of coarsely chopped cold corned beef and cold boiled potatoes. Season with onion juice salt and pepper, and put in a pan containing melted butter and hot water enough to moisten the hash. Handle carefully, always, in order to keep the potatoes unbroken. Cover and simmer until a crust has formed and then turn out, crust up. Garnish with crisp sprays of parsley.

BANANA BROWN BETTY

3 cups bread, diced; 3 tablespoons butter, 2 apples, 3 bananas, ¾ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon cinnamon.

Cut bread into dice and saute with butter until bread cubes are brown. Peel apples and bananas and cut very thin and dredge same with sugar mixed with cinnamon. Cover bottom of baking dish with the bread add fruit and remaining bread in alternate layers, saving a few of the crumbs to covered and last fifteen minutes put on top. Bake one-half hour uncovered in a modern oven 375 degrees.

BANANA MOUSSE

3 tablespoons sugar, 1 whole egg, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 cup milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 well-ripened bananas, crushed; 1 cup cream, whipped, or 1 cup evaporated milk.

Beat egg well. Add sugar, stir in flour, add milk and cook until thick over hot water. Cool. Add vanilla, crushed banana, whipped cream or evaporated milk and blend well. Place in automatic refrigerator tray or pack in salt and ice and freeze about three hours or until set.

Lee county is expecting a good grape crop. Farmers cooperating with the county agent will spray

At least 75 Letcher county farmers will grow sorghum cane this year. Gardens in the county will average two to three times the usual size.

Bourbon county farmers will sow theirtheir largest acreage of soy beans, while the alfafa acreage was doubed, in an effort to produce an ample feed supply.

Fruit prospects are good in Kenton county, and farmers are giving extra attention to spraying and other practices which tend to improve the quality.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

OTHER PEOPLE'S SUCCESS

We went to the opening night of a play. Between the acts we were talking with the author when a friend rushed up. "It's going to be a great success, old man," he cried. "I congratulate you."

Then his expression suddenly changed. Jealously shot into his eyes. "I wish I knew how you get away with it," he exclaimed. "Why in the world can't I write a play?"

As he walked away we looked after him with pity. We know him well. We have seen him act the same way before. His whole attitude is introspective. Envy gnaws forever at his soul.

One of the most pathetic figures in the literary history of England was the author George Gissing. What was the secret of his constant unhappiness? He reveals a part of it in presenting the hero of one of his own novels:

Intensely self-conscious, he suffered from a habit of comparing, contrasting himself with other men, with men who achieved things, who made their way, who played their part in the world. He could not read a newspaper without reflecting, sometimes bitterly, on the careers and position of men whose names were prominent in its columns.

Philosophers and religious teachers have attempted in various ways to account for the gross inequalities of life, and to hold out future hope to those who seem to have receled only a niggardly portion of happiness.

Christian theology presents the promise of another world where rewards will be distributed in proportion to sacrifice, courage and fidelity to truth.

The reincarnationist holds that the soul is but a short time tenant in any human frame; that if I make spiritual progress in this incarnation I shall reappear in happier form; or, failing to progress, will be demoted, to work my way painfully up again.

Until we have passed across the River we shall not know which, if either, of these philosophies is true.

Meanwhile, the sensile man is not afraid to face frankly the facts about life and about himself. He recognizes that he was born with certain limitations; that, however strong the desire for brilliant achievement, he has neither the talent nor the opportunity. He recognizes further that success, as the world views it, contain a very appreciable element of chance.

He surveys his own equipment and tries serenely to do the best he can with whatever he has. As he grows older and more mellow, he recognizes that every minute of jealousy poisons his own soul.

And that he can vastly increase his own pleasure by the habit of enjoying other people's success.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

POSSIBILITIES IN BLOOD-PRESSURE

I have frequently had patients assure me, "no, doctor, I haven't any blood-pressure," meaning that they have no high tension in that department. I generally correct them gently, by saying that a man with no blood-pressure is dead! For all beings with circulation have "blood-pressure."

The condition—high or low—is but a symptom; and high arterial tension may be a very serious symptom, if its cause is found in the kidneys. It will only relax with the cure of the diseased organs. And cure is in some cases impossible, when the renal disease is too far advanced to correct.

So, if blood-pressure is far above normal, I immediately look after the kidneys; you should do the same.

The "change in life" in middle-aged women, is sometimes accompanied by a very high arterial tension, but I regard this sort of manifestation curable, if taken in time—that is, before a brain hemorrhage, or another ugly thing has set up. This possibility means, keep close to your physician in such crises—it will pay.

Certain nervous states cause high blood-pressure; others bring low tension. Weakened, relaxed muscles usually induce low pressure. Both phases of human existence usually respond to treatment, and should not cause alarm. The hrases of human existence usually respond to treatment, and should not cause alarm. The hardened arteries of the aged cause what may be termed normal high tension, which rarely does harm or produces alarming symptoms.

Diet, it seems to me, has been considerably overworked in the matter of high tension. I recommend eating moderately, rather than to cut out food that the patient really needs. The meat bugaboo is passing, as I believe it properly should, except in cases of severe kidney disorder. Meats are of too much importance in the human economy to condemn in a routine way.

You should have your blood-pressure reading recorded "at least twice a year," regardless of "your dentist."

Beautiful Attic Sculpture

The so-called "Victory of Samothrace" is the "Goddess of Victory," excavated by French archeologists who were at work between 1863-67. The "Goddess of Victory" was represented by the Greeks as having wings. Her name was Nike. This statue, which was the great prize of the French archeologists, is a beautiful exemple of the Fourth century Attic sculpture. It was first set up by Demetrius Poliorcetes about 305 B. C.

DISCUSSES CONTROL OF STOMACH WORMS

Copper sulphate (bluestone) and sulphate (blackleaf 40) and the most widely used agents for the control of stomach worms in sneep says a statement issued by the department of animal pathology of the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, in reply to numerous injuries.

Copper sulphate is used in a one per cent solution. Dissolve an ounce and a third of clear crystals in a gallon of water. Use a glass enameled orglazed crock. Heatin; in an enameled dish will help to dissolve the copper sulphate. The dose of a one per cent solution of copper sulphate for lambs three months old is 2 ounces; for lambs two to six months of age, 2 to 3 ounces, and for mature sheep, 3 to 4 ounces.

Nicotine sulphate is prepared as follows: Two ounces of nicotine sulphate is added to agallon of water. Make up fresn and mix well beforebefore using. The dose for lambs three to five months of age is 1 to 2 ounces; for lambs five months to one year of age, 2 to 3 ounces, and for mature sheep 3 to 4 ounces.

The dose of either copper sulphate or nicotine sulphate should always be carefully estimated on the basis of age, size and condition of the animal. The mixtures are usually given as a drench, using a small bottle with a long, narrow neck, or by using a metal dose syringe. Animals should be in as natural a position as possible and drenched with care. Inflocks badly infested with stomach worms treat ment should be repeated in 10 to 15 days. It is not usually necessary to treat lambs in Kentucky before July 1.

One ounce of copper sulphate crystals and one ounce of nicotine sulphate dissolved in a gallon of water makes an effective treatment. The dose of this mixture is the same as given above.

Yesterday pickles are a common sight in Magoffin county this spring, and most farmers will grow beans, many of them for the first time.

KENTUCKY FRUIT PROSPECTS GOOD

Lexington, Ky., May 28—Kentucky has prospects of one of the best fruit crops in years, according to W. W. Magill of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, who has returned from an inspection trip covering much of the state. This includes apples, peaches, cherries, plum, raspberries, grapes and strawberries.

Trees of all ages put put on a full bloom, he said, and the set of fruit on apple and peach trees is unusually heavy. Counts made on individual peach trees in several parts of the state showed 500 to 2,000 peaches. Several varieties of apples have set two to five apples to the bloom cluster. Thinning of peaches already has begun in Western Kentucky.

Grapes indicate one of the best crops in years. Mr. Magill reported. Apparently the forst of early May did little i no damage, even to strawberries. Carload shipments of strawberries are expected to be fewer than normal, due to the dry season last year. The ripening season will be about two weeks later than in 1930.

Raspberries and dewberries give indications of a full crop.

Fruit growers are taking unusual interest in spraying, including many who neglected their orchards in past years, according to Mr. Magill.

Apple blight has appeared only in certain areas in Western Kentucky, and thus far has not caused as much injury as it did last year.

THOUSAND DISASTERS RECEIVED RED CROSS AID IN 50 YEARS

American Society to Celebrate Its Birth Year With Nation-wide Observance

Tornadoes, floods, forest fires and other calamities and upheavals of nature have visited the United States more than one thousand times in the last half century.

All of these were of severe intensity, causing loss of life and great property damage. Minor catastrophes were not counted in this list of disasters, which has been made public by the American Red Cross, in connection with the celebration this year of its fiftieth birthday.

It was on the evening of May 21, 1881, in the modest home of Miss Clara Barton in Washington, D. C., that the American Association of the Red Cross was first formed. Before the year was out, and before, indeed, the United States Government had officially moved to approve the Treaty of Geneva, adding this nation to the company of thirty-two others adhering to the treaty to protect wounded in warfare, Miss Barton had plunged the small society into a disaster relief task.

First Red Cross Unit

This was in the north woods of Michigan, where forest fires swept the homestead farms of pioneering families. Miss Barton, as president of the Red Cross, had organized a branch in Dansville, New York, where she was sojourning. This little group immediately raised money, food, clothing and other supplies and sent them to the forest fire victims. In Rochester and Syracuse, New York, nearby, word spread of this charitable enterprise, and Red Cross auxiliaries were organized there to help. So began the disaster relief work of the Red Cross fifty years ago. In the intervening years, millions of men, women and children have been aided. Thousands of homes have been restored. Thousands of persons, overwhelmed by floods, tornadoes, and fires until all they possessed had been wiped away, have been rehabilitated and prosperity and happiness again smiled upon them.

This year has been dedicated by the Red Cross and its chapters in 3,500 communities to commemoration of the events which led to the birth of the society in the United States.

President Hoover Speaks

The celebration of the anniversary was inaugurated in Washington at a dinner, attended by many distinguished men and women, at which Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes presided, and President Hoover, who is the president of the American Red Cross, was the chief speaker. Judge Max Huber of Geneva, Switzerland, the president of the International Committee of the Red Cross, in which fifty-seven nations are joined in a Red Cross brotherhood, also was a speaker, as were Chairman John Barton Payne of the American Red Cross, and Miss Mabel T. Boardman, secretary, and veteran leader of the society.

The Red Cross standard, which flies all around the world where mercy is needed, was first introduced as an ideal in our modern civilization in Geneva in 1864, when the international Red Cross convention, afterward to be known as the Treaty of Geneva, was signed by twelve countries agreeing that on the battlefield the wounded should be given aid by doctors, nurses and others, who should wear the sign of the Red Cross, and be treated as neutrals in the warfare.

Two Americans attended this first convention, the American Minister George C. Fogg, and Charles S. P. Bowles, representative in Europe of the United States Sanitary Commission, a volunteer organization of sympathizers with the North in our Civil War. Facts they gave resulted in adoption of some of the American ideas.

Returning to the United States, Fogg and Bowles sought recognition of the Geneva Treaty, but the Grant administration took no interest. Under Hayes, the same lethargy was encountered.

Clara Barton Founder

But there had emerged from the Civil War period a middle-aged woman who had seen much service on the battlefields around Washington. This was Clara Barton. Ill health caused her to make a trip to Europe in 1869. There she became interested in the Red Cross idea, and joined a unit which saw service in the Franco-Prussian war. Upon her return home, she launched an active campaign for the treaty, but met the same opposition as her predecessors. However, President Garfield, when he came into office, recognized the merits of the movement, and when death by assassination removed him, his successor, President Arthur, sought approval by the U. S. Senate of the treaty. Thus was consummated a seventeen-year fight in this nation for a humanitarian ideal. Clara Barton was recognized as the society's founder and was its president for twenty-three years. She died in 1912 at the age of 90 years.

It is not generally thought of, but the flag so familiar in every civilized nation as the emblem of the Red Cross, had a simple derivation. Because the originator of the movement, Henri Dunant, was a Swiss, and the first treaty to protect wounded in battle was drafted and signed in Switzerland, the flag of that Republic—a white cross upon a red background—was reversed, and the Red Cross came into being.

BOONE COUNTY 4-H CLUB MEMBERS

Five hundred Kentucky farm boys and girls will go to college week at the University of Kentucky at Lexington June 9-13.

The boys will spend the mornings during the 11th annual 4-H Club on the Experiment Station farm studying livestock judging, feeding, diseases and management, and crop production and other phases of practical farming. The girls will attend classes in home economics, where they will study cooking, baking and dress making, and attend lectures on health.

The afternoons will be devoted to inspirational programs, including art, music and amateur dramatics. Leading Lexington pastors will have charge of vesper services in the evening.

Words Can't Describe Good Karnak Did Me

"I just know there is nobody in all the world happier than I about this wonderful medicine, Karnak. I have taken all kinds of medicines and treatments in the past ten years trying to get some relief from my suffering, but nothing helped me until I began Karnak.

"Oh, how I suffered with stomach trouble. Why, I was almost a nervous wreck from it. I had no appetite to speak of, food just didn't have any taste to me. But even though I would only eat the lightest kind of things, I would suffer just the same.

"I had just lost all my strength and at times I would feel so weak I could hardly walk across the room.

"I was so nervous and restless I couldn't get any sleep to amount to anything, and in the morning I could hardly drag myself out of bed. It began to look mighty blue for me, but Karnak has changed everything. It is too grand for words."

LOCAL NEWS

Don't forget that the Recorder can be had for the small sum of 1 dollar per year until June 30th.

Tennis courts in Burlington are unusually vacant, since Editor Berkshire has forsaken the racket for the Linotype keyboard.

F. H. Rouse, Everett Hickman, A. Renaker, Elijah Stephens, Martin Williamson and W. H. Ward attended the Masonic services at Walton last Saturday evening.

The Ladies' Aid of the Methodist Church of Florence will meet for an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. George Miller on the Burlington pike on June 3.

L. M. Moore of East Bend was among our callers last Saturday afternoon. Mr. Moore is one of the best farmers in his section and always a welcome visitor here.

Manley Gulley, of Guilford, Indiana, was calling on friends and relatives here last Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

Ben Freckman, that genial ex-sheriff of Fayette county, was a most enjoyable visitor at the Recorder office Wednesday morning. Mr. Freckman now is connected with the Department of Agriculture at Frankfort and was at Burlington in regard to assisting the sheriff and deputies in enforcing the dog law.

The Early, Daniels Feed Company of Cincinnati announced the past week the awarding of a 4-H scholarship to Junior Week, University of Kentucky, June the 6th to the 13th to an outstanding Boone county 4-H Club member.

The awarding of the scholarship comes as a pleasant and welcome surprise to Boone county 4-H Club members, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. The scholarship has been awarded to Miss Ruth Tanner of the Mt. Zion Eagles 4-H Club. Ruth has done outstanding poultry and sewing club work during the last four years and was winner of the county sewing club style show held at Burlington last Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kelly and Leon Aylor and family spent Sunday in Cincinnati with Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Aylor.

CONSTANCE WINS

The Constance semi-pro Spinney League baseball team won a loosely played game from the Ludlow American Legion team at Ludlow Sunday afternoon, winning the game by the score of 14 to 8.

The Constance players knocked three Ludlow pitchers from the box. Selwyn Vahlsing, star pitcher for Constance, went the route for Constance, striking out 13 men. Vahlsing has struck out 53 men in the last 30 innings that he has pitched.

POULTRY MEETING POSTPONED

The Boone County poultry meetings, planned for June 4, have been postponed to June 16.

The changing to a later date will give a better opportunity to have definite figures on the number of chicks raised,, number of chicks lost and cost of production up to 12 weeks of age, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner.

The program planned for the 16th has not been completed to date. The morning meeting will be in the form of a tour with a general meeting at Grant Maddox's in th afternoon. This year above all others will it pay to attend these meetings and learn what poultrymen are doing.

NORBEH CHAMPONS CARRY HOME HONOR

The Norbeh Champion 4-H Club of Hebron met at Burlington Saturday, May 23 to compete against other clubs of this county. They were entered in home practice demonstration, boy health contest, and farm practice demonstration. The home practice demonstration team finished first in county finals and will go to Lexington, June 8 to 13.

The members of this team were Miss Adelia Riddell, captain of the team, and Miss Helen Grant. Woodford Crigle won first place in the boy health contest. Mr. Crigle will also go to Lexington to represent the county in the state finals.

The farm practice team did not finish first. The members of this team were Allen Kenyon, captain of the team, and Woodford Crigler.

U. S. REPRESENTATIVE VISITS UTOPIA CLUB

Mr. R. A. Turner of the U. S. Department of Agriculture will visit Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 at a meeting to be held at Burlington courthouse Thursday evening, May 28, at 7:30.

A good program has been planned by the Florence group of the club. All members of the club are urged to be present.

Preservation of Trees

Men of the Trees is the name of an organization of Africans recently founded by Richard S. S. Baden Baden, formerly assistant commissioner of forests in the Kenya colony. The natives, the Kikuyu tribe, are Bantu in origin and many of the old tribal customs are retained. Certain trees are held sacred and sacrifices are made to them. Mr. Baker, on his arrival in the colony, found that large areas of forest had been destroyed by fire and to make way for cultivation. He assembled the chiefs and explained to them the value of forests to man and proposed that instead of being forest destroyers they become forest planters. Many of the natives immediately responded and the Watu wa Miti, or Men of the Trees, was organized. The badge is a small brass disk bearing the design of a tree; the colors are green and white. Later on a simple ritual and initiation ceremony were evolved. Like the Boy Scouts, the members are expected to do a good deed each day. The entire organization is known as the Forest, which is divided into districts, each named after the dominant species of tree growing in it. The districts are divided into branches, each ruled by a forest guide. An important part of the work is the planting of a forest nursery, where more than 80,000 young trees have been raised.

Interesting Picture of Birth of Solar System

Tracing time and its changes back to the very beginning of things, Sir James Jeans of Cambridge gives, in a recently published work, a wonderful picture of the birth of our solar system as the result of a collision some 2,000,000,000 years ago.

"A second star, wandering blindly through space, happened to come within hailing distance of the sun. Just as the sun and moon raise tides on the earth, so this second star must have raised tides on the surface of the sun . . . a huge tidal wave must have traveled over the surface of the sun, ultimately forming a mountain of prodigious height, which would rise even higher and higher as the cause of the disturbance came nearer and nearer. And, before the second star began to recede, its tidal pull had become so powerful that this mountain was torn to pieces and threw off small fragments of itself, much as the crest of a wave throws off spray. These small fragments have been circulating around their parent sun ever since. They are the planets, great and small, of which our earth is one."

South Africa's "Tablecloth"

The "Tablecloth" is a cloud that occasionally covers the flat top of Table mountain in South Africa. Charles Fitzhugh Talman of the United States weather bureau, in his book "The Realm of the Air," says it is probably the most famous individual cloud in the world, and in describing it adds: "It consists of a dense cloud sheet, formed when warm moisture-bearing winds are forced up the steep slope of the mountain, especially in summer. The cloud often pours over the brow of the mountain, like a mighty cataract, and is dissolved as the wind is warmed by compression in descending to a lower level. The effects produced by this rolling mass of vapor are sometimes indescribably grand, and the phenomenon is all the more striking because a perfectly clear sky generally prevails over the surrounding country while the "Tablecloth" overspreads the mountain."

Canning Factory in Arctic

Within a few hundred miles of the North pole a fish-canning factory has been established, worked entirely by Eskimos. The plant, financed by the Danish government, is in Holstenberg, Greenland, a town beyond the Arctic circle.

Modern in every detail, the factory makes use of electric power derived from the swift-running rivers, and employs up-to-date dynamos and oil engines for emergencies. It is operated mainly by Eskimo women. The whole population of the district, numbering approximately 250, is devoted to the new industry. A fleet of modern motor fishing boats, recently shipped from Denmark, keeps the establishment supplied.

Famous Old Roman Road

The Appian Way is a famous road built by the Romans between the cities of Rome and Brandisi. It received its name from Appius Claudius, who was censor when the first part of the road was begun about 312 B. C. The section between Capua and Rome is about 140 miles long and is as straight as a taut string. The width of the road ranges from 14 to 18 feet. No expense was spared in making the pavement and part of the original road bed is still used without much alteration.

Divisions of Ship's Crew

The crew of a ship is divided into three departments. The first is the deck department. The captain, first, second, third and fourth mates, the boatswain, able seamen, ordinary seamen and radio operators belong to this department. In the engineering department there are the chief engineer, second, third, fourth and junior engineers, firemen, greasers, water tenders and coal passers. Those belonging to the steward's department are the chief steward, second steward, cook, second cook, mess steward and mess boy.

SHOW OPENING

THE BURLINGTON SHOW

Will Open For The Summer On SATURDAY MAY 30

7:30 P. M.

"Thomas Preston Weak, son of John and Ann Weak, was born December 19th, 1831, departed this life April 21, 1921, aged 89 years, four months and twenty-one days.

He was united in marriage September 2nd, 1852 to Miss Julia Ann Hall. To this union were born five children, Mrs. Richard Koons, Mrs. Jesse Louden, Mrs. Charlie Fowler, Charles Everett and Mrs. Erastus Rice.

Charles Everett preceded him to his grave April 11, 1906, aged 17 years and Mrs. Richard Koons, November 14, 1917, aged 39 years.

He leaves to mourn his departure his wife, three daughters, 20 grandchildren and 8 great-grandchildren, two brothers Noah and George and a host of other relatives and friends.

Uncle Joe, as he was always called was a kind and loving husband and father and was loved by everyone who knew him.

Dearest Father thou hast left us,
And our loss we deeply feel,
But it's God that has bereft us
He can all our sorrows heal.

Yet again we hope to meet thee
When the day of life is fled,
When in heaven in joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed

We have lost our darling Father,
He has bid us all adieu,
He has gone to live in Heaven
And his form is lost in view.

Oh! that loved one, how we loved him,
Oh! how hard to give him up!
But an angel came down for him
And removed him from our flock.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to express our appreciation and thanks to our friends and neighbors for their kindness shown us during the illness and death of our dear husband and father, Joseph Preston West. Especially do we thank Dr. M. A. Yelton for his medical care, Bro. Carter for his consoling words, the choir for the beautiful singing and Mr. Steele for the efficient manner in which he conducted the funeral.

Being a passway, and being a strip of land 14 feet wide along and on the west side of the following described line. Beginning at a stone with Mrs. Mary C. Weaver, and the said L. M. Rouse's purchase, in Mrs. Talbott's line. Along on the east side of the present the east post of a large gate; thence N24¼W 20 poles to a stone; thence NW 7½ poles to the east gate post, a little east of the north east corner of the yard, making said strip 81 7-100 poles long; thence along and over the passway then used by Mrs. Talbott, to the county road, to have the use of the said passway in common with her. It is understood by the parties that the passway from the residence of Mrs. Talbott to the county road is to be kept in repair by all the parties in interest, each doing their portion of the necessary work, and when the new pike road is ready for travel, they are to do their full share in changing the present outlet so as to make a suitable approach to the turnpike. The passway herein granted, is not an open lane but a gate-way and the grantees herein agree to keep the gates across the outlet or passway, in good repair, that stands across the passway between the beginning point and the residence of Mrs. Talbott. All the parties hereto bind themselves to securely fasten, after passing thru and to keep good and convenient fastenings on said gates. All of said property being the same conveyed to grantor Frank R. Crowe, and Ella Crowe, his wife, by John Wood Carpenter and his wife Lucy E. Carpenter, by deed of Feb. 26th, 1927, and recorded in Deed Book No.—page—Boone County Court Records at Burlington, Ky.

When Tea Was a Novelty

The drinking of the first cup of tea ever made in England took place in 1666 in Buckingham house, now Buckingham palace. The owner had bought a pound of tea for $15.

Promptly Proposed On

When a child in the Matabele tribe, of southeast Africa, says the equivalent of "mamma" or "papa" before what authorities of the community decide is the normal time, or if its tiny upper incisors peep through the gums when they still should be out of sight, it is just too bad.

Such a tragedy rarely befell to having twins, the Catholic Anthropological society is told. In the case of the precious infant, only its death before evil strikes can save the parents. It is now illegal to leave the child in the fields along which they walk will dry up and wells they use will be poisoned.

At the end of the two months the women of the tribe, by suitable incantations, expel the evil spirits from the house and all is well again.

Generous Allowance of Wine for Royal Infants

In 1552 milk was not considered an important item in a child's diet, and, if the household account of the chateau of Amboise is anything to go by, the younger generation in those days could not complain that wine was scarce.

The six royal children living in the chateau were supplied daily with 25 pints of red wine and a similar quantity of white wine, while for their attendants of gentle birth a further 25 pints of a cheaper red wine was provided. Their staff had to be content with 35 pints of cheap claret.

The daily account also shows that 75 dozen loaves of bread were paid for. Pike, roach, carp, gudgeon, crawfish, a sea turtle, oysters, sole, cod, white and red herrings also are listed, including, oddly enough, four vipers.

The Fan in History

"Customs of Mankind," says that "Fans have an interesting history. The first fan was probably a palm leaf or some other natural device appropriated by man to keep away flies or gnats, perhaps even to cool the fevered brow in tropical climates. We know that in Egypt, 2,000 years ago, fashionable hosts had special servants to stand behind dinner guests and fan them with huge papyrus fans. In France the fan reached the height of its development under Louis XIV. We read that 'fans are invariable accompaniment of feminine costume and are of rare beauty, exquisitely painted and mounted on sticks of carved or painted wood, mother-of-pearl, carved ivory or gold. There are over 500 makers of fans in Paris and they enjoy special privileges accorded to them by the king.'"

Another Chinese Wall

Another huge Chinese wall has been discovered by the Dr. Suen Hedin expedition. An article by the leader, published in a Stockholm newspaper says: They followed the route over the Mongolian highlands and the Gobi desert. This was the first time that a motor car had been driven from Peiping to Maomo without at any point of the route, encroaching on the territory of the Mongolian republic. The most remarkable discovery from an archeological point of view was a wall of earth and stone, which they could trace for several hundred meters. It was very well preserved in parts, and it perhaps corresponds with the discovery which Mr. Bergman made some time ago of a fortress of the early Han dynasty.

Liar

There is at least one judge in Kansas City who knows his birds.

First off, they brought a blackbird into court on the charge of chicken stealing.

"What made you steal that chicken?" demanded the learned judge. "Was it because you were really hungry?"

'No, suh," replied the blackbird, "Ah cain't say as I was hungry. Ah done stole dat chicken fo' a lark."

"There is no resemblance whatever," snapped the judge and meted out a ten-day sentence with the advice that the darky spend it reading a bird book.

Those Good Old Days

It is the feeble and ill-nourished mind that shrinks from knowledge of what has been, and suffers from pessimistic dread of what is yet to be. It is only the mentally and spiritually hampered—prophesying of evil to come—who believe that all change in our own day must be for the worse, and who long for the "good old days" of their grandparents.—Albert Shaw in Review of Reviews.

Wrote Hymn on Window Pane

From a window pane in a little English village to the pages of millions of hymn books, printed in many languages, is the experience that befell one writer, Harriet Auber. Confined one day to her home, she composed the words of "Our Blest Redeemer," afterwards amusing herself by scratching them on the window of her room, since when they have been sung by countless voices all over the world.

Putting Off Inevitable Doesn't Add Life's Sum

There comes a moment to all of us when we realize we have not only reached the crest of the hill, but that we are going down the other side. Or, at least, we think so. For, if we are strong enough, we need not really go down that hill.

Physically speaking, there has been a descent in our life since the moment we were born. Life comes, and immediately begins to go. But that is the least important side of us. If we have the vision, the movement of our mind and soul should be both up and wider We only go downhill if we decide that we are doing so. Up always should be our watchword—our real determination. Getting the idea that we are going downhill means that we are, definitely and surely. Once it gets into our mind, life takes on a drab, dull, unpleasant view.

You can go on going up the hill if you make up your mind to do so. Going down is a miserable, slippery business, bringing with it no end of sorrow and regret. And lots of stones tumbling after us. It need not be. Make up your mind to go up—and go up you will.—G. H. G. in London Tit-Bits.

Fortunes for Those of Inventive Turn of Mind

There seems no end to the variety of quick-witted people who, by some simple, unexpected thought, have introduced new habits to civilization, and grown to be millionaires as a result.

The skilled mining engineer, the builder of ships or bridges, lives and dies in poverty and obscurity compared with such giants of enterprise as the man who invented tins for food, the man who invented openers for the tins, and the master mind who crowned himself with glory by inventing a tin which did not need an opener at all.

It is worth recalling, in this case, that a Chicago meat packer, hearing of the invention, ordered 10,000,000 of the new tins straight away and was followed in desperate haste by his rivals, who fell over each other in the effort to secure supplies of the new marvel.

Sunrise in the Himalayas

Tourists in India rarely omit a visit to Calcutta and when in Calcutta they rarely miss the opportunity of witnessing a sunrise in the Himalayas. From Calcutta you go to Darjeeling by train, which is a climb of many thousand feet. From this city in the clouds you ascend further about 1,500 feet to see the sunrise. The start is made at two o'clock in the morning and the 1,500 feet referred to is made by pony back or sedan chair. You arrive at the top before daybreak and you sit and watch for the break of dawn. You watch the sun come up over Everet, Kinchinganga and other white giants of the greatest mountain wall in the world. If the atmospherical conditions are favorable, you will see a marvelous play of color and after a cupful of coffee served on Tiger hill you silently descend wrapped in the mystery of the stupendous and unspeakable experience.

More Shame to Them

Mr. E. V. Wilkinson has an aunt visiting him from a small town some place in Ohio. City traffic is new and alarming to her.

The other evening the family started out from the West side to keep a dinner engagement somewhere on the East side. They hit the home-going traffic on our downtown streets and got into one of the inevitable jams.

Two mounted policemen scurried through the lines, trying to get some of the slow drivers to pull out of the way, doing their best to remedy the situation.

The little old lady watched these two figures in scorn and finally broke out:

"The very idea! Somebody ought to report to the police that those two men are riding horseback up and down the main street at a time like this!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dry

Mrs. Robert A. Mack of Porterville relates the story of a little city girl paying her first visit to a farm. Everything was new and novel to her but her interest finally centered in the pig pen where a huge mother sow had temporarily deserted her offspring in order to enjoy a plentiful luncheon of sour milk.

But the piglets didn't care so much about it. They wanted some attention themselves. They were very hungry and very tired. They lifted up their voices and told the world so—especially their mother—in no undecided fashion.

"Daddy! Daddy!" called the little city girl. "Come quick! All the little pigs need oiling. They squeak!"—Philadelphia [illegible]

German Never Predominant

Although there was a discussion in the Continental congress in regard to the use of the German or English language in the colonies, and a motion was made in favor of using the German language, the matter never came to a vote. Only in Pennsylvania was the German element more than a small minority before the Revolution. Perhaps a third of the settlers in Pennsylvania were Germans. Although the German language persisted in the speech and in the press in Pennsylvania, the English soon [illegible] all the others from [illegible]

The banjo clock was invented in 1801 by Simon Willard and so called because of its shape. It was an eight-day non-striking pendulum clock. Willard obtained a patent for it in 1802.

French Law Obliges Walnut Lover to Shell It

"It is a serious thing to fall foul of the law in France," writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. "The elephant never forgets, naturalists assure us—or so most French officers of the law. Whole districts after men escape from Devil's Island or the Foreign Legion they are wont to be tapped on the shoulder in the streets of Marseilles or Bordeaux and told to come along to the police station.

"And recently an elderly peasant woman in a village near Boulogne was tackled for an eight-franc fine inflicted on her nine-and-twenty years ago. It appears that on September 15, 1901, three children were seen gleaning in an outfield before the sheaves had been removed. The garde champetre called on their mother and told her that she would be fined for this heinous delinquency on their part.

"She was a busy woman with eight other small children continually getting into the sort of mild trouble that befits their age. She waited for the summons, but it never came along, and presently she forgot all about it. Recently, however, she received that summons with a demand to pay eight centimes. Mystified, she went to the office of the local justice of the peace, where they explained what it was all about, and said that they had found the matter outstanding in the book. She paid it to avoid further bother."

Nothing Modern About the Use of Spectacles

Glasses for the aid of our sight are almost as old as the universe. It is not far-fetched to think that the Atlanteans 22,000 years ago knew of lenses, Dr. Fassett Edwards writes in an article on the history of glasses, in Hygeia Magazine.

The ruins of Nineveh yielded the oldest known piece of transparent glass, which was dated 2,600 years ago. Pliny has recorded, Doctor Edward's reports, that Nero winked and blinked and brought objects close to his eyes. Nero was wont to gaze on gladiatorial fights through a glass cut from a huge emerald.

The first of our present-day spectacles was produced by Roger Bacon, who in about the year 1280 A. D. made a reading glass to be used in magnifying the smallest letters. Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of the bifocal spectacles.

Action of Roentgen Rays

A German physicist Wilhem Konrad Roentgen, born at Lennep, in Prussia, in 1845, discovered the X-ray, or Roentgen rays, in 1895. He was a professor at Wurzburg at that time. The X-rays are known to be vibrations of the ether, similar to but much more rapid than those of light. The wave length is so extremely short that every substance, regardless of color, is more or less transparent to them. A simple explanation of them is that when a high tension electric current is sent through a glass tube from which the air has been highly exhausted, the negative pole or cathode sends out an invisible stream of negatively charged particles called cathode rays. These rays can be brought to a focus like light, and when focused on a metallic target within the tube, the metal becomes intensely hot and gives off these Roentgen rays, or X-rays.

Bug-Rest Houses

The late Seth Buddhimal, wealthy and pious banker of Sihora, Central India, left $100,000 to build and endow in perpetuity three rest houses into which insects may withdraw from the world. Poor travelers will be allowed to sleep overnight in these bug-rest houses, will even be paid a small sum for doing so, as long as they lie still and kill no bugs. Should a sleeper kill a bug, even by accidentally rolling over, he will be ejected from the bug house by attendants and forfeit his sleep money. No less than 200 insect rest houses of a more or less similar nature are maintained throughout India by pious natives who realise that no bug is too insignificant to contain the reincarnated soul of an ancestor.—Time Magazine.

Try Yawning

If you would fortify your wilting nerves before walking into the boss' office to ask for that long-delayed raise or for that luscious higher job, just yawn and indulge in a hearty stretch. The procedure is guaranteed by one authority to give renewed courage and vocal tones that will reflect confidence in the crucial interview.

Helen Hathaway, author and contributor to many noted periodicals, says that bodily poise is directly allied with mental balance through correct posture and regular breathing. One way of acquiring the elusive quality, she says, is through ocsitancy (English for "yawning").

Italy's Flag

The royal standard of Italy consists of a square blue field, on which is centered the national coat of arms. When Napoleon made the northern provinces of Italy into a kingdom in 1805 he gave it a flag of three colors—green next to the flagstaff, white in the middle and red at the fly end. This flag disappeared when Napoleon was overthrown, but was revived when Victor Emmanuel, king of Sardinia and a member of the house of Savoy, became king. At the present day Italy's flag consists of the Savoy arms surmounted by a crown, on the central white vertical stripe of Napoleon's green, white and red.

Extended Stay in Bed Cure for Skin Disease

Possibly the most interesting bathing places of the Philippines are those of the Mandayas of Mindoro, C. A. Freeman writes in the Boston Post. These places are merely small holes adjacent to hot springs and are patronized by the wild Manyan tribesmen and their families. Jungle travel is productive of various skin diseases and when the Manyan becomes too itchy to stand it any longer, he arranges for a friend to serve him meals. Then he enters the mud.

Around him are placed floating pillows of grass and tables provided with smokers' materials. Over his head is a parasol and a gourd of water is close by. Frequently the bather makes a week's stay in the mud and when he emerges to plunge in a river he finds that his outer skin entirely has peeled off.

On Mindoran rivers near settlements of importance the "crocodile baths" are to be found. These are merely huge cages of bamboo floating and tethered to the banks. The slats are set so closely together as to defy the entrance of even a croc's nose and in the cage the community bathes without fear. Usually there is a spear-toting attendant on duty and if a cruising "bwaya" (crocodile) comes too close he receives a jab in the eye.

"Artillery" Before the Advent of Gunpowder

The Roman ballista was much like the Roman catapult. It consisted of a trough mounted in a frame, in which ropes or skeins of animal skins were twisted with sticks. The ends of the sticks were joined with a thong, and the spring in the twists served as the spring, or propelling force. The missile, consisting of a log, beam or stone, was put in the trough, and the bowstring was drawn back and released to hurl the missile. The ballista was used to hurl heavy material for demolishing walls. It was primarily a siege weapon. The trough was so arranged that it could be elevated to lengthen the range, and traversed to change the direction of the missile. Roughly, the Roman catapult shot heavy arrows for effect on personnel and corresponded to the modern light field gun, while the ballista fired heavy projectiles and corresponded to modern heavy field artillery.

Inaugurated Opera Comique

Adan de la Hale, French troubadour, a musician and composer, who lived from 1238 to 1288, is sometimes called the father of the opera comique. He was born at Arras and studied at the Cistercian abbey at Vaucelles, near Cambrai. He joined the household of Robert II, count of Artois, in 1272, and from 1283 was attached to Charles of Anjou, brother of Charles IX, whose fortunes he followed in Egypt, Syria, Palestine and Italy. At the court of Charles, after he became king of Naples, Adan wrote his "Jeu de Robin et Marion," the most famous of his works. This play is cited as the earliest French play with music on a secular subject.

Immigration Not Wanted

The Literary Digest reports as unfounded the fear that Alaskan mosquitoes will be introduced to this country. The Alaskan mosquito, it was said, breeds in ice water, and if brought here it might breed in winter as well as summer and torment us the year round. As a matter of fact, says the Digest, Alaska has warm water in summer, and it is in this that the creatures hatch. They are as tender and susceptible to cold as our own. There is some apprehension that the mosquitoes may drive out the Kodiak bears, forcing a migration to this region, but who is afraid of mere bears? —Detroit News.

Inventions That Won Favor

Who invented the penny-in-the-slot weighing machine? Why, Mr. George Weaver, of Bath, who died penniless, as you might say, leaving only a paltry £16,000. And who invented the police whistle? It was none other than Mr. Joseph Hudson, who broke upon a startled world of burglary in 1884 with his shrill masterpiece, and at once secured a contract for 21,000 of his products. Today there are 600 different types of whistle, all manufactured by the firm which Mr. Hudson founded. —London Answers.

Varieties of Snakes

The copperhead is not a species of rattlesnake and has no rattle, though like many other kinds of snake it vibrates its tail against the dry leaves and makes a noise similar to the rattle. It is smaller than the average rattlesnake, reaching an extreme length of three or four feet. Various observers have stated it does not strike from a regular coil. The story of a hoop snake that takes its tail in its mouth and rolls like a hoop is a myth. The rattlesnake is typical of snakes that form a coil before striking.

New Timepieces to Her

Mary, age eight, moved from Irvington to a small town in Indiana. There were factories there, with their accompanying whistles. Occasionally when a whistle blew, Mary heard some such remark as: "It must be just twelve," or "Our clock must be slow, for there is the seven o'clock whistle." No one realized Mary was puzzled until one day she said: "You know, I can't tell time by the whistles."—Indianapolis News.

Small Business Has Big Part in Great Achievement

There have been a great many short men besides "the little corporal," the five-foot two Napoleon, who have made the world sit up and take notice. Two of our Presidents were among them, Martin Van Buren and John Quincy Adams. Martin Van Buren was often alluded to as "the little magician," because of his shortness of stature and his mastery of political wizardry. And there was Stephen A. Douglas, scarcely more than five feet tall, affectionately nicknamed "the little giant."

Gen. George B. McClellan, the Democratic candidate against Abraham Lincoln in 1864, was "Little Mac," and sometimes paradoxically "Little Napoleon," a title which he shared with General Beauregard. Admiral Farragut was five feet six and a half inches tall.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, John Paul Jones and Gen. Phil Sheridan were each five feet; Beethoven was scarcely more than five feet four; John Keats a little more than five feet, and Swinburne and Whistler are given as five feet or so in stature.

Other men who are described as being short, or under medium height were Chaucer, Michelangelo, Chopin, John Milton, Robespierre, Alexander Pope, Savonarola, Thomas B. Macaulay, Charles Lamb, Ibsen, Thoreau, Thomas Moore, William H. Seward, William Ellery Channing, Andrew Carnegie and Alexander Hamilton.

Lizards Feast Royally on Eggs of Crocodile

I have sometimes watched monitors or African water lizards, at their work of robbing crocodile nests of their eggs, C. R. S. Pitman writes, in Asia Magazine. The antics of these prehistoric looking creatures, which are usually about four feet long, are most entertaining.

On more than one occasion when I have been lying in concealment, observing the behavior of the guardian females on the breeding grounds, I have seen a monitor deliberately provoke a crocodile until it rushes off in pursuit into the water. In the meantime the monitor's mate arrives on the scene, excavates the nest with great haste and begins gobbling up the eggs.

Soon it is joined by No. 1, which had only taken to the water as a ruse. They usually succeed in disposing of the greater portion of the eggs before the return of the rightful owner. Even when forced to withdraw, they will decamp each with an egg in its mouth.

Medieval Clocks

Into the making of clocks and their cases has gone much of man's inventive and decorative abilities. Comic and performing clocks had a great vogue during the Fifteenth and Sixteenth centuries. In the museum at Basle, Switzerland, may still be seen a specimen in which the vibration of the pendulum gradually caused a long tongue to protrude. Other clocks were made to show a whole series of scenes, such as processions of the apostles and other characters. Great interest was also excited by clocks representing the positions of the heavenly bodies and the days of the week and month. Repeating clocks which sounded the hours when a string was pulled were prized in the days when the only method of striking a light at night was with flint and steel.

Professors Crawl, Growl

Called the strangest club in the world, the "Red Lion club" recently held its annual dinner at Bristol, England. Its members are professors, and the "King Lion," who presided, was ceremoniously addressed as "Your Majesty" by the other "lions" and "cubs." At supper they sedately quaffed strong old English ale, and the marrow bone. The red lions of the club are the senior scientists, and the cubs are new members, who were made on admission to "wag their tails," and go through a ritual of initiation. There were also two jackals, and when the king lion gave an order they had to growl ominously. Professors even went down on all fours on the carpet in their conscientious effort to look lionlike.

Giralda

In Seville of Andalusia, Giralda dwells. It is one of the most beautiful Moorish monuments of Spain, a Twelfth century minaret stretched against the blue sky, and now the shrine of two dozen anointed bells. Giralda is the mother and sweetheart of Seville; without Giralda the city would feel compelled to hide and change its name. The Moors wished to destroy it before surrendering to San Fernando, but he replied that a Moorish head would be cut off for every stone removed. The heads changed their minds. To an American, Giralda marks holy ground, for in the cathedral stands the sarcophagus of Christopher Columbus.

"Witch" Elm Claims Victim

How the "witch" elm tree claimed another victim recently was told at the coroner's inquest at Port Talbot, Wales. Thomas J. Richards, thirty-six, had been engaged by the Penybont council to trim the branches. A branch on which he was standing snapped, and he fell 40 feet to the road and was killed. A lineman previously had been killed while cutting away the branches of the same tree under similar circumstances. The tree, nearly 50 feet high, is known among woodsmen as "a traitor tree."

Los Angeles Founded by Spaniards Back in 1769

It was into the hands of Don Felipe De Neve, who ruled as the Spanish governor of the province of California in 1781, that Carlos III, king of Spain, intrusted the duty of founding Los Angeles.

In order to establish in California on the south a new settlement, it is related that Don Felipe came from the capital at Monterey with a military escort to the mission of San Gabriel late in August, 1781. The mission of San Gabriel was already prosperous and well established, having had its beginning ten years before.

Don Felipe and his escort spent several days at the mission and then, on the morning of September 4, set out upon a march which took them three leagues westward to that spot which is still the plaza of Los Angeles. Nothing was there that morning but the brown grass of the little valley and the browner hills. The plaza was laid out, a Te Deum was sung, a volley of musketry was fired, the spot was blessed by the padres, and the 12 emigrant families from Old Mexico, which were to constitute the original population and therefore the first families of the city, were established in what was to be their home. The new pueblo was called in euphonious Castillian La Ciudad de Nuestra Senora la Reina de los Angeles—the City of Our Lady the Queen of the Angels.—John Steven McGroarty, in the Los Angeles Times.

Boomerang Long in Use as Weapon of Warfare

An article in the Encyclopedia Britannica on the boomerang of the Australian aborigines mentions various peoples that have used similar instruments. Both the return and nonreturn boomerang are found in most parts of Australia. The return form was, according to General Pitt-Rivers, used in ancient Egypt. A weapon closely resembling the boomerang survives to the present day in northeast Africa, with allied forms made of metal, or throwing knives. In south India is found a boomerang-shaped instrument which can be made to return. The Hopis of Arizona use a nonreturn form. The Indian Cyclopedia gives details of the chakra or steel disk, formerly carried by Sikh soldiers. Thes were 6 to 9 inches in diameter and about an inch of breadth of rim, and had sharply ground edges. They were rotated on the forefinger, then projected with considerable force 150 feet or more. They are called expensive and almost useless weapons. Another form of boomerang used in India is made of wood and iron at Gujerat and of wood and ivory at Trichinopoly.

Easy to See Difference

A writer in the Detroit News is responsible for the following story, showing a characteristic viewpoint of the fair sex:

"A man took a girl friend of his out to lunch one day. He said nothing to his wife about it. Why do so? There was no harm in the luncheon.

"Of course gossip in a few days brought the thing to the poor woman's ears, and she raised ballyhoo.

"The man said mildly to her:

"'But look here. You lunch out now and then with Billy Snyder or Jake Holyrod, and I don't make the least objection. What's the difference between your case and mine?'

"'The difference?' she said. 'Why, the price is the difference. In the one case you pay it; in the other case I save it.'"

The Suffrage Bogey

Some of the arguments against woman suffrage in Massachusetts are recorded in "Lucy Stone: Pioneer of Woman's Rights," by Alice Stone Blackwell.

'One member of the legislature said that when a man came home tired at night, he did not want to kiss a member of the school board or an overseer of the poor. Another member declared that, if women were allowed to vote, (1) there would be no more children born in Massachusetts, and (2) all the children born would be girls."—Kansas City Star.

Wrong Move

Little Frank, who had removed with his family to a new house, was taken to visit the new tenants of the old home, with whom his mother was on friendly terms.

The chief object of interest was a recently arrived baby. Frank was much taken with the infant, and on his way home remarked:

"Mother, it's a pity we moved from that house. If we'd stayed a bit longer we should have got that baby."—London Tit-Bits.

Ideas of Her Own

Marjorie had developed a sudden dislike for going to bed. She admitted that she was afraid of the dark. An aunt, who was visiting in the home, said to the seven-year-old Robert: "Bob, you haven't been putting ideas into Marjorie's head and making her afraid to go to bed, have you?"

"Of course not," said the boy. "She is five years old and has ideas of her own."

Your Job

Idleness seldom fails to the lot of a man who is always on his toes, no matter what his occupation or his profession. Every man is measured by the way he does his work. His job is always as good as he himself makes it.—Grit.

Hallowed Spots

The site of ancient Jericho today is marked by a series of mounds a little distance from the present village of Jericho. On one side looms the Mount of Temptation, where Christ is said to have passed His forty days' fast in the wilderness. On the opposite side of the ruins is Elisha's fountain, said to be the waters which Elisha sweetened by throwing salt into them.

JERSEY CATTLE CLUB TO MEET JUNE FIRST

The Boone County Jersey Catt'e Club and enthusiast of the Jersey breed are planning for a meeting at the courthouse in Burlington Monday, June 1, at 1:30 p. m. The meeting will be to elect officers for the ensuing year and discuss means of promoting the Jersey breed in Boone county.

The local club is one of the outstanding promoters of the Jersey breed in the county and plans to advertise the county in and out of the state is a breeding center for fine Jersey cattle. A plan to write up a history and report of the leading herd sires used in the county is also under way, according to Mr. O. C. Hafer, secretary of the club.

The president and secretary of the organization urges that the breeders of the county lend their support and be present at the meeting. The recent depression has made the need for the club stronger than any time in the past.

Here's Something New— A "Sandwich Luncheon"

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

IF you are planning to entertain informally, you will enjoy serving the "Sandwich Luncheon" suggested below. Sandwiches are used both for the main and the dessert courses; and you will find that the entire meal is easily served, attractive in appearance, and truly good.

I am suggesting an appetizing Cream of Tomato Soup for the first course, to be followed by individual plates of assorted sandwiches and salads. This type of luncheon plate is decidedly in vogue at exclusive tea rooms; and you will find that cake and ice cream, served in the form of a sandwich, makes an unusual and attractive dessert.

This novel luncheon not only will appeal to your guests; but it is one of the easiest menus imaginable for the hostess who must serve without help, since all of the preparation may be finished well in advance of the arrival of the first guest. Just try this menu the next time you entertain:

Cream of Tomato Soup
Crisp Crackers
Individual Plates of Assorted Salads and Sandwiches
Ice Cream Sandwiches with Butterscotch Sauce and Chopped Pecans
Coffee

Assorted Sandwiches and Salads: On a luncheon plate place three small cup-shaped leaves of lettuce. In one, place Shrimp and Pineapple Salad; in the second Molded Egg Salad; and in the third, Cold Slaw. Also place on the plate several varieties of sandwiches such as Nut, Celery and Mayonnaise Sandwiches, Open Face Ham Sandwiches, and Sandwich Relish and Whole Wheat sandwiches. Garnish with slices of Dill Pickle and parsley.

Shrimp and Pineapple Salad: 1½ cups cooked shrimp; 1½ cups diced pineapple; ½ teaspoon salt; 1 dozen Stuffed Spanish Olives; paprika.

Remove black lines from shrimps and break in half. Combine with chilled pineapple cubes, salt and paprika. Place in lettuce cups and garnish with Stuffed Spanish Olives.

Molded Egg Salad: 6 hard cooked eggs, chopped or ground; 1 pimiento, chopped; 6 Preserved Sweet Pickles, chopped; 3 tablespoons Salad Cream; ½ teaspoon salt.

Mix eggs, pimiento and pickles. Moisten with Salad Cream and add salt. Pack into small molds and let stand over night. Serve in small lettuce cups.

Nut, Celery, and Mayonnaise Sandwiches: Chop ½ cup walnuts and ½ cup celery, very fine. Add a little salt, moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, and spread between thin slices of buttered bread. Cut in small spade, heart, diamond, or club shapes, or in squares or oblongs.

Open Face Ham Sandwiches: Chop 2 cups cold ham and mix lightly with horseradish dressing made by blending 4 tablespoons Mayonnaise with 1 teaspoon Evaporated Horseradish, soaked for ten minutes in 1 tablespoon cold water. Place on untoasted side of small squares of bread toasted on only one side. Garnish with a slice of Stuffed Spanish Olive in the center, or a border of pickle relish.

Ice Cream Sandwich with Butterscotch Sauce and Chopped Pecans: Place a layer of ice cream between the halves of cup cakes. Pour Butterscotch Sauce over the cakes and sprinkle with chopped pecans.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Snyder spent the week-end in Lawrenceburg with relatives.

M. F. Wingate and Dr. and Mrs. O. M. Terrill and sons of Lawrenceburg, were Sunday guests of Mrs. Mary Terrill and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Florian Holton were shopping in Cincinnati Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Berkshire entertained Sunday in honor of Mrs. Susan Ryle's birthday, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Brindly, Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Gridley, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Berkshire and daughter Linda Jane, Dr. and Mrs. Floyd Ryle and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ryle.

Rev. Garriott delivered a most excellent sermon for the graduating class at the M. E. Church Sunday night. A large and appreciative audience heard his address.

"Son John," a play presented by the senior class at the local hall Saturday night, was enjoyed by a large crowd. Each pupil deserves honorable mention for the perfect manner in which they carried out their respective parts. Professor Davidson has proven himself to be a very efficient instructor.

Commencement exercises will be held Friday evening at the Christian Church. Don't pass up the opportunity to hear Professor Noe of Kentucky University.

Wyan and Ruth Ann Stephens spent Monday with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William Stephens.

There will be a strawberry and ice cream supper at the Florence Baptist church Saturday evening, June 13. A fine supper of ice cream stawberries, home-made cake is promised. Proceeds to the building fund of the new church.

Paul Renaker and wife of Goodridge drive, are receiving congratulations upon the arrival of a fine son, Paul, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Brodus Lucas entertained Mr. and Mrs. Charles Clarkson Satrday evening.

Mrs. John Utzinger and daughter Helena, of Francesville, Miss Stella Mae and Loretta Baxter, of Hebron, were the gests Sunday afternoon of Miss Minnie Baxter.

Mrs. John Conner enjoyed a delightful visit the past week with Miss Addie Norman of Covington.

Chester Souther and wife of Detroit spent Friday with his aunt, Mrs. Annie Souther.

Miss Minnie Baxter wishes to express her appreciation and thanks to her many relatives and friends for the kindnesses shown her during her recent illness. These kindnesses never will be forgotten. Especially does she wish to thank Rev. Roy Johnson for the lovely prayer made at her bedside while a patient at the Deaconness Hospital.

Mrs Charles Scott and daughter Mrs. Alfred Roberts and daughter, of the Dixie Highway, left Saturday for Chicago, where they intended to visit Mrs. Scott's son, Charles, Jr., and wife.

Harold Aylor and wife and Mrs. Hattie Creel spent Saturday afternoon in the city.

Students and teachers in Boone High School made an excursion to the Cincinnati Zoo last Friday as a sort of celberation of the last day of their school session, which occurred on Thursday. Friday, however, proved to be "all wet" and they certainly were a sorry looking crowd when they "shook the dust" of the Zoological Gardens from their feet.

Not to be outdone, and to show their resourcefullness and determination, they made plans immediately upon their arrival at Burlington for a party that night in the local school auditorium. The party of course being preceded by a complete change of clothing.

RABBIT HASH

Rabbit Hash played Burlington Saturday. Rabbit Hash won 9 to 4.

Several attended Hart's show here Thursday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Ryle, Thaddius Ryle and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Stephens. The Sunday School at the Baptist Church was well attended Sunday.

Mrs. Lucy Ryle visited B. W. Clore and family Sunday. Mrs. Zoe Stephens called on them also in the afternoon.

Miss Francis Ryle spent Wednesday night with Miss Fay Craddock.

Mrs. Lena Wingate called on Mrs. Martha Conner Sunday afternoon.

Charles Dolph and wife spent Sunday evening with Mrs. Lou Van Ness and son Joe.

COMMISSARY

Mrs. Lula J. Hudson of Walton spent several days recently with her daughter, Mrs. J. B. Walton and family.

The Boone County Woman's Club held their May meeting at the home of Miss Pearl Botts. Those who were present enjoyed a pleasant afternoon. The June meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Missouri Rice.

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Huey and Miss Estelle were the guests Sunday afternoon of J. B. Walton and family.

Mr .and Mrs. Elmer Jarrell entertained guests last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Walton were in Covington and Cincinnati shopping one day last week.

Bob Bradford, who has been ill, is much improved, we are glad to report.

The Burlington and Bellevue road is being greatly improved by a coating of gravel.

Miss Pearl Botts called on Mesdames W. M. and J. B. Walton one afternoon recently.

The Sunday School bus, driven by Wendel Easton, is quite a benefit to this community. This furnishes a way for many who would not otherwise have an opportunity to attend.

R. B. and Franklin Huey shipped a nice bunch of lambs to Cincinnati May the fifth.

BIG BERTHA

IN PETERSBURG-WALTON TILT IS BOEHLER, WHO PITCHES CLEVERLY AND HITS TERRIFICALLY—WALTON BOYS HAVE BAD DAY OFF, AND FALL TO WITHIN HALF GAME OF SECOND PLACE

In our last issue we hinted that George Boehler, veteran hurler of the Petersburg team, might "mow down Boone county hitters like Father Time's scythe," with the approach of summer weather.

Decoration Day was a nice warm day and, since the league-leading Waltonians were appearing on the Petersburg lot, we journeyed down to witness the conflict between these two tams. Although Boehler's effort was not what might be called sensational, yet it was of the type that demonstrated that his reputed prowess, gained over a long period of years in real fast company, was no myth.

He allowed Walton 12 hits, enough to win any ordinary game, while his opponent, Irish Norman, held Mr. Boehler's mates to 10. The score being 10-2 in favor of Petersburg the reader naturally will imply that there was something loose somewhere. Well, there was. It was Mr. Norman's support. But it most emphatically was not Boehler's pitching.

The secret was that he, like any thoughtful man, especially whose baseball years are numbered, put in his hard licks with men aboard. Although Walton, as aforesaid, garnered more hits than Petersburg, yet, to the casual observer, the pitching of Boehler seemed to outclass that of his opponent by a wide margin. The strikeouts were listed as follows: Norman 3 and Boehler 8. Dewey Benson, who twirled the last inning for Walton succeeded in setting down the slugging Boehler for Petersburg's fourth fanning bee.

And pitching wasn't all that the big George did in the game He turned in one of the most marvelous drives ever seen in Boone county, when he lifted one high, wide and handsome far over the extended left field barrier for what might have been a double home run for a good fast man But Boehler was very lame in his right ankle and simply limped slowly around to third, while Manager Laws rooted the pellet out of the suburbs It was easily the most whopsome wallop the writer ever has seen in Boone county and seemed to have height and distance enough to have cleared the wall at Redland Field. Two other lusty drives also fell from the bludgeon of the batting Boehler, one a single and the other a double, which might have been a triple for a man able to run.

Petersburg opened the game with a three-run barrage in the first and from that moment it was their game. They added one in the third, but that was all until the seventh. In this inning the Walton defense cracked badly and the home team counted six large and ornate tallies. The visiting team made five errors in this stanza, three by the clean, classy little player Bobby Ross and two by the reliable Shearer, Walton's crack receiver.

The Walton scoring did not come until after the count stood 10-0. They counted in the seventh on Cox's error on Shearer's line drive to left, followed by a double by Glenn, who got to Boehler for two hits in his last two trips to the platter, driving in both of Walton's runs. The other counter came in the ninth when "Dutch" Hartman led off with his second hit. He was chased across by Glenn's single preceded by an error by Bradburn. Boehler's support was high classs, especially in the outfield, where Cox, Jarrell and Ruth performed handsomely. Only two errors were committeed and, pecularily enough, both counted in the scoring of Walton's runs.

Another peculiar feature is noted in the distribution of Walton's 12 bingles. Dudgeon, Laws and Shearer went hitless, while Ross, Glenn, Robinson, Hartman, Bering and Norman smacked exactly two each. For Petersburg Boehler made three, Bradburn two, Klopp two, Jarrell two, and Hitzfield one.

All in all it was a bad day for Walton, but to a close follower of this fine team it has been observed that they are like the "little girl with the curl"—when they are bad they are putrid. The next time out they likely will be as tight as a Wall street Israelite.

Note: This story has been written by the editor with due apologies to "Hot Shot," who has been in a state of coma since the Waterloo. He will be back on our staff next week.

Farm Facts

SPRAY FRUIT

A heavy fruit crop in Boone county is in the making and wide awake orchardmen have been busy putting on sprays to kill insects and keep down fungus diseases. Spraying above all else will help to produce clean fruit that will be in market conditions at marketing time.

Many farmers spraying for the first time haveg otten a little mixed up in the different spray materials that they are to use. There is a vast difference in lime sulfur and sulfur-lime dry mix used in the peach spray. Apples also require a different spray schedule from that of peaches.

Those growers who are not clear on their spray schedule should secure the College of Agriculture Extension circular No. 176 on spraying fruit in Kentucky. This circular and other fruit circulars are available free of charge on request at the county agent's office in Burlington.

SUDAN GRASS

Due to the pasture failures of last year many farmers became interested in Sudan grass as a quick rank growing annual grass for pasture or hay. Many farmers have asked when is the best time to seed this crop. Sudan grass should be seeded about the same time as soy beans or cow peas. According to this rule now is the time.

Sudan grass should be sown at the rates of from 20 to 30 pounds per acre. The heavier seeding is preferred where the crop is to be used for pasture, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. The seed is cheap this year and can be bought at from 10 to 12 cents per pound.

MELON BUGS

Watermelons and other members of the melon family have been planted the past two weeks and are now coming thru the ground. Many farmers in the county are reporting that bugs are bothering their crop already.

The best remedy for bugs on melons, cucumbers or other members of this family is a mixture of 20 pounds of gypsum and 1 pound of either calcium arsenate or arsenate of lead. The mixture should be kept on the hills from the time the plants crack the ground as it serves as both a repellant and a poison. The Boone County Farm Bureau or any of the local stores in the county carry or can secure the gypsum at a few cents a pound.

DRENCH SHEEP

One hundred and eighty-five sheep were drenched for stomach worm control on the farm of J. C. Bedinger and H. C. Butler of near Nichwood on last Tuesday morning in a demonstration given by County Agent H. R. Forkner. The sheep were treated at a cost of less than one third cents per head.

A combination drench of one-thirdbluestone solution was used. This mixture is recommended as giving better results than either of the above solutions used separately.

The county agent is recommending that all flocks in the county be drenched or given the capsule treatment furnished by Dr. Ryle at Burlington once each month. If these recommendations are followed out gains will be made through the elimination of stomach worm trouble in sheep.

JERSEY CATTLE CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

The Boone County Jersey Cattle Club elected officers and planned a program of work at a meeting held in Burlington Monday afternoon, June 1.

The following officers were elected to preside for the ensuing year: W. G. Kite, president; Kenneth Stephens, vice president; O. C Hafer, secretary-treasurer; T. W. Rice, Smith Goodrich, Fred Seikman and Franklin Huey, directors, and T. W. Rice, Kenneth Stephens and O. C. Hafer, sales committee.

The club voted 100 per cent in favor of a state tax on oleo to protect the dairy industry. The directors were authorized to render any assistance possible to the state organization in sponsoring this work. A tour of leading Jersey farms in the south end of the county was planned for the fall program and a special sales committee was appointed to look after the interests of members.

VICTIM

OF AUTOMOBILE CRASH DIES AT BOOTH MEMORIAL HOSPITAL EARLY TUESDAY EVENING—GIRL COMPANION SUSTAINS CRUSHED LEG—KICKS BOND MAY BE RAISED

Injuries received in an automobile crash near Florence last Friday proved fatal to Carl Motz, 20 years old, plumber, of 725 Lafayette avenue, Cincinnati. Motz died at Booth Memorial hospital early Tuesday evening, June 2nd.

Motz suffered fracture of the skull and a broken right leg, while his companion, Miss Marion Baker, 19, of Erlanger, sustained crushed limb,when the motor cycle in which they were riding struck an auto said to have been driven by James Hicks, of Union, this county.

The young couple had been on a hay ride and were returning to their homes when the fatal crash occurred. Other couples, also participants in the hay ride, were following in automobiles.

Mr. Hicks was immediately placed under one thousand dollars bond for reckless driving, but it was said that the bond would be raised and the charge changed to manslaughter following the death of Motz.

"LAUGHS LAST"

BELLEVIEW TURNS TABLES ON RABBIT HASH, WHEN BLACK TURNS IN ANOTHER GREAT EFFORT ON MOUND— BRADY HAS AN OFF DAY

Schuyler Hensley got even with "Sheenie" Craig last Saturday, which is just another way of saying taht Belleview celebrated Decoration Day by defeating Rabbit Hash.

Just by way of explaining the opening statement we will tell you that Mr. Craig is the principal proponent of the Rabbit Hash aggregation, while Mr. Hensley is the William Wrigley at Belleview. In the opening game of the season Rabbit Hash nosed out Belleview in a well played game 3-2 And since that time Mr. Craig and his cohorts have been "rubbing it in" on Schuyler—and how!

So now it's all even. but Schuyler says he is getting a big kick out of the old axiom—"he who laughs last laughs best."

Black Goes Great

Ben Black, the man mountain of the Belleview boxmen, was sent to the mound against his former team mates and to say that he pitched an effective game is an idle statement when we unfold the score of 10-2.

He held his opponents to six hits, struck out 11 and walked three, and he was most effective when scoring threatened. This is evident from a glance at the score book, as there it is seen that he kept his opponents away from the rubber until the last half of the ninth.

Brady Has Off Day

As a contrast to the effective hurling of Black a summary of the game reveals that Joe (Old Hoss) Brady did not possess his usual cunning. At least Belleview touched him for 17 hits and that doesn't sound just like Joe's kind of a game. However, his famed whiff ball was working about as usual, as 12 Belleview boys carried the wood back to the bench without having hit one fair.

Of the six hits garnered off Black, Percy Ryle hit a double and Bill Stephens a triple, while "Mutt" Rogers slashed out two doubles and "Bucky" Rogers one. Cliff Pope was good for four out of five, one a triple, and Russell Miller three bingles and two walks out of five unofficial trips to the plate for a perfect average.

The victory put Belleview within one-half game of the leadership of the league, as Walton dropped one at Petersburg. Belleview will have an opportunity to erase this lead this week at Walton. Should Ben Black continue his winning ways they might do just that.

Mr. Subscriber, don't forget that only 21 more days remain in which you will be able to save a dollar on each year's subscription for the Recorder. It saves you one half.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Shearer and daughter, Helen Hall, of Newport, spent Decoration Day and Sunday with Mrs. Shearer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Hall.

UTOPIA CLUB

NAMES DELAGATES TO ATTEND MEETING AT LEXINGTON — FOUR NEW MEMBERS ADDED AT GATHERING AT BURLINGTON THURSDAY NIGHT

Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 named Wilton Stephens of Burlington as alternate with expenses paid to the state Utopia club meeting to be held at the University of Kentucky during Junior Week, June the 8th to the 13th.,

R. A. Turner, club specialist from one of the principal speakers on the program at the meeting held at Washington, D. C., was present and Burlington last Thursday night. Mr. Turner praised Kentucky as being one of the two first states in the union to take the lead in older boys and girls club work and stressed the importance of Utopia Club work as a means of building for the future.

A splendid program was rendered by the Florence group following the regular business session. Miss Archmarie Lucas, Lucille Rice and Virginia Yelton and Kirtley McWethy were initiated into the club. A total of 29 were present at the meeting.

TEN INNINGS

REQUIRED TO DECIDE ISSUE BETWEEN HEBRON AND BURLINGTON—AKIN DOES GOOD WORK ON MOUND—HAFER IS HITTING STAR

In a game replete with errors Hebron nosed out the Burlington club last Saturday in their holiday affray at Hebron. Although the game went ten innings and was rors werecommitted might lead one ovenie tought, the fact that 14 erto believe that the contest was uninteresting, but whether or not runs are scored cleanly makes no difference to the average fan, if the score remains close.

To Braun (previously spelled Brown in this newspaper) was assigned the menial labor of casting them across the dais for Hebron, while Manager Blythe, of Burlington, when some of his imported stock failed to show up for the tilt, led out a dark horse for the edification of the fans. Roscoe Akin, the said somber hued equine, while a star of considerable magnitude in other positions, heretofore has confined his pitching to lower circles than the Boone County circuit.

But, be this as it may, Roscoe was sent to the hassock and it was the general opinion of eye witnesses that he twirled in excellent fashion, in fact good enough to win on most occasions. At any rate his first start proved deserving of another and he may get the opportunity soon. Indeed it appears certain that he will start the game here against the same team this week-end.

Bob Hafer was the principal thorn in the side of Mr. Akin and, had it not been for him, he no doubt would have pulled through in the regulation distance. But Bob propelled three hits and drew the only two free tickets issued by Roxie; all in all proving quite a menace.

Braun went very well until the first half of the sixth, when, with his team leading 2-0, Burlington hopped on him for enough to tie the score. In the seventh they scored another and Braun was removed and sent to right field to exchange places with Kiefer. In the very next inning Mr. Kiefer got his and Braun came back. He held the visitors scoreless in the ninth and in the tenth frame fanned the entire side.

The lead see-sawed back and forth until Hebron came to bat in the last half of the eighth, trailing by a one-run margin. Joe Aylor was first up, and singled, followed by one of like dimension by the troublesome Hafer. A fly to right by Moore counted Aylor with the tying run.

Nothing doing by either side in the ninth, nor by Burlington in the first of the tenth, Jack Garnett, Hebron's lead-off man, was first up in the last of the tenth and took one of Akin's fast ones in the slats, this feat in itself a tip-off for a bad inning for Burlington. Aylor was retired by Akin, Garnett taking second. Roxy, however, passed the dangerous Hafer, but his strategy failed of its purpose when Lenhof erred on Stull's effort, filling the sacks.

Moore then rapped one down to Hickman, who, with the stage all set

Local News

The Recorder failed to receive the official reports of any of the Church League games in the county, although we know unofficially that Petersburg downed Burlington for their first loss of the season 12-10. In this Aubrey Finn, of Burlington, hit what is said to have been the longest drive ever before hit at the school house ground. It is said to have hit a tree about 420 feet from the home plate. Of course the outfield has a pronounced down grade, but that is some drive at that. Bullittsville, which team drew the bye and played Warsaw, Gallatin county, suffered a 12-inning defeat down there, score 4-3. Chas. Rilye hit a home run in the ninth with two on to tie the score for the visitors.

Last Saturday morning the Waterloo and Burlington Junior baseball teams hooked up on the school house diamond, the result being a score of 10-9 in favor of Burlington.

Ted Cress visited his parents here last Saturday and Sunday. Mr. Cress is driving a Rosedale-Cincinnati bus and with which position he is well pleased.

Mr. Subscriber, don't forget that only 21 more days remain in which you will be able to save a dollar on each year's subscription for the Recorder. It saves you one half.

Edgar Maurer, Miss Kathryn Maurer, and Mr. and Mrs. Julius Smith spent the holiday week-end with Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Oldham at Mt. Sterling.

W. H. Folks, of near Newport, who was in Burlington for a short time last Sunday afternoon, is reported to be affiliated with B. I. Susong, former editor of the Kentucky Post, in the publication of a new newspaper to be printed in Newport and circulated throughout Northern Kentucky. It is said that this newspaper, which will come off the press three times weekly, will be in circulation sometime during this month.

The improvements being made in the residence of Dr. M. A. Yelton are nearing completion. When finished this will be one of the most modern and well-equipped, as well as attractive, homes in Burlington.

County Judge N. E. Riddell returned last Saturday from an extended visit with relatives in San Judge Riddell also visited Old Mexico. He reports that he thoroughly enjoyed his trip and appears to have derived a great deal of benefit from it.

A children's program will be given at the M. E. Church on Sunday evening, June 14th. Everyone welcome.

Superintendent D. H. Norris announced Tuesday a most substantial acquisition for the new and constantly growing school library at Burlington. It came in the form of a gift from County Judge N. E. Riddell and consisted of 20 volumes of the Harvard Classics Supplement, these volumes being new and not yet unpacked; eight volumes of modern fictlon by Oppenheim, and 150 volumes of bound agricultural reference work. Judge Riddell is to be commended for this most generous gift.

Through a misunderstanding the Recorder carried a story last week giving White Haven as the name of the new Consolidated school between Beaver and Union. The name, although derived from the old academy White Haven, is not White Haven at all, but is New Haven instead. At any rate the story was not entirely amiss.

Elmer Goodridge and family of South Erlanger, spent Decoration Day with relatives here. Elmere atmosphere seems to be agreeing with "Sol," as he is considerably heavier than when he left this neck of the woods several years ago.

W. H. Ward, printer in this shop, attended the automobile races at Indianapolis last Saturday, after which he motored to Louisville, where he spent Sunday with his son. Mr. Ward returned by way of Frankfort, where he stopped for a short stay with relatives there.

Attorney D. E. Castleman, who is convalescing after an illness of several months, was able to be on hand in the county seat on County Court day last Monday.

LAUREL FESTIVAL

FOR KENTUCKY COLLEGES TO BE HELD AT CLEAR CREEK MOUNTAIN SPRINGS FRIDAY AND SATUEDAY OF THIS WEEK—MANY COLLEGE GIRLS TO CONTEND FOR TITLE OF QUEEN

Pineville, Ky.—June 3—The youth and beauty of the colleges and universities of Kentucky will gather at Clear Creek Mountain Springs, three miles from here, June 5 and 6, and compete for the title of "Queen" of the first annual mountain laurel festival of Kentucky. Thirteen names have been sent of prospective entrants and all the beauty of which the Blue Grass state is famous will be present to compete for the title.

The festival this year will be largely in the nature of an organization meeting. A more elaborate program will develop from year to year. Two bands from the University of Kentucky and Eastern Teachers College will be in attendance to provide music, and some of the otustanding orators of the state will be on the program.

The first session will be held in an open air amphitheater at the springs. President H. L. Donovan, of Eastern State Teachers' College, Richmond, will make the welcoming address as head of the festival. Judge S. S. Willis, of Ashland, justice of the Kentucky Court of Appeals will respond. Native mountain folk will sing some of the old ballads and T. Russ Hill formerly of Middlesboro, will discuss the festival idea. William Marshall Bullitt, Louisville, will talk at the afternoon session on "Dr. Thomas Walker." Mountain dances next will be featured, after which Judge Samuel M. Wilson, Lexington, will deliver an address on the "Historical Significance of the Old Wilderness Road." Governor Flem D. Sampson [illegible] by judges.

The second day of the festival will be devoted to trips to scenic parts of the Cumberland Mountains. Residents will conduct tours to various places and hikes will be led through Cumberland State Park and other places where mountain laurel and rhododendron abound.

NOTICE

The Lunch Committee of the Hebron Parent-Teacher Association wishes to thank each and everyone who so willingly assisted in making a success of our lunch room, during the term of 1930-31.

We know it often required sacrifices on the part of the mothers, and we most earnestly wish to express ou rappreciation for their cooperation.

Especially do we thank Mrs. Dora Gordon and Miss Bessie Aylor for their faithfulness and diligence in preparing such nourishing and appetizing lunches. Their untiring labor has been a great aid to our children toward becoming strong men and women.

We also wish to thank Mr. Hubert Conner for buying much of this food. He has been untiring in his efforts to help further the cause.

We thank the Hi Y boys for the money donated by them for lunches for needy children. As many as six of these children were fed at one time.

There have been many donations made during the term. To the donors, we say, "Many Thanks."

As to our success in a monetary way, the treasurer's report proves that the year's work has not been in vain.

Mrs. C. V. Lucy, Chairman.
Mrs. Liston Hempfling, Sec.

While moving the editor's desk from the lower story of the Recorder building into an upstairs office this week a bill of lading fell from a crack in the desk, which once was the property of the late E. T. Krutz, prominent Petersburg merchant. The bill was dated July 3d, 1906, and was for the shipment of 50 hogs by Kirby Cox. The hogs were shipped on the old Lizzie Bay.

W. T. Renaker and family, O. K. Powers and family, Mrs. H. C. Cotton, all of Verona, and Jess Wilson and family, of Covington, were the guests of Deputy Sheriff W. B. Cotton and family at their beautiful new location just east of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Congleton entertained a number of relatives from Fayette county at their home on the Belleview pike last Sunday. Among the guests were Mr. Congleton's father and brother.

MEMBER KENTUCKY PRESS ASSOCIATION ORGANIZED JANUARY, 1866

We were talking the other day with a friend whose main interest in life, outside of his own business, is baseball. We were talking, as most men do when they meet these day, about the business situation.

"The business situation reminds me of the baseball situation," said our friend. "You remember that for the past few seasons an enormous number of big league players were batting home runs? They would stand at the plate, holding the bat by the tip and line them out over center field fence until home runs got to be almost commonplace. People began to get tired of them.

"Last winter the baseball magnates got together to see how they could tighten up the game. They developed a new ball, which is being used this season. The leather cover is thicker and the seams are rougher, which gives the pitcher better control and a sharper break on his curves. Players who used to bat the old ball all over the lot found they could not even hit the new ball half the time. Then somebody began to think back, and recalled that Ty Cobb, the greatest batter of them all, used to hold his bat somewhere in the middle and crouch over the plate. He didn't hit many home runs but he got to first base oftener than any other batter in his time. So the baseball players of this season instead of swinging high, wide and handsome, have just shortened up their bats and are playing for base hits instead of home runs.

"Now it seems to me," our friend went on, that there is a lesson in that for business men. Everybody in business was batting home runs two or three years ago. But we are playing business with a new kind of ball, and the fellow that swings a long bat and keeps trying for home runs these days does not even get to first base. But the wise business men are just shortening up their grip, playing up close to the plate and they are batting out base hits, while the one who have not found out yet that the new ball is harder to hit are beefing about hard times and blaming their troubles on everybody but themselves."

It seems to us that there is a good deal in what our friend said. There are a lot of business men who had things coming their way too easily during the boom, but the ones who are holding their own the ones who are waiting for the today and getting ahead are not old-times to come back, but are the ones who are adopting their ideas and their business methods to today's conditions.

The Family Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Cultivation — One lesson the drought of last summer taught was the value of proper cultivation. There was a time when cultivating or "working" a garden meant giving deep stirring with a bull-tongue or with a two-shovel plow, so that the roots may have air. In a season of plentiful moisture, such a practice might do little harm but if rains are few, such cultivation is anything but beneficial.

The experiment stations have shown that the only purpose in working ground is to discourage weeds, and that deep stirring is waste of labor, at the very least. It is assumed that the soil was properly-prepared before sowing or plant setting was done. The experiments show that when the weeds were literally shaved off at the soil surface, the soil itself left undisturbed, crops grew best.

A sharp hoe can be made to give that kind of cultivation but it is tedious; too, more or less tramping is done by the hoer. A much better tool is a wheel hoe or "garden plow," fitted with the scuffle hoe attachment, or "beet hoe" as commercial gardeners call it. The scuffle hoe is in effect a pair of knife blades so arranged as to skim the land. The operator may adjust the depth of skimming to about an inch or slightly less. Besides its thoroughness such a wheel hoe has speed to recommend it, for an entire garden can be worked in from one-fourth to one-half the time, and at a considerable saving in energy.

Continuing to speak of cultivation in general, there are two garden crops whose working needs to be done specifically to fit their nature. They are onions and salsify.

Onions should never be ridged. They do best if they are entirely exposed, merely anchored by the roots at the base. A scuffle hoe gives the proper kind of cultivation.

Salsify is prone to making side roots if the soil close to them is stirred at least, deeply. It is best to go no nearer than 2 inches, and to remove the weeds in the row by hand.

Tying—Staked tomatoes. The tomato stakes have no doubt been set. If not it is best to lose no more time. The stakes should be driven no closer to the plant than 2 inches; 3 or 4 inches is better, as doing less damage to the roots. And now comes tying.

The object in tying is to support the fruit clusters which are literally hung in loops of rags or of soft twine, so arranged as not to choke the plant stem. The way to do is to pass the twine about the stake, and to leave a loop of at least an inch across. The tension on the loop will keep the twine from slipping down the stake. A "tie" made under every other cluster is usually enough.

The reminder may be in order to "behead" the plant above the cluster that comes at the top of the stake, for the fruit beyond this point is usually of poor size and quality because of starvation due to the breaking over of the unsupported plant stem.

SUGGESTIONS FOR POULTRY RAISERS

Adding milk to commercial baby chick starters may result in too rich feed and cause intestinal disturbances, says the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Where an abundance of milk is available on the farm it can be fed with a mash composed of 70 pounds of ground yellow corn, 25 pounds of wheat middlings or a good grade of shipstuff, 5 pounds of bonemeal and a pound of salt. Give all the milk the chicks will drink when feeding this ration. If yellow corn is not to be had a green feed should be supplied.

Professor L. F. Payne of the Kansas State Agricultural College will be one of the principal speakers at the seventh annual poultry short course to be held at the College of Agriculture the latter part of June. He will discuss head points and the relationship between body characters and production. H. S. Patterson, farm agent in Grayson county, will speak about the work done with poultry in his county. The course, which will be open free to all, will be practical in its nature, and include judging and culling.

The Kentucky shed-roof poultry house, without sacrificing any of houses can be built at a cost of 75 cents to $1.75 a bird, says a revised edition of "Housing Farm Poultry," circular No. 107, published by the College of Agriculture. It advocates a small investment in a poultry house, without sacrificing any of the desirable features, in order to reduce the cost of production. The circular is well illustrated, and deals exhaustively with the construction of a good farm poultry house.

The county agent estimates that Fleming county farmers sowed 400 bushels of alfalfa seed, and in addition large amounts of korean lespedeza and orchard grass.

County Agent C. V. Bryan of Taylor county says farmers "are making the greatest efforts of their lives to raise everything they need on the farm for the next winter."

McCracken county fruit growers are co-operating with the College of Agriculture in studying the control of orchard insects.

Owen county lambs are going on the market in better quality and condition than in previous years. Most of them are standardized.

Some Simple Sunday Night Suppers You And Your Friends Will Enjoy

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

AN informal gathering of friends for Sunday evening supper can be made one of the most enjoyable occasions of the entire week. Particularly if the meal is kept extremely simple.

The food either should have been cooked the day before, or else be of a type that is easy to prepare and serve. Fruit salads, dainty sandwiches, rarebits, and crisp waffles are among the many dishes admirably suited for the main course of these Sunday night suppers. For dessert, there probably will be cake or pudding left over from dinner; or, if not, fresh fruit or a mixed fruit cup are easy to prepare.

You will find the following menus for Sunday suppers popular with both your family and your guests. Why not plan to serve one of them next Sunday?

Supper Sandwiches
Over-Night Fruit Salad Cookies
Tea

Molded Supper Salad
Brown-Bread-and-Butter Sandwiches
Stuffed Spanish Olives
Dill Pickles
Devil's Food Cake
with Caramel Frosting
Tea

Gherkin Fruit Salad
Nut and Celery Sandwiches
Chocolate Wafer Dessert

Deviled Rarebit on Toast Cubes
Sandwich Relish Sandwiches
Peach Tarts
Tea

Supper Sandwiches: Slice white bread ¼ inch thick, and spread with Prepared Mustard Sauce. Flake one can tuna fish and mix with Sandwich Relish, using half as much relish as fish. Spread between slices of bread and press firmly together. Dip in slightly beaten egg to which has been added ½ cup milk, salt and pepper. Brown quickly in several tablespoons butter and drain on unglazed paper. Serve hot, garnished with a tiny lettuce cup filled with India Relish.

Over-Night Fruit Salad: 1 egg, beaten; 2 tablespoons Pure Vinegar; 2 tablespoons sugar; 1 cup white cherries; 1 cup pineapple; 1 cup marshmallows; 1 orange; ½ cup whipped cream.

Put egg in double boiler, add vinegar and sugar, stirring constantly until thick and smooth. Cool and fold in whipped cream and diced fruit. Mold in ring mold and set in refrigerator over night.

Molded Supper Salad: 1 can Cream of Tomato Soup; 2 cakes soft white cream cheese; 1 cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing; 1 tablespoon gelatine (soaked in ¼ cup cold water); ½ cup celery; 1 green pepper, chopped; ¾ cup Stuffed Spanish Olives, sliced.

Heat the Tomato Soup, and add cheese, salad dressing, and gelatine. When this begins to thicken, add celery, pepper and olives. Mold in individual molds, chill and serve on lettuce, garnishing with sliced olives.

Devil's Food Cake: ½ cup butter; 1½ cups sugar; 2 eggs; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 1 cup sweet milk; 2½ tablespoons Distilled White Vinegar; 2 cups pastry flour or 1¾ cups all-purpose flour; 1 teaspoon baking powder; 1 teaspoon soda; ¼ teaspoon salt; 3 squares bitter chocolate.

Cream butter, and add sugar gradually. Add one egg at a time, beating 2 minutes after adding each. Add Vinegar to milk gradually, stirring rapidly. Then add flour sifted with the baking powder, salt and soda, alternately with milk. Last add vanilla and melted chocolate. Pour into a greased loaf pan, and bake at 350 degrees F., for 45 minutes. Spread with Caramel Frosting.

Caramel Frosting: 2 cups light brown sugar; 1 teaspoon Distilled White Vinegar; ¼ teaspoon salt; ½ cup milk; 2 tablespoons butter.

Mix ingredients, wipe down sides of pan and bring slowly to a boil, keeping lid on pan. Cook to soft ball stage—236 degrees F. Add butter, cool until lukewarm; then add vanilla and beat until creamy, and spread on cake. If it becomes too stiff, add a few drops of hot water and mix thoroughly.

Gherkin Fruit Salad: 2 oranges; 2 bananas; 2 apples; 2 slices pineapple; ½ cup chopped Sweet Gherkins; ½ cup nuts; 2 teaspoons lemon juice; ¼ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Dice oranges, bananas, apples, and pineapple, and add nuts, Gherkins and lemon juice. Chill thoroughly, and add Mayonnaise. Serve in lettuce cups and garnish with Mayonnaise and Maraschino cherries.

Nut and Celery Sandwiches: Chop ½ cup walnuts and ¾ cup celery very fine. Moisten with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, spread on thin slices of buttered bread, and cut into spade, heart, diamond and club shapes.

Chocolate Wafer Dessert: Use 1 package chocolate wafers. Whip ½ pint cream, add 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon vanilla. Put wafers together with thin layers of whipped cream to form a long cylinder, and coat the outside thinly with whipped cream. Set in refrigerator for 2 or 3 hours and cut in diagonal slices.

Deviled Rarebit: 1 tablespoon butter; 1 tablespoons flour; 1 medium can Cream of Celery Soup; 1 8-oz. can deviled ham; 2 hard cooked eggs; Buttered toast cubes.

Peach Tarts: 2 cups sifted flour; 1 teaspoon salt; 1½ teaspoons baking powder; ½ cup fat; ¼ cup water; Currant Jelly; 1 can peaches.

Sift flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in fat and moisten with enough water to form a stiff dough. Roll 1/8 inch thick and cut in rounds. In center of each, place ½ canned peach from which juice has been drained, and fill cavity with Currant Jelly. Roll pastry up around peach and press edges together. Bake 20 minutes at 450 degrees F. Serve hot or cold, with following sauce: 1 cup peach juice; 2 teaspoons flour; 1 tablespoon lemon juice; 6 marshmallows, quartered.

FARMERS INSPECT EXPERIMENT FIELD

Good bluegrass sod in a region where many persons think bluegrass will not grow well, was one of the surprises which greeted 75 farmers who recently inspected the experiment field which the University of Kentucky maintains near Campbellsville. Clover and bluegrass had been sown in wheat in a tobacco rotation.

The visitors also saw how clover and grass mixtures sowed on land treated with lime and superphosphate withstood the drouth of last year. Wheat on land treated with phosphate was much better than wheat on untreated land.

Another interesting point brought out was that of using Kentucky grown adapted red clover seed. Five Taylor county farmers who sowed this seed reported good stands coming through the drouth of last year. One of them sowed at the same time commercial seed of unknown origin and had a complete failure, while the Kentucky grown adapted seed made a good crop.

KENTUCK FARM RADIO PROBRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of June 8. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

June 8—The Spirit of Junior Week, Miss Anita Burnam. Why I Like To Go to Junior Week, Miss Adele Deibel, Jefferson County. Some Junior Week Inspirations, Conrad Feltner, Laurel County.

June 10—What Junior Week Means to Me, Grant Rice, Wayne County. Four Junior Weeks, Miss Mildred Young, Simpson County.

The Kentucky Seed Improvement Association, through its secretary, Ralph Kenney of the College of Agriculture, announces a 5-acre lespedeza hay contest, in which it will distribute liberal cash prizes. Kentucky farmers sowed thousands of acres of korean lespedeza this year, stimulated, in part, by the way this crop behaved during the drouth of last year.

A carload of 8,000 feet of drainage tile has been distributed among farmers in Johnson county.

The Powell County Seed Association has sold a large amount of seed corn, much of it going to other counties.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

If any writer were big enough to gather up all the thousands of stories of the stock market crash, he would have material for the Great American Novel.

For the bull market, and the catastrophe which ended it, represented all that is best and worst in the American character; our optimism, which is at once our strength and our weakness; our restless desire to better our condition by any available means; our worthy ambition and our unworthy greed.

One of the best of the market stories was told me by a celebrated surgeon whose name I cannot reveal.

'I work hard for my money," he said, "and have never speculated. However, the fever got me finally, like everybody else. There was one particular stock which was a favorite in my city. Bank presidents and boot-black were in it together; it went up by leaps and bounds.

"Against all my traditions, I bought several hundred shares. It continued to climb; I had profit of many thousand dollars.

"One night my wife saw me making penciled calculations on the margin of the newspaper. She said I ought not to be worrying about stocks, and she urged me to sell out and never think about the market again.

"I argued that by holding on for another ten points we could pay for the wing which she wanted to build on the house.

"While we were still talking, my little girl came in to ask my help on her Latin lesson for the next day. It was the translation of Aesops fable of the dog and the bone. The dog, you remember, saw his reflection, in the water and thinking it was another dog whose bone he would steal, reached down with open jaws and lost his own bone.

"The moral of the fable was, 'Greed usually results in the loss of everything'."

"That night when I went to bed I could not sleep. The fable kept running through my mind. First thing next morning I telephoned my broker to sell me out. It happened that the stock went up a few more points, but a couple of weeks later it dropped like a shot. I was very lucky, and had sense enough not to think I had been smart. You can bet that I am done with speculating forever."

I hope that when this editorial is printed we may be in the midst of good times, with increasing business and a rising market. In that case, some young man may see it and appreciate the reminder that "greed usually results in the loss of everything."

NOTICE OF PETITION FOR DISCHARGE FROM BANKRUPTCY

EASTERN DISTRICT OF KENTUCKY:

On this 27th day of May 1931, on reading the petition of Edward P. Cooper, filed at Covington it is ordered by the Court that a hearing be had upon the same on the 14th day of July, 1931, A. D. 1931, before said Court at Covington, in said District, at 10 oclock in the forenoon, and that notice thereof be published in a newspaper printed in said District, and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may at said time and place show cause in writing, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered by the Court that the Clerk shall send by mail to all known creditors copies of this notice, addressed to them at their places of residence as stated.

S. W. STACEY, Clerk.

SHOW BEST METHODS OF CANNING FOOD

The "live-at-home" program launched early in the year is being continued in many counties by encouraging the canning of garden vegetables, fruit and meat. A member of the home demonstration staff of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, meets with a select group of women representing the various communities in the county and demonstrates the best methods of canning. These women in turn give demonstrations in their respective communities to women and 4-H Club girls. Demonstrations have been held in Grant, Kenton, Montgomery, Nicholas, Harrison, Franklin, Pike and Meade counties. Arrangements were made by county farm agents, there being no home demonstration agents in these counties.

Sunday School Lesson

THE RESURRECTION AND THE ASCENSION

Luke 24: 25-40; 5-51.

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

First read the accounts in all the gospels and work out an itinerary for all the people named in the lesson. Very early after the Jewish Sabbath was over, a group of nomed women go forth to the tomb where the body of Jesus had been placed late Friday afternoon that they might complete the embalming for which there had not been time at the burial. On the way they raise the problem about how the heavy stone can be rolled back from the mouth of the sepulchre. As is so often the case, advance worry never accomplishes anything and with blessed frequency the supposed trouble is removed before we arrive. Meanwhile the resurrection of the body of Jesus had taken place and an angel was there to make the precious announcemnt.

As Mary Magdalne tarried near the open tomb hunting for the body He appeared to her, even as he did to others that day and in all about 15 times during thec oming 40 days. In the late afternoon the event took place which is recorded in the lesson text. As a familiar friend He drew near to walk and talk with the two on their way to Emmaus, a few miles from Jerusalem that night, when He came into their midst. After giving that standing commission about preaching the Gospel everywhere He departed from them at Bethany and returned to His rightful place on the Throne with the Father in heaven.

Hints for the Home by Nancy Hart

BARBECUE SAUCE

1 small onion, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons vinegar, ¾ cup catsup, 1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce, 2 tablespoons prepared mustard, ½ teaspoon celery seed, 1 cupful meat stock from the roast.

Slice the onion lengthwise and saute lightly in the butter, add the other ingredients and simmer slowly for 15 minutes.

NOODLE RING WITH CREAMED SPINACH AND MUSHROOMS

1 package noodles, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 cup browned bread crumbs.

Boil noodles in salted water, drain in colander, pour cold water over them and let drain. Mix with two tablespoons butter and place in a well greased ring mold, sprinkle with bread crumbs. Set in a pan of boiling water and let bake slowly Turn out on platter and fill center about three-quarters of an hour, with creamed spinach and mushrooms.

TOMATO JUICE COCKTAIL

2 cups tomato juice, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon vinegar, 1 teaspoon Worchestershire, 4 drops tabasco sauce.

Mix all the ingredients and strain. Shake with crushed ice and serve in cocktail glasses.

BATTER PUDDING

Beat together four eggs, 2 cups of milk, and a pinch of salt. Sift in a cup of flour, turn into a buttered mould, cover tightly, and steam for an hour and a quarter. Serve with jam.

An effective clean-up campaign was conducted in connection with better homes week in Garrard county, sponsored by the homemakers' association and Miss Virginia Howard, county home demonstration agent. Home grounds, highways, school yards, public parks and lots were cleaned, grass sownand flowers, shrubs and trees planted. The park at the courthouse in Lancaster, which was made form a junk heap last year, was further beautified. The 4-H Clubs in the county co-operated in beautifying school grounds.

Houses should be cleaned at least

Holmes Discusses Chances Of Roosevelt, Baker And Others

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Washington—Chorus of hopeful Democrats:
Roosevelt, Ritchie, Baker, Smith
We don't care a pin.
What we want's inside lookin' out
'Stead of outside lookin' in.

Not a doubt is expressed that if the national convention were to be held tomorrow, Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, would be the Democratic candidate for president. Naturally, Roosevelt is not without opposition, but that opposition is not unified, it is leaderless—or "over-leadered," as you prefer, it is without convincing specific ground.

Unfortunately politics is one field in which the early bird, far from being assured of his breakfast, is at an actual disadvantage in his quest for the coveted worm. Actual or tacit announcement of his candidacy by an aspirant brings to bear upon him all of the big and little guns of the supporters of other aspirants. To that extent he faces a unified opposition. His every act, private and public, is made the subject of minute scrutiny and if not universally approved is distorted, magnified and broadcast in an effort to create doubts as to his qualifications and availability and weaken his candidacy. The earlier he gets up the longer the time for hammering.

Conventions are rarely if ever stampeded. It has been said that William Jennings Bryan "stampeded" the Democratic convention in Chicago in 1896, but as a matter of fact the delegates had more than ample time for sober second thought between Bryan's famous "crown of thorns, cross of gold" oration, which made him a national figure, and his nomination for the presidency on his own free-silver platform.

But it does sometimes come to pass that a deadlock occurs, as a result of which a dark horse wins. His political record may or may not have been well known—in such circumstances there is no time for public consideration of and judgment upon his qualifications. In 1920, when Gen. Leonard Wood and Governor Frank O. Lowden locked horns for the Republican nomination to the point of mutual annihilation, Senator Warren G. Harding, darkest of the dark horses, was nominated. In the 1924 Democratic convention it became clear that no candidate could be nominated until the two leaders, McAdoo and Smith, had worn each other out. This took a couple of weeks of balloting, and on the 103d ballot John W. Davis, of West iVrginia, another somber-hued equine, qualified for the Coolidge-Davis sweepstakes in November.

In view of an alleged under-cover relationship with Tammany; in view of somewhat moist personal tendencies, itl s by no means out of the question that opposition to Roosevelt may concentrate on a deadlocker. Two questions arise: Who is going to be the deadlocker, and who is going to bust the deadlock?

Of course, there is Bert Ritchie, of Maryland. The only trouble about Bert is that the blamed old fool places statesmanship before politics. Didn't the poor fish read about what happened to James G. Blaine in 1884? Blaine was so outstanding a statesman that having entered the Senate as a result of executive appointment, to fill vacancy, his subsequent election for the succeeding six-year term is unique in American history in that he was chosen by the unanimous vote of the state legislature, Republicans and Democrats uniting in the choice.

In the case of Blaine, he lost to another statesman. Possibly you might say that it was a case of dog eat dog, and the professional politicians were flabbergasted. In-so-far as Albert E. Ritchie is concerned, no use for him to fish in presidential waters until he learns at least three things. First, he must give up his side-saddle and learn to ride astride; secondly, he must be inoculated with the serum of tongue-tiedness; thirdly, he must readjust his birthplace and be accredited to a state with a more impressive electorial vote.

Then there is ex-Secretary Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, who seems likely to have the support of the Ohio delegation to the next Democratic National Convention. It is said that ex-Gov. James M. Cox, who is still a power in Ohio politics, favors committing the delegation to Mr. Baker. Ohio's large delegation, together with such support as Mr. Baker is likely to pick up in other states, will put him up among the two or three other leaders, at least in the early stages of the next Democratic National Convention. And he is clearly one of the three leading candidates for the 1932 Democratic nomination for president. Apparently he has the ex-soldiers of the World War with him. That is a factor in national conventions not yet tasted—from which it does not follow that it might not be important.

"Why not Newton D. Baker?" asks the Northwest News, one of Ohio's at Napoleon. But even the News concludes its editorial with "The greatest drawback in the Baker-for-President movement is the profusion of favorite sons in his own state of Ohio, which boasts at least four outstanding hopefuls. One must fall back on the old saw that 'anything can happen in a Democratic convention.' The question, 'Why not Baker?' is still a pertinent one."

In spite of his overwhelming defeat in 1928, the name of ex-Governor Alfred F. Smith remains persistingly in the foreground of the Democratic presidential picture. If the race is looked upon as between Governor Roosevelt and "the field," more bets by politicians today would be placed on the field than on the New York governor. In "the field" may be included ex-Governor Smith, Newton D. Baker, Owen D. Young, Governor Ritchie of Maryland, ex-Governor Cox of Ohio (the candidate in 1920) and, possibly, the two outstanding drys, Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas and ex-Governor Byrd of Virginia. And within this "field," among the names other than Roosevelt, the one most often mentioned is Smith.

And there is food for thought in the fact that only 473,000 more ballots than in 1928, if properly distributed, are need for his election.

Sour Milk Preferred

Strange the food sharps never say anything about sour milk, which is really better than sweet!—Woman's Home Companion.

"Kentucky's" Real Meaning

That "Kentucky" means "dark and bloody ground" is a common but erroneous rendering. The Cherokee word "kentucke" means prairie.—Washington Star.

Keeping Fit

The members of most jazz bands, we read, keep in excellent physical training. There is always the possibility, of course, that during the execution of their duties they may suddenly have to make a run for it.—London Humorist.

Actuary's Duties

An actuary is a computing official of an insurance company, one whose profession it is to calculate insurance risks and premiums; a person skilled in theories and problems involved in making these calculations.

Accident Fatalities

The accidental fatality rate per thousand is highest in this country. Canada comes next, then Australia and Switzerland, then New Zealand, Scotland, England and Wales, Germany, Italy, Sweden, Norway and France.

Raleigh's Visit to America

Sir Walter Raleigh did not visit North America. He sent expeditions to Virginia in 1584, 1585, 1586, 1587 and 1589, but Queen Elizabeth would not permit him to accompany the expeditions. Later, however, he did visit South America.

Joy of Anticipation

Things without all remedy should be without regard; what's done is done, says Shakespeare, an argument in favor of the joys of forgetting. But we go on anticipating success, long life, happiness and whether they materialize or not we have had the joy of anticipation.—Exchange.

Happiness Through Love

All the rewards of life lie with goodness: health, success, service, wisdom, knowledge, beauty, and scores of other rewards. All the penalties lie with badness: pain, anger, failure, ignorance, and hate and its brood. Love separates the sheep from the goats. Love is the divine arbiter. Love is the most powerful factor in the achievement of mankind's principal pursuit—happiness through service and success.—Exchange.

First American Iron Works

Sir Walter Raleigh, searching for gold, discovered iron ore in what now is North Carolina in 1585. The first iron works was established at Falling Creek, near Richmond, Va., in 1619, by the Virginia company. Indian troubles resulted in early suspension and permanent iron works were established near Lynn, Mass., in 1643. John Winthrop, son of the famous Massachusetts governor, was the builder of the works.

Attitude Toward Time Is All That Really Counts

Time is passing so quietly that there is need for us to push on with the job we have in hand. We must not think that time passes more quickly at one time than another. It moves always at the same rate. Our attitude to it is the thing that counts. If we are busy, if we are happily concerned in the affairs of life, we do not notice the passing of time. It is then we say that it passes quickly. When we are bored and discontented and gloomy, we think that time hangs heavily upon our hands. And it does.

The right attitude to the matter of time should be something different. Time, and therefore experience, must come and go. Are we being intelligent enough to utilize every second of time in the best possible way, and are we directing our lives to the fullest possible advantage as a result of the experience? If we are not, we are not pushing on. Valuable days are passing, and people are suffering; some physically, some mentally; many in both ways. There is no time to lose. If we are economists of time and effort, as we should be, there is need for a closer and a more intelligent understanding and grasp of our jobs; not only our personal task, but the business of caring for others.

We must push on. There must be no faintheartedness. If we would lead, there must be courage and determination.—Exchange.

Queer Designations Given Animal and Bird Groups

Perhaps the ingenuity of the sportsman is nowhere better illustrated than by the use to which he puts the English language in designating particular groups of animals. Here is a list of terms which have been applied to the various classes:

A covey of partridges; a nide of pheasants; a wisp of snipe; a flight of doves or swallows; a muster of peacocks; a seige of herons; a building of rooks; a brood of grouse; a plump of wild fowl.

Stood on His Dignity

Bill, aged six and one-half, came home to announce pridefully that he had been promoted to A class, first grade, and that he meant to be the best boy in the world and study like everything.

Imagine, then, the surprise of his mother when the very next day she got a note from Bill's teacher saying that Bill had been astoundingly bad. Actually, he had flatly and persistently refused to cut and paste and color pictures.

"And you did it so beautifully all last term," said his mother. "What ever possessed you to refuse?"

"Sure I did it swell last term," Bill agreed. "But you don't catch me doing baby stuff like that now I'm grown up. What they've got to teach me is reading and writing and arithmetic, or I'll walk out on 'em."—New York Sun.

Co-Operative Farming

In an arid country, so rocky that it compares favorably with the slope of the Rocky mountains, a rancher has tried to eke out a living for more than 50 years. With him lives his hired man who has been with him that length of time also. One day a visitor asked the old rancher how he managed to pay the old hand his wages.

"It's this way," said the rancher. "I hired him for two years and gave him a mortgage on the ranch to guarantee his wages. At the end of two years he got the ranch, and I went to work for him on the same terms. For 50 years the ranch has passed back and forth every two years and neither of us has drawn a cent of wages. So we made it pay."

Youth Must Be Served

A Pittsburg man addressing a local luncheon club the other day said the eighty-one-year-old grandmother of the family lives at his home.

Not long ago, he related, she came back from a shopping trip with a package and took it on up to her room. There was considerable curiosity as to what was in the package, but grandma seriously objects to being questioned. A little later, however, she came down with another bundle, and handing it over to her daughter, remarked: "There are all my old nighties, get rid of them, for I've just laid in a supply of silk pajamas that I sport from now on."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

African Form of Greeting

Perhaps the nearest form to our handshake found in Africa today is the custom of the Hausas, a nation numbering more than 6,000,000, living in northern Nigeria. The Hausamen stand or kneel and clasp hands in much the same manner that we do, only they do not shake them. Then after holding hands for a few moments, with much feeling, they release their hold, and each touches his breast, and sometimes his forehead. This is repeated two or three times. They also clasp hands again when parting.

Tells Once Custom of Community Social Life

"Church raising days" are recalled in an article in the American Magazine.

"Two or three generations ago, the mill was a vigorous community center, the popular meeting place for all classes and conditions of men. It was no uncommon thing to ride 50 miles to mill and camp two or three days while waiting a turn. The burrs ground slowly and quite often the output did not exceed two or three bushels an hour. This gave opportunity for amusement and social contacts. It was a great place to play marbles, pitch horseshoes, to play rustic pranks, swap news, stories and jacknives. Sometimes there were fights, for hill blood is fighting blood, but, for the most part, the men fought fair.

"At midnight on Saturday night the watergate was closed and not opened until the following Monday morning. The closed gate formed an excellent fish trap and often the catch was good. It was the custom at one mill to auction off the fish that might be caught over the Sabbath to the highest bidder. The auction was held on Saturday afternoon before the gate was closed and if no fish happened to get in, the successful bidder paid just the same.

"Sometimes the mill floor was used for the dance when the day's work was done. Or if no fiddlers were present, the young folks stepped to the tune of 'Buffalo Girls' or 'Old Dan Tucker,' singing as they danced. Many an old mill was the scene of this beautiful custom that has today lost out in competition with the modern dance."—Detroit News.

Kyritz, ancient city in the northwest part of Brandenburg province, has a Thanksgiving celebration which is different.

Every year on the last Monday in February each citizen who attends the traditional morning church services receives a loaf of bread in memory of the defense of the city against destruction by the duke of Mecklenburg and the repulse of Mecklenburg's riders.

The feud between Mecklenburg, and the nobility of Prignitz, of which Kyritz is the capital, began in 1381. Mecklenburg's chief lieutenant, Von Bassewitz, made two unsuccessful attempts to capture the city. He was killed in the last one when he tried to enter the city by tunneling under the walls to the church, whence he planned to attack.

His calculations miscarried, however, and the tunnel ended in the market place, where the burghers promptly slew him and all his men.

"The Glory That Was Rome"

On the heights above Monte Carlo stands, as it has already stood for centuries, La Turbie, the crumbling ruin of one of Rome's greatest and finest towers. It has stood by the wayside for more than 20 centuries, and seen the Greeks, the Romans, the Alpine tribes, the Goths and the Moors fight beneath it. So massive is it that Marshal Berwick, son of James II of England, failed to destroy it with his gunpowder. Tales tell us it was a most glittering sight in the days of Augustine—built of polished granite and Luna marble, dominating the sea like a Roman guard far from Rome. It had its doric colonnade, its fluted tower, also doric and on the sides of La Turbie were engraved the names of the tribes it had seen fall before Rome's power.

Origin of "Fore" Obscure

The origin of "Fore!" is veiled in antiquity, says an article in the New York Times. No satisfactory explanation can be found as to the time and method of its entrance as an accepted expression in "the Royal and Ancient Game of Golf," which received its first notice as a trouble maker in the Scotland of 1457. "Fore!" is defined in Jamison's Scottish dictionary, published in 1820, as "a cry of golfers to persons standing or moving in the way of the ball." Probably, according to present-day authorities, the word began as "Before!" and, with proper Scottish regard for economy, was shortened to its present form.

"Milk Snakes" Myth

The United States biological survey has stated with regard to the silly belief that snakes can suck milk from a cow: "Anyone who has ever milked a cow knows that the suction required to obtain a flow of milk is much greater than could be exerted by any snake. Furthermore, a snake has two rows of sharp recurved teeth in the upper jaw. If the mouth of the milk snake were closed to permit suction, the teeth would sink into the teat and the snake would find itself fully occupied in efforts to avoid injury by the cow."—Detroit News.

Earth's Existence Timed

According to the Epistle of ... has, the life of the earth will be divided 2,000 years between the creation and the fall and the declaration of the promise of redemption through the prophets, 2,000 from the prophetic era to the era of redemption or Christian era, 2,000 of the Christian and preparatory era to the beginning of the millennium of 1,000 years of rest, after which will come the final judgment and the destruction or reorganization of the present earth

From the Bone

The word "ivory" is derived from the old Saxon and, others maintain is the Greek eldeion, likeness or image, in apparent.

"By Leon in Porto Rico"

Ponce de Leon arrived in Porto Rico in 1508, and immediately proceeded to annihilate the native Arawaks. The next year he was made governor of the island, and two years later he founded the city of San Juan, the full name being San Juan Bautista (St. John the Baptist). It was from here that he set forth to find the fabled fountain of youth, in search of which he discovered Florida.

Sassafras as Medicine

Sassafras roots became an important article of medicine early in American history, for in 1602, when the plant was selling for three shillings a pound, it was the object of an English expedition to Massachusetts. At this time it was frequently called the "ague" tree, as a deception of the bark was supposed to cure the malady.

The Truly Great

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to look after your own, but the great man is he who in the midst of a crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

Old Theory Upset

The generally accepted opinion that every young child needs a long afternoon nap is not upheld by a recent investigation, in which the children who took half-hour naps kept as fit as those who regularly slept more than two hours.

Legal Notice

The abbreviation "p. q." ...lowing a lawyer's name in a legal notice signifies "per quod" and means whereby. In this case it means the lawyer attaches his signature and the reason whereby it is official is the fact that he is a notary appointed at a certain time, giving the expiration of his term of office.

Greyhound Long Popular

Solomon refers to the graceful action of the greyhound, and relief carvings at least 4,000 years old have been found in Assyria, showing a slim, long-legged, smooth-coated dog, which is the image of the modern greyhound.

"Patent" Medicines

A patent medicine is a medicinal formula on which a patent has been secured. It is very difficult to secure a patent on such a formula. It is necessary to show invention to be present and that the medicine represents something other than a doctor's prescription.

Salt in Commerce

The best grade of salt is procured by the evaporation method. This is because the brine is first purified before it is evaporated. It is 99.80 per cent pure. Mined salt is from 1 to 1½ per cent less in sodium chloride content than salt procured by the evaporation method. Incidentally, the purest rock salt comes from Louisiana.

Peace Conference Meeting

The first meeting of the peace conference was held in the Salle de la Paix, formerly known as the Salle de Horologie (or Hall of Mirrors), and the following countries were represented: France, Great Britain, United States, Japan, Brazil, Belgium, Serbia, Greece, Rumania, Czechoslovakia, Poland, China, Hedjaz, Canada, Australia, South Africa, India, Siam, New Zealand and Portugal.

Two Forms of Happiness

An drinking the love of valuable cure to the happiest end of this life, to the good things to be got out of books and possessions.—Pope.

Water for Goldfish

A temperature between 50 and 60 degrees is best for goldfish. Avoid any sudden change in temperature. If water is above 65 degrees in summer watch the fish and if they seem distressed reduce the number of fish in each aquarium and be sure the water is aerated. Do not put ice in the water. Cooled water may be fed in gradually if temperature is dangerously high.

Chinese Medical Ethics

The statement that the Chinese pay physicians to "keep them well" is fallacious, but has this foundation in fact: Upon feast days or holidays, Chinese families make substantial gifts of money to their physicians. These gifts are expected. They, however, do not pay large fees for actual medical attendance.

Famous Civil War Poem

The poem, "Sheridan's Ride," was written by Thomas Buchanan Read. Gen. Philip Henry Sheridan's famous ride through Winchester, his enthusiastic reception at the hands of his troops, his remarkable success in turning a disastrous rout into a brilliant victory, formed a dramatic episode of the Civil war.

Earth and Moon

The length of the earth's axis is about 7,900 miles, while the diameter of the moon is about 2,160 miles. The earth's surface is about 13¼ times as great as the moon's; its volume or bulk is nearly 50 times larger; and, owing to its greater density, the mass or actual amount of matter contained in the earth is about 81 times greater than that of the moon.

Great Stoic

Epictetus left no written works, but his essential doctrines are embodied in some of the writings of Flavius Arrianus. The best known are "Discourses of Epicteus" and the "Encheiridion" (andbook). His ideas approached more nearly the kindliness of Christian doctrine than did those of any of the other Stoics.

Woman's Words

How's your vocabulary? Prof. Henry M. Robinson of the American Magazine has figured out that the average girl with a grade school education uses between 1,200 and 2,000 words. With a high-school education she possesses 3,000 to 4,000. After a college education she commands anywhere from 5,000 to 12,000. Shakespeare, in his plays, employed 24,000 different words.

Business "Shackles"

Chains of debt are something more than a figure of speech in Abyssinia. The person who cannot or will not pay is shackled to his or her creditor—and the bonds are not severed until the debt is discharged. Sometimes these business unions last for months. One who guarantees a debt sometimes suffers the same penalty, and the debtor, guarantor and creditor make a weird trio as they clank through the streets.

Revolutionary Pensions

On August 26, 1776, congress offered pensions equal to half pay to the officers and enlisted men who were disabled in the Revolutionary war, with proportionate pensions in the case of partial disability. An act granting pensions to invalids was passed in 1785, but the first service pensions were granted by the act of March, 1818.

ARMY WORM SCARE

Many farmers in the county have been asking questions about the outbreak of army worms in different parts of the state. It seems that this is an old pest that has been with us off and on for a number of years.' The following is a brief summary of a report received at the county agent's office from Dr. H. B. Price from the College of Agriculture:

1. Winter is passed by the worm in the ground.
2. The worm changes into a moth early in the spring and the moth in turn lays 500 or more eggs on rank growing grass, wheat or rye.
3. The eggs hatch into hundreds of small green worms that soon grow into ravenous pests that destroy whole fields of crops.
4. There are three generations of worms during the year but the second and third broods seldom do much damage in the same place.

Remedy—

5. Plow a furrow with the land side next to the field that is to be protected and then drag a log or keg through to make a dust on the sides and latter to kill the worms.
6. Poison bait may be used.
7. Paris green or other poisons may be sprayed on the grass as a last resort.
8. When the worms first start the grass may be cut, raked and burned.

It is hoped that the army worm this year finds its abode elsewhere than in Boone county.

TRUCK GROWERS CERTIFICATES

A total of 25 truck growers applications have been filled out and signed by the county agent for Boone county farmers to sell truck crops on the 12th street market in Cincinnati. The city of Cincinnati requires that certificates be issued growers this year before they are allowed to sell on this market.

The county agent has secured a number of blanks for the convenience of Boone county growers. These blanks are filled out and signed by the county agent free of charge, but the City of Cincinnati charges a fee of $1 for the issuing of the certificate.

In the Garden He suffered alone
No one to comfort or cheer.
He suffered our sins to atone,
O, friend, let us pause and draw near.

Near to our Saviour above
Let Him know we remember His pain;
Let Him know we will serve Him in love;
Let Him know it was not in vain.

Let us serve Him indeed while we may
For swiftly the years will pass by,
We must work while 'tis noon time and day,
For the evening of life soon draws nigh.

Then we'll rest from our labors and wait
For the call, "Well done child come home,"
Knowing full well at the gate
We'll find Jesus who suffered alone.

Ox-Eye Daisy Not Wanted

Ox-eye daisies, not native to America, were brought into a garden of Yosemite years ago, but since they have begun to crowd out native species strenuous attempts have been made to deport them as undesirables from Yosemite National park.

Duties of Statesmen

"Our Government," by Garner & Capen, says that members of the cabinet cannot at the same time be members of either house of congress. They could, however, be allowed to occupy seats for the purpose of advocating or opposing the enactment of laws affecting their department and for giving explanations to congress and defending their policies against attack. This privilege could be allowed without amending the Constitution.

Days of the Week

The week consisting of seven days is a unit of time which dates from prehistoric antiquity. Each of the seven days corresponds to one of the seven moving heavenly bodies then known. Sunday and Monday are named after the sun and moon; Tuesday was named for Mars (Tues in Norse) day; Wednesday, Mercury's (Wodan's) day; Thursday, Jupiter's (Thor's) day; Friday, Venus' (Frela's) day, and Saturday, Saturn's day.

Scientists Baffled by Malignant Tsetse Fly

Battle a modern empire is not wholly a matter of troops, treaties and trade agents. Shock battalions of scientists may be required to combat native enemies far more menacing than an uprising of aborigines, according to the National Geographic society. For example, in eastern Africa the British recently captured 1,326 square miles in a day—dread insect enemies, tsetse flies, which were caught in 16 imitation animal traps. The tsetse fly lives in the bush. When an animal wanders into the bush and is infected by the insect the natives flee the region. Just as they did before the swarms of the locusts of Bible times and do in present day history. Only the tsetse fly is a much deadlier enemy than the locust. It has effectively wiped out habitations from extensive areas—areas in Tanganyika as large as California and regions as extensive as other of our states in Rhodesia, Nyasaland, Uganda and Zululand. Throughout these units of Britain's political domain cultivated patches of land have been abandoned, farms and pastures have gone back to the bush, and the tsetse fly resumes its jealous reign.

Hungry London Consumes Foodstuffs by the Ton

Nearly 450 miles of bread are eaten by Londoners every day. The weekly ration is 25,000,000 half-quarter loaves, and, although they vary in size and shape, if they were all of the "sandwich" type, about seven to eight inches long, they would extend, if placed in a straight line, for 3,100 miles.

Very large quantities of foodstuffs are unloaded at the London docks every year. The figures for last year, according to a statement made by the port of London authority recently, included 1,400,326 tons of wheat, 218,000 tons of flour, 690,000 tons of chilled and frozen meat, and 160,000 tons of butter.

One astonishing figure was 621,000 tons of green fruit and vegetables. And London also imported 491,000 pounds of tea, enough to make 94,320,000,000 cups—between six and seven every day of the 365 for every man, woman and child in England and Wales.

Quinine Tercentenary

The tercentenary of the first use of quinine was held in St. Louis at Shaw's garden, October 31 and November 1, 1930. The earliest well-authenticated instance of the medicinal use of cinchona bark is found in 1638, when the countess of Chinchon (hence the name), the wife of the governor of Peru, was cured of an attack of fever by its administration. The medicine was recommended in her case by the corregidor of Loxa, who was said to have practically experienced its supreme virtues eight years earlier. A knowledge of the bark was disseminated throughout Europe by members of the Jesuit brotherhood, whence it also became generally known as Jesuits' bark. According to another account, this name arose from its value having been first discovered by a Jesuit missionary, who, when prostrated with fever, was cured by the administration of the bark by a South American Indian.

Noted Scholarship Fund

The Harriet Hurd Scheide scholarship was founded in 1928 at Princeton university by an anonymous donor with a gift to amount to $50,000 to establish scholarships of the value of the annual undergraduate fee, plus $100, to be known as the Harriet Hurd Scheide scholarships. In the award of these scholarships, preference is given to candidates who are sons of Presbyterian missionaries, or Presbyterian educators, or, failing such candidates, to those who are sons of ministers, missionaries or educators of a church holding the Presbyterian system, who without the assistance thus provided would, in the opinion of the university authorities, be unable to obtain an education at Princeton university. Award is made in accordance with the general principles of the Rhodes scholarship plan.

Wassailing Apple Trees

The ancient custom of "wassailing the apple trees," which dates back 300 years, was recently observed at Carhampton, near Minehead, Somerset, England. Two men carried a bucket of cider into the orchard, set it down under the largest tree and hung pieces of toast sonked in cider to the branches for the robins and good spirits. The wassail incantation was then chanted, and when it ended the villagers began to shout and cheer, while guns were fired through the branches of the tree. This custom is supposed to preserve the apple crop by driving off tree "hoggards" and other bad spirits.

"Railroad" and "Railway"

The reason that one transportation company is called a railroad and another a railway is simply that railroad and railway are corporate names. Often when a railroad goes bankrupt it must reorganize under a different name. For example, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad went into the hands of receivers and when it emerged it was the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific railway, the adding of the words "Pacific railway" making a new corporate name. Likewise the changing from railroad to railway changes the name of the corporation.

Influenza Plague Once Held Fashionable Cold

The word "influenza" came into use in English speaking countries in 1800. The disease had been epidemic in St. Petersburg in 1969, and it spread over Europe and to England and the United States. In the following spring it was severe in India and Australia. In most of these countries it was known as "Tinbonna," or "influenza," though in Paris "la grippe," a term used in the middle of the last century, was revived. The word "influenza" was given in Italy toward the middle of the Eighteenth century to an epidemic of febrile catarrh. It was in use in England as early as 1743. In that year Mrs. Montague, the "blue stocking," wrote: "Mr. Montague . . . returned to London quite well, though he has been much pulled down by the fashionable cold called l'influenza." A general epidemic of influenza took place toward the close of the World war, passing over western countries in three waves, the first appearing very suddenly in May and June, 1918, the second in September and October, declining in December and the third in March, 1919. Its origin was attributed by France to Spain, whence came its most frequently used designation of "Spanish influenza." Spain, in turn, attributed the outbreak to France, and this continent thought it started in eastern Europe. Virtually all the western nations were heavy sufferers. It was most virulent in the second wave.—Montreal Family Herald.

Films Helped Police in Round-Up of Criminals

Since the films are still from time to time blamed for demoralizing the youth and thereby encouraging crime, it seems only fair that wide publicity should be given to a case where they have proved of important assistance to the police. Reuter reports that a Berlin producer wishing to lend an air of verisimilitude to a scene of low life, hired a number of citizens of the Berlin underworld to "walk on" in the course of the production. The police got to hear of this, and also decided to call round at the studio and walk on, with the result that they presently walked off with several "wanted" men whom they found among the crowd of undeniably sinister supers.

This seems a great tribute to the "realism" of the production; if the crooks were good enough for the police to arrest on sight they may truly have been said to carry conviction in their faces.—Manchester (England) Guardian.

Educational Problems

The woman who is determined to give her three-year-old daughter a proper foundation occasionally gets an unexpected setback. When she heard the child say "Pota-ter" she took the child to task. "No, no," said the dutiful mother, "dot 'pota-ter,' but 'p-o-t-a-t-o,'" The little girl nodded. "And not 'toma-ter,' but 't-o-m-a-t-o,'" added the conscientious mother. Again the little girl nodded. She understood. An hour later she rushed into the house.

"Guess what I'm eatin', mother."

"I give up," replied her mother.

"Banan-o," exclaimed the girl triumphantly.

Having laboriously cleared up this rather perplexing situation, mother pointed out to her daughter that to say "runnin'" and "swimmin'" and "walkin'" was just all wrong. She felt quite pleased at the child's aptitude, but was rather discouraged when her daughter told a neighbor that her doll's chair was "broking."—New York Sun.

Cows Have Passports

The boundary line along the Hungarian-Rumanian frontier, in effect since the World war, has been so arbitrarily drawn that frequently it separates a farming community from the fields where the farmers pasture their cattle. So each cow has to have a passport.

"The numbers on these bovine passports must correspond with the numbers burned on the animal's hoofs," writes E. Alexander Powell.

"It is the duty of the frontier guards to see that a cow is turned back if its papers are not in order. Should a calf be born on the Rumanian side of the line its Hungarian owner could obtain possession of it, I assume, only by an appeal to the League of Nations!"

Tommy's Apple

When Tommy placed a rosy apple by the garden gate, and then secreted himself behind a hedge, he thought he had done so unobserved. But he was mistaken. An old gentleman approached him, and began to lecture.

"My boy," he said, "do you know that you are very wrong in placing that apple by the gate? Some poor boy might be tempted to purloin it."

"Well," said Thomas, "that's just what I want him to do."

"Why?" inquired old Curious.

Ambition

There is a vast difference between an ambition and a wish. A wish is usually the dream of an idler, while ambition is based upon intense desire, backed by untiring effort and tempered by patience to the disappointments encountered.—Grit.

Gorgeous Funeral Even for Lowliest Chinaman

The Chinese pay their doctors not to cure their sin but to keep them well, because, though it is cheap for them to live, it is exceedingly expensive to die. Even the poorest and most miserable coolie, who existed on a few cents a day, attains dignity and importance in death among his ancestor-worshiping fellows. His family will mortgage its income for years to give him a funeral consistent with its idea of prestige.

For the rich mandarin the final honors are proportionately greater. And to provide a fitting send-off to distinguished citizens the Nanking government has adopted a state burial law allowing $10,000 funeral expenses in meritorious cases. Often when a death occurs in China a necromancer is called in to arrange details and name an auspicious day for interment, which may take place from one to five weeks after death. During this period relatives and friends, in white mourning, lament loudly in the death chamber. Buddhist and Taoist priests intone prayers for the departed spirit. Candles burn. Blue, perfumed incense ascends in clouds.

On the day of burial a procession forms, made up partly of paid mourners. It is led by musicians with drums, cymbals, fifes and flutes. Its size and splendor depend on the amount of money the bereaved family can spend.

Writer Advises Letting Young Authors Struggle

Rising young authors ought to struggle. It is the only way to prove they are good for anything. It is not wisdom to give a prize of $13,000 for a first novel. The book is written for the prize, not as a talented emanation that could not be withheld.

Prizes are now dangled everywhere by publishers for all sorts of literary output. Yet we know that the best of all literature is that which bubbles out with no greedy eye on what is to be paid for it.

Not but that the really precious should be rewarded as it deserves. While one may still feel a qualm that poor Milton got but £10 (wasn't it?) for "Paradise Lost," he may rejoice that our modern authors live comfortably—many of them affluently—on the product of their pens. No one begrudges them wealth; but that wealth or the hope of it, should not corrupt their literary integrity.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Plymouth Rock Reunited

The secretary of the Pilgrim society says: "In 1774 the inhabitants of Plymouth decided to remove the famous rock to Town square and establish a shrine of liberty. When they attempted to raise it, however, it broke into two parts, one of which was permitted to remain and the other carried to its destination. It remained there until 1834, when it was removed to the yard in front of Pilgrim hall, where it was surrounded by an iron fence. It so remained until 1880, when it was removed and placed on that part of the rock from which it had been separated one hundred and six years before, and over which, meanwhile, an elaborate granite canopy may now be seen, in its original position, on the shore at Plymouth. The peristyle which now surrounds it was erected by the Society of Colonial Dames."

Smoking Throughout Sermon

The question asked by the bishop of Ely whether listeners put ont their pipes during the broadcasting of religious services would not have troubled the clergy of past generations, writes a columnist in the Manchester (England) Guardian. In some of our parish churches smoking during the service used to be so common that pipe-racks and spittoons were provided, and in Wales as late as 1850 the start of the sermon was an accepted signal for the male members of the congregation to light up. Readers of "The Heart of Midlothian," too, will remember an important personage who smoked throughout the whole of the sermon—often a matter of an hour or two—consuming such tobacco as he could borrow from other worshipers.

"Dead Reckoning"

In his "A Systématic Dictionary of Sea Terms" C. Grand Pierre says on this subject: "Dead reckoning is the estimation of a vessel's position by means other than direct observations, when these are not feasible. Unlike all other marine uses of the word, dead, here, does not express anything inert or adverse. Formerly logs were loose ruled sheets of a prescribed form. The latitude column being too narrow to admit the words 'deduced latitude' in full, the expression was abbreviated 'ded. l.' and later shortened to 'ded' which was corrupted to 'dead.'"—Pathfinder Magazine.

Origin of Christmas Tree

The Scandinavians of North Europe worshiped trees in their pre-Christian days, the special deity of the Northmen sea-savages being called Ydrasil, or The Tree of Life.

Their Tree of Life was adopted by Christian England as an emblem of the Blessed Savior, and has been for centuries the center of the gift-bestowing at the blessed season as a Christmas tree. In olden times it was placed on the rood screens, in the minstrel's gallery, or in the chancels of the churches.

Washington Snap Shots

The White House is to have a director of ceremonies under jurisdiction of the State Department, whose duties will be those of advising as to precedure in affairs of state and arranging other official ceremonies in which the president must engage. The so-called White House "marshall" will be accountable to the Division of International Conference and Protocol. The increasing number of international conferences in which the United States takes official part caused Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State, to announce an expansion of that function of the State Department which relates to ceremonials, diplomatic and formal arrangements for international affairs.

Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson were hosts to more than one thousand guests at a garden party at their estate, Woodley, one of the show places of Washington. Gay colored marquees were erected on the lawns and refreshments were served at small tables under striped sun-umbrellas. Mrs. Stimson received with the secretary at the entrance of the garden. She wore a flowered chiffon gown with a Panama hat trimmed with chiffon to match. Assisting the hosts were chiefs of the various divisions of the State Department.

Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, ranking Democratic member of the Senate Finance Committee, declared against any increase of taxes by the next session of Congress as a means of meeting the treasury deficit. At the same time he took exception to recent utterances by Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, especially those criticizing Congress and giving the impression there should be a tax revision program. Senator Harrison said such utterances coming from Mr. Mellon, spokesman for the Administration, frightened business and hindered the restoration of confidence. The Senator held that imposition of more taxes at this time would tend to delay economic rehabilitation.

The soldiers' bonus payments passing the $1,000,000 mark and applications pouring in at the rate of 35,000 a week, Administration officials are apprehensive that $1,500,000,000 would be needed to finance the borrowing unless there should be an abatement in the next few weeks. It would mean that virtually all authoritative estimates of the cost of the legislation allowing World War veterans to borrow up to 50 per cent of their adjusted service certificates would be broken.

Government officials are as much at sea in their attempts to analyze in detail the present stock market as in the general public. Some heads of federal departments say that efforts to decipher the action of all stocks have failed. In general, however, they agree there is no basic reason for the decline of "blue chip" stocks whose dividend-earning qualities are not in jeopardy, particularly in view of recent improvement in the automobile industry, textiles and one or two other barometical lines.

Secretary Doak announced that reports received by the Labor Department indicated a slight improvement in employment conditions during May. "Employment trends," said the secretary, "are better, but our check shows a little improvement in May as compared to April. It will be sometime, however, before data is available."

President Hoover began his administration with an extra-session experience. A burned child dreads the fire. He has stated that he does not propose to call an extra session of Congress. His statement was a reply to those who have been urging him to call an extra session of Congress back before December so that something can be done about unemployment and American adherence to the World Court. "I do not propose to call an extra session of Congress," the president said. "I know of nothing that would so disturb the healing processes now undoubtedly going on in the economic situation. We cannot legislate ourselves out of a world economic depression; we can and will work ourselves out. A poll of the members of Congress would show that a large majority agrees with me in opposing an extra session."

The greatest number of airplanes ever to assemble in the Nation's Capital at one time participated in the air armada review over Washington on Memorial Day. There were 672 planes in all. Two hundred Army airplanes of the observation, bombing and pursuit types, landed at Bolling Field the day before the event. Thirty-nine planes staged a combat demonstration over the Potomac River, flying low and flying high, twisting, turning, diving and climbing, these pursuitt planes fought off an imaginary enemy over the city.

Traffic cops of the air became a reality over Washington Memorial Day. The War Department assigned 12 observation planes to police the air to keep private or commercial "rubber-neck" planes from getting in the way of the Army's air armada. The Assistant Secretary of War stated that "while these aerial traffic officers were not able to hand out tickets to those who disobey orders of the Department of Commerce, they always have a sure method of dealing with offenders by means of cameras which photograph the numbers appearing on the wings of the intruding planes."

The proposal to reduce the number of navy yards on the Atlantic coast from eight to three is undoubtedly in the interest of more efficient operation and puts President Hoover in the admirable position of opposing intrenched political preserves. If this proposal is vigorously prosecuted Mr. Hoover will be rightly hailed as a leader who has dared greatly, regardless of personal risk, in behalf of a good cause. Proposing such a reduction is not at all new, but doing something about it would be news indeed. The president has tackled a man-sized job. The country will watch this fight between Mr. Hoover and the politicians with interest.

With the deficit now over a billion dollars, as shown by the treasury's daily statement, high administration officials indicate that the treasury is considering announcing in the near future a large long-term bond issue. At the same time they voice hope that the late summer will see an improvement in agricultural conditions which might mark the first steady upturn to normal. They point out that in previous depressions, the upward climb started in late summer when farm crops were marketed, but that the improvement was slow and did not become generally vident until early winter. The opinion is epressed that the present depression has reached the bottom, and that any change will be upward.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis and "Dolly" Gann to Washington society, has entered the political sphere in which her brother has risen so far. Mrs. Gann is listed as one of the speaers who will address the young Republicans form all over the country who will meet here June 11 and 12 to organize for perpetuation of the Hoover Administration. It is Mrs. Gann's first essay into the active political field, though he has been a "power behind the throne" for some time.

Try These Menus Sunday And Enjoy a Day of Rest

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

SUNDAY meals should be planned very carefully, so that they may include attractive and nourishing foods, and yet will not force you to spend too much time in the kitchen.

Breakfast, of course, should be a rather substantial meal—the tide the family over until dinner, which is served rather late in most households. For the main feast, I am suggesting roast leg of lamb, since most women find a roast more practical on Sunday, and the left-over lamb can be sliced and served cold for supper the same night, or made into a savory meat pie or hash for Monday's dinner.

You will be pleased to find how easily and quickly all the meals shown here can be prepared—and your family will be sure to like them, too!

BREAKFAST
Crushed Strawberries in Orange Juice
Rice Flakes with Rich Milk
Creamed Eggs on Buttered Toast Cubes
Crisp Bacon Curls
Coffee

DINNER
Canapes or Cream of Pea Soup
Stuffed Spanish Olives
Roast Leg of Lamb Currant Jelly
Browned Potatoes
Broccoli or Buttered Carrots
Pimiento Cheese and Celery Salad with French Dressing
Ice Cream, Devil's Food Cake with Caramel Frosting, or White Cake with Cocoanut Frosting
Coffee

SUPPER
Cold Cuts of Meat—Slices of Ham and Cold Lamb from Dinner
Chili Sauce Potato and Egg Salad
Fresh Cucumber Pickles
Hot Rolls Quince Jelly
Chilled Fruit Cup Cake
Tea

Canapes: Toast rounds of bread on one side and spread untoasted side with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. Cover with a slice of tomato, then a slice of hard cooked egg. Top with a slice of Stuffed Spanish Olive and place strips of olive around the edge.

French Dressing: 1 teaspoon salt; 1 teaspoon sugar; ¼ teaspoon paprika; 5 tablespoons Pure Vinegar; ¾ cup Pure Olive Oil.

Mix the salt, sugar and paprika together, add vinegar and oil, and beat thoroughly. Or, put all the ingredients into a glass jar, screw lid on tightly and shake thoroughly.

Caramel Frosting: 2 cups light brown sugar; ½ cup milk; 2 tablespoons butter; 1 teaspoon Distilled White Vinegar; ¼ teaspoon salt.

Mix ingredients together and bring slowly to a boil, keeping the lid on the pan. Cook to the soft ball stage (when a few drops form a soft ball in cold water,—236 degrees F.) Cool, add vanilla and beat until creamy. If the frosting becomes stiff while spreading, add a few drops of hot water.

Potato and Egg Salad: 4 cups cold boiled potatoes, cut in cubes; 1 onion; chopped fine; 1½ teaspoons salt; ½ teaspoon paprika; 3 hard cooked eggs, chopped; 2 tablespoons chopped parsley.

Mix potatoes, onion, salt and paprika, and marinate in French Dressing. Chill. Just before serving, add eggs, parsley and enough Mayonnaise Salad Dressing to moisten well. Pile in crisp lettuce cups and garnish with strips of red or green pepper, or thin slices of Sweet Gherkins. Serve with additional dressing, if desired.

Mrs. Laubisch and family have moved into the Snyder property on Shelby street.

J. D. Lucas of Covington, visited his father, A. S. Lucas, one day during the past week.

Roy Senour, wife and son Edward Lee, of Blue Ash, Ohio, were the guests Sunday of Mrs. Senour's father, Joe Baxter.

Paul Faust and family, of Cincinnati, spent Sunday with Mrs. Faust's parents, James Byrns and wife.

Oakley Stephens and friend, of Chicago, spent the week-end with his parents, L. L. Stephens and wife.

Old School Primer

An Absey book is an A B C book, or primer, containing merely the alphabet and a few rudimentary lessons. Shakespeare uses the term in King John—"And then comes the answer like an Absey book."

Great Newspaper Collection

The largest collection of newspapers in the world is in the newspaper museum at Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany, the 150,000 editions representing every language and country in the world.

Mind "Tones"

The mind is not always in the same state; being at times cheerful, melancholy, severe, peevish. These different states may not improperly be denominated tones.—Lord Kames.

Exploding Toad Legend

Dr. Leonhard Stejneger of the Smithsonian institution says that toads for the purposes of hibernation dig holes in the ground or crawl into fissures of rocks. Occasionally such specimens are found after blasting operations, and the conclusion is hastily drawn that the toad had been living inside the solid rock.

Little Use for Gold Piece

By act of congress passed April 11, 1930, the $2.50 gold piece was discontinued. The coin was discontinued because it was not desired for circulation or commercial purposes. It was used mainly as a gift during the Christmas season; and in January these coins were again released to the vaults of the banks.

No Women Actresses Then

It is impossible that Shakespeare ever saw a woman actress, since in his day in England all the parts were played by men.

Looks and Deeds

Plastic surgery can build a new face, but a better course is to keep the old "mug" and resolve to do handsomely.—San Antonio News.

Never Stable

Dictatorships are like houses of cards. They may stand and they may fall.—Count Carlo Sforza.

Cranberry Domestication

The cranberry was first domesticated about 1810. It was not until about four decades later, however, that its merits became widely known and appreciated. It belongs to the numerous heath family and is therefore a close relative of the blueberry, huckleberry, wintergreen and trailing arbutus.—Gas Logic.

The Push-Cart Type

Wonder if the learned Doctor Hrdlicka, who made a long and exhaustive study of 500 "wild babies" that had the good sense to run around on all fours instead of crawling on their bellies, ever observed what became of babies that insist on propelling themselves around on their sitting apparatus.—Ohio State Journal.

Alaska's Old Capital

Sitka, Alaska, was the old Russian capital of Russian Alaska, and remained the capital of the new territory of Alaska when the Americans took possession on October 18, 1867. There was very little government in Alaska for some time after its acquisition, and it was not until the act of August 24, 1912, that the territory was organized and the capital officially established at Juneau.

Turtle's Schedule

The exactness of Nature's laws is illustrated by a certain famous sea turtle on the coast of Florida, whom naturalists have learned to know and look for. Once a year, on exactly the same day of the same month, between evening and daylight, she comes in to the same beach from her Atlantic wanderings. At a certain spot she lays her numerous deposits of eggs and departs, not to return for another 365 days.

Pioneer Balloonist

The first really authentic account of a man being raised in the air was in Paris, October 15, 1783, when Pilatre de Rozier was lifted 80 feet in the air by a balloon made by the Montgolfier brothers.

Highlights of Chase House

The Chase house at Annapolis, Md., was built in 1770 by Edward Lloyd. A three-story, boxlike exterior in Flemish bond, it contains a monumental stair hall lighted by a Palladian window on the first landing. The carved interior detail is lavish and beautifully executed. There is a very lovely marble mantel in the parlor. It is now the Chase home for the aged.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

I'm glad to see the movement of the pendulum start back the other way, in the dietetic treatment of bowel disorders which cause constipation. I am glad to see the "roughage" hoax in process of being exposed to the public. At last, common sense is coming into its own, in the matter of stuffing a diseased bowel with almost wholly indigestiblem aterial called "roughage."

I am fully aware of tramping on certain commercial toes in this letter; the promoters of the "bran health food idea" will probably jump all over me; let them jump; it takes more than jumping to convince me, in the face of experience. Let me quote a late observer—one who is an authority on this matter:

"The enthusiast on bran forgets that he is prescribing the substance because it is one of the most indigestible to be found in nature; it was especially designed to carry seeds unchanged, through the digestive tracts of the herbivora. And yet, they call it health food! . . . A woman . . . who for ten years had kept her health in fair condition, only by sticking to a smooth diet. . . . began taking bran on the advice of a physician . . . in a few weeks she had to be operated on, for the relief of intestinal obstruction . . . part of the intestine packed with bran."

Only yesterday I took a lady patient away from this fad, who had been kept on the bran diet for several years—growing worse every day. "Roughage" cannot be prescribed as a routine; when only digestible food is needed, why prescribe the most indigestible of substances?

Dry, hard, indigestible things are heralded to the public as relief from constipation; why not go the limit, and give them sand and have it over?

Routine has little rank in the intelligent treatment of weak, relaxed, atonic colons. I'll admit taht the fee is easier gained, and often the patient's mind is satisfied that the doctor is very wise with his bran fad—but, somhow, the grouchy bowel goes on its indolent way unrejoiced.

COLLEGE REVIEWS THE FARM MARKETS

A market review of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, notes that lamb prices have been $1 higher than in January and $1.50 above the low point last November. The price advance came in face of heavy receipts. Spring lamb shipments from California, however, were light, due to feed shortage, while the movement of fat sheep from Texas has been heavy.

Poultry prices have tended to advance as a result of light receipts. Demand has been active, and because of light receipts it has been necessary to fall back on storage stocks. Egg prices have been dropping, despite declining receipts, as a result of weak demand. Putting eggs into storage, a usual activity at this season, is largely lacking this year.

Butter prices broke last month under increased selling and light demand. Buying has been limited, despite lower prices. Butter receipts have been heavy at all points. Low feed costs and good pastures have resulted in production, running 6 per cent ahead of last year.

Lack of demand for beef and pork has resulted in sagging prices for cattle and hogs. April hog prices were only 25 to 50 cents above the lowest level since 1915. Light demand, low prices for many food products, and large cold storage holdings affected hog prices. Cattle receipts increased without any increase in the demand for beef. April Chicago prices were the lowest for that month since 1915.

CONSIDER KENTUCKY LAMBS AS PATTERNS

Kentucky lambs are the pattern by which all other lambs are measured, R. S. Matheson, Chicago lamb buyer, told the annual meeting of the Kentucky Sheep and Wool Growers' Association at the Experiment Station at Lexington. He said that well-bred lambs, properly finished and marketed early, would continue profitable.

Claude Harper, of Indiana, discussed experiments which indicated that lambs can be made prime on grass alone, provided the ewes give plenty of milk, and stomach worms are controlled. Several speakers stressed the importance of controlling internal parasites.

W. R. Spahr, Winchester; J. Dennis, Versailles; P. B. Baines, Carrollton, and other sheep raisers discussed their experiences. Plans were developed for increasing the membership of the association to 10,000. Mr. Bains was re-elected president, and Richard C. Miller of the College of Agriculture was re-elected secretary.

Other states which sent specialists to study Kentucky's lamb producing methods included Wisconsin, Michigan, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Missouri and Tennessee.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF PREVENTING DISEASE

Prevention of chicken pox rather than cure is stressed by the department of animal pathology of the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky. Poultry should be fed a balanced ration. The importance of greed feed and clean water should not be forgotten. The houses should be dry, properly ventilated, and well lighted. Crowding the birds should be avoided. Ample roosting space should be provided, once a week. Drinking utensils should be scalded with boiling water. The fowls should be kept free of lice and mites. The addition of medicinal agents to the drinking water as a routine procedure is not to be recommended. Frequent use of epsom salts is to be discouraged. New birds and returned show stock should be quarantined for two weeks before being placed with the flock. Shipping crates should not be used for fowls unless they have been cleaned and disinfected.

Dampness, drafts, insanitary surroundings and parasites favor the but are not the cause of the disease. spread and severity of chickenpox Healthy, vigorous birds kept in clean, dry, well-ventilated houses are quite as apt to contract chickenpox as are birds in poor condition or infested with parasites. However, once the disease is introduced inot an unthrifty flock the infection will spread more rapidly. the disease will appear in a more severe form, the mortality will be higher, and, if the birds are vaccinated, the results will be less favorable. It is generally believed that biting insects, such as mites, lice and mosquitoes may help to spread the infection.

The Kentucky Horticultural Society, the Experiment Station of the Univeristy of Kentucky, and local horticultural societies co-operated in providing a state spray service for fruit growers through field laborities at Henderson, Louisville and Paducah. A field laboratory or insectary has been built at each place and Dr. C. O. Eddy employed to conduct studies and supervise testing work on which future spray practices for the control of insects will be based.

The scholarship club of the University of Kentucky is offering a scholarship of $62 to a 4-H Club member to attend the University next year. It will be awarded to the boy or girl who reports the best the freshman class in the College record of his or her club work and and achivements, and who has trance credits admitting them to the College of Agriculture.

Many Magoffin county farmers will grow one to three acres of potatoes. A thousand bushel of Irish Cobbler seed potatoes were shipped into the county.

Eight hundred Spencer county farmers treated tobacco plant beds with arsenate of lead dust or Paris green bait to control cutworms.

Severe Self-Discipline in Fourteenth Century.

Early in the Fourteenth century there arose a curious sect in southern Europe whose distinguishing tenet it was that the human body should be made to suffer, in order that the soul might be saved. Forming themselves into bands, they marched through the lands singing hymns and flogging themselves and others with whips and thongs. Flagellants they called themselves, and absurd though their actions would appear to be in our day, then it was recognized that such notable protests against self-indulgence and sinful luxury were not without value. One of the favorite hymns of the Flagellanta was one reciting the sorrows of Mary the Blessed Virgin as she stood by the cross of Jesus, and begging her in its latter part to minister grace to the singers.

The use of the rosary had been brought from the Far East in the previous century by a Dominican monk, and introduced into Christianity with special prayers to the Virgin Mary, or "Ave Marias" mingled with recitations of the Lord's Prayer, to be memorized by the beads, and repeated. It was the age when such observances were just making their way into the faith of many Christians. Naturally the hymn on Mary at the Cross, "Stabat Mater Dolorosa," as it was called, suited the fashion of the age, and was introduced into the service books in 1414, whence its use spread over the whole Roman Catholic church.

Not Easy to Calculate Cost of Writing Letter

Just what it costs to write a letter is not known to nine out of ten business men. If they ever think of it they figure the postage and the cost of the stationery and let it go at that. Really the postage is an insignificant item in the cost of a letter.

An efficiency expert recently inquired of 58 concerns about the cost of their letters and it was learned that only 14 had any definite idea on the subject. The average cost as figured by these fourteen firms was between 35 and 40 cents. With an average salary of $45 a week for the dictator and $20 for the stenographer who turns out 30 letters a day and with the dictator using six minutes per letter the cost was 35.08 and 36.07 cents per missive, according to the cost of the stationery.

When the boss worth $10,000 or $20,000 a year does the dictating and uses a $60 per week secretary the letter will cost close to $1. Some letters written by hand cost thousands and thousands of dollars. Love notes, for instance, have had a cost that depends on the minds of the jurors hearing the damage suit.—Bob Holland in the Miami Herald.

Mankind's Average Height

It is estimated by the United States public health service that the average height of a man in this country is about 5 feet 8 inches and the average height of a woman about 5 feet 4 inches. Whitaker's almanac gives the average heights of natives of the British isles as follows: Scotsmen, 5 feet 8¾ inches; Irishmen, 5 feet 8 inches; Englishmen, 5 feet 7¾ inches; Welshmen, 5 feet 6½ inches. Books dealing with anthropology, such as that by E. B. Tylor in the Popular Science library, give average heights of other races. Thus 5 feet 4 inches is given for the Chinese laborer, 5 feet 7 inches for the Swede, 5 feet for the Lapp, 5 feet 11 inches for the Patagonian of South America, 4 feet 6 inches for the Bushmen and other South African tribes.

Sweet Mystery of Life

The new statue had been unveiled in the Art institute. One by one the art lovers passed to admire it, to comment on the masterly skill of the sculptor in personifying his idea, and to give it a name:

"It is fear," said one.

"It is love," breathed another.

"It is hate," murmured a third.

"It is jealousy," declared a fourth.

"It is tolerance," whispered a fifth.

"Want you to see my latest job," remarked the great sculptor himself, as he came by with a friend. "I worked forty years on this idea. It's the personification of awe."

"Nice work," commented the friend, who was hard of hearing and didn't quite catch the last part of the sculptor's remark. "What do you call it—Liberty?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Historic Emerald

According to the classic legend Nero used to watch the combats of his gladiators through a monocle, the lens of which was an emerald, or, more probably, an Egyptian peridot. An emerald with a history was recently sold in London for $11,250. The vendor obviously appraised it as an octagonal specimen of size and quality without taking much heed of the tradition that, at the end of the Sixteenth century it had been brought to Austria from Turkey, and then set in an ecclesiastical monstrance. Later it was removed from this, was recut, and mounted as a ring.

Age Gauge

A coed had one of her instructors as a house guest over the week-end. After she left members of the family were making guesses as to her age. Grandmother chimed in, saying: "She must be nigh on to fifty, for I heard her humming 'in the Shade of the Old Apple Tree.'"

Fulton county farmers will grow for commercial marketing 50 acres of green beans, 75 acres of cantaloupes and 35 acres of tomatoes.

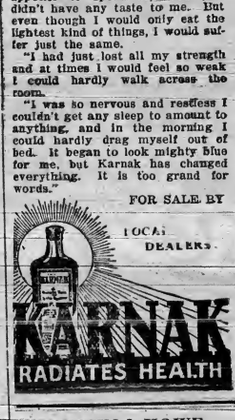
Words Can't Describe Good Karnak Did Me



"I just know there is nobody in all the world happier than I about this wonderful medicine, Karnak. I have taken all kinds of medicines and treatments in the past ten years trying to get some relief from my suffering, but nothing helped me until I began Karnak.

"Oh, how I suffered with stomach trouble. Why, I was almost a nervous wreck from it. I had no appetite to speak of, food just didn't have any taste to me. But even though I would only eat the lightest kind of things, I would suffer just the same.

"I had just lost all my strength and at times I would feel so weak I could hardly walk across the room.

"I was so nervous and restless I couldn't get any sleep to amount to anything, and in the morning I could hardly drag myself out of bed. It began to look mighty Blue for me, but Karnak has changed everything. It is too grand for words."

FIRST BANK HOLD-UP IN COUNTY HISTORY AT FLORENCE MONDAY

TEACHERS

IN ALL COUNTY SCHOOLS ARE ANNOUNCED BY BOARD AFTER MONDAY'S MEETING—C. G. LAMB WILL BE AT FLORENCE—

The Boone County School Board was in session here on Monday of this week and attended to some very important business, chief of which was the completion of all teacher vacancies in the schools under county control. In the list, which we publish here-with will be noted a number of changes, while there also many names that have become familiar thru a long association with their present positions. Among other business disposed of was the re-election of Hubert Rouse as janitor at Burlington. A number of other applications were handed the school board for this position.

It may seem queer to a great many patrons and students to see the name of Mrs. C. G. Lamb on the Burlington roster, while Mr. Lamb's name is seen on the Florence list. The reason for this is, as explained by Supt., D. H. Norris, is that Mr. Lamb left Burlington fully intending to take up college work at Murray this winter. He learned, however, after arriving at Murray, that he could finish the desired work in two terms of summer school and informed the school board that he would like to return to his post here.

This being impossible, since the board already hademployed C. G. Kelly Mr. Lamb was offered the [illegible] which he gladly accepted under the circumstances. Mr. Lamb and Mr. Kelly both are splendid teachers with plenty of experience, so there need be no doubt that both positions will be capably filled. Mr. Kelly has been at Petersburg for several years just past.

The complete list of teachers for county schools, from principal down in proper rotation, follows:

The following teachers have been elected to the schools of Boone County for the school year 1931-32.

Burlington- E. E. Kirkwood, Mildred Anderson, Courtney Kelly, Mrs. C. G. Lamb, Mrs. Lallie Eddins, Miss Sara Cropper, Mrs. E. E. Kirkwood.

Hebron- C. V. Lucy, Mary Bess Cropper, Elsie L. Vice, Chester Goodridge, William Anderson, F. E. Walker, Sadie L. Rieman, Nell E. Naney.

The pooled wool of Boone Co. was offered for sale at Walton Ky. Monday of this week. Three bids were received for same. 17½ cents being the highest bid. All bids were rejected and this wool will be offered for sale again at some future date.

It seems at this time there was a decided slump in the market and the Committee didn't feel like selling at such a price as was offered.

L. C. Weaver and son, Albert, Frank Maurer and Ralph Maurer spent Saturday night on the banks of Gunpowder creek fishing. However the heavy rains shortly after midnight drove them to shelter before they had a bite. All returned Sunday producing the enterprise an utter failure.

CHURCH GAMES

The only results of church games received this week were from Petersburg and Idlewild, which resulted in a 14-13 victory for Petersburg, and from Burlington and Belleview, which finished with Belleview on top 4-3. The batterles for Idlewild were Yates and Elliott, pitchers, and Elliott and Webster, catchers. H. R. Deck and Mc Guire did the twirling for Petersburg, with Christy and L. H. Deck on the receiving end.

DELEGATION

FROM BOONE COUNTY 4-H CLUB LEAVES FOR LEXINGTON —COUNTY AGENT IN CHARGE

Boone county's 4-H club representatives to state contests held at the University of Kentucky, Lexington during Junior Week left Monday morning in the company with county agent H. R. Forkner and Mrs. Robert Grant, Burlington, R 3 as chaperone for the girls.

The representatives included Messrs. Omer and Gilbert Dolwick of the Corncracker 4-H club on the boys Farm Practice Demonstration Team, Miss's Adelia Riddle and Helen Grant of the Norbeh Champion 4-H club on the girls Home Practice Demonstration Team, Miss Ruth Tanner of the Mt. Zion Eagles 4-H club as county representative in the girls 4-H sewing Style Show Contest and Woodford Crigler, county 4-H Health Champion.

Between times of competion in the state contest members will be se[illegible] and Mrs. Robert Grant [illegible] homics short course in the College or Agriculture. They will also receive special training in 4-H leadership principles.

Mr. Wilton Stephens, representative of the Boone County Utopia club No. 2 left in company with the Boone county group to attend the State Utopia Club Conference held at the University the same time as Junior Week. The group will return Saturday morning.

BARN RAZED

BY FLAMES CAUSED BY LIGHTNING ON FARM OF L. H. VOSHALL, OF WOOLPER COMMUNITY, EARLY SUNDAY— LOSS PARTLY COVERED BY INSURANCE—

Early last Sunday morning lightning struck a barn on the farm of Frank M. Voshell, of Woolper neighborhood.

Before Mr. Voshell and his two sons could get to the building the flames were well under way and it was impossible to save any of the contents of the barn, which included several tons of hay, a number of farm implements, and seven hogs.

Due to the daring effort on the part of one son Leslie, age 14, the family automobile was saved.

The farming tools included some that Mr. Voshell had used in spring work and but a few days before had put away for the summer.

Mr. Voshell's loss was partially covered by $1,200.00 insurance in the Boone County Farmers' Mutual Insurance Company.

Miss Gladys Kelly, of Elsmere, was the guest last Wednesday of Miss Wilma Cotton.

Martha Blythe, Kathryn Ross, of Cincinnati, Edgar Maurer and Roscoe Akin spent Sunday with Wilton Stephens and sister, Zelma Lee, at their home on the Florence pike.

County Clerk A. G. McMullen issued a marrage license Saturday, June 6 to Mr. Theodore Rinhart, of Burlington route, two, and Miss Rachel Utz, of near Limaburg. The bride is the daughter of W. N. Utz and wife and for several years has been one of the Recorders faithful correspondents. This newspaper joins with the friends of both bride and groom in wishing for them a long, happy and prosperous wedded life.

GRADUATES AT U. K.

Mary Louise Renaker

DEGREE

FROM UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY RECEIVED BY MISS LOUISE RENAKER LASE WEEK—MAJORED IN JOURNALISM—PROMINENT ON CAMPUS—

Boone county's only graduate from the University of Kentucky this year was Miss Mary Louise Renaker, of Burlington. Fourteen other students from this county were enrolled there.

She received an A. B. degree and majored in Journalism. She was one of the most popular and attractive students on the U. K. campus during her four years there and was very prominent in all school activities.

A member of the Kernel staff (weekly student publication), member of the Kentuckian (University annual) staff, member of Y. W. C. A., Stroller eligible, member co-ed band Panhellenic representative for Kappa Delta sorority, President Kappa Delta and Junior Prom Queen were listed among her notable honors and accomplishments.

Miss Renaker has not made known her future plans, though she expects to employ her journalistic training in some way, she says.

HAS NARROW ESCAPE

While driving on the Petersburg and Dry Creek pike last Sunday Upshire White, of Petersburg, suddenly lost control of his car and plunged over a one hundred foot embankment about one half mile west of Constance.

The car reeled down the bank finally resting in the hollow, with driver entirely unhurt. The car also was practically undamaged.

Those who have seen the scene of the accident are at complete loss to know just how it could have happened without damage or injury. Mr. White was indeed fortunate.

COMMENCEMENT JUNE 19

The common school commencement exercises will be held at Burlington High School Friday evening, June 19 at 8 o'clock. There will be 88 graduates who will receive diplomas at that time. A good speaker will be on the program.

Mrs. Sarah Carpenter, of near Burlington, enjoyed a visit of several days with Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Ryle at Florence last week.

Misses Mary and Agnes Rawlls, of Griffin, Georgia, left for their home Tuesday after having spent several days visit with Miss Kathryn Clore.

Mrs. Carrie Miller and grand daughter, Evelyn Miller, of Hebron spent a few days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Earl Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Light Hickman are spending a few days with Postmaster Everett Hickman and family.

SPRAGUE STILL GOING

The latest reportfrom Davenport Iowa, where Lefty Sprague, Boone countys offering to the professional baseball arena, is working this summer, has it that he is still going nicely. His last resulted in a 12-inning victory by a 6-4 score. While he permitted 11 hits, yet he never was in danger except in one inning, when his opponents (Cedar Rapids) counted three times. Davenport is now playing night base ball except on Saturday and Sunday.

LATE RALLY

WINS FOR WALTON IN CRUCIAL CONTEST WITH BELLEVIEW—BLACK AND NORMAN IN HILL BATTLE—BOBBY ROSS IS HERO—

(By Hot Shot)

Walton came from behind Saturday and yanked a game out of the fire by putting on a garrison finish to score the tying and winning run in the 9th. inning. Going into the last half of the ninth inning Belleview was leading 4 to 3 due to the superb casting of Ben Black, one whom many base ball fans had thought hung up his togs years ago. Laws batted for Johnson who had relieved Dudgeon in left and smacked a single to center field. The next hitter Hartmen, after fouling off several struck out. This brought up Bobby Ross the crack short-fielder who incidentally was the only Walton player to connect safely with the offerings of Black, who had the batters eyes, and [illegible] the girls in the stands, then smacked a whale of a two-bagger to right center scoring Laws from first with the tying run. Ross advanced to third on a wild pitch and scored the winning run a moment later on Shearer's fly to left field.

Black held the hard hitting Walton club to 8 hits and struck out 8 while issuing 2 passes. Irish Norman was on the firing line for Walton and allowed Belleview 9 hits, caused 9 to whiff the air and gave 1 free ticket to first base.

BUNTS, BINGLES, ETC.

Whitey Rogers, Belleview's hard-hitting first sacker, smashed out three clean hits in four trips to the plate Saturday to carry away hitting honors. Whitey usually is a dead left field hitter but crossed the Walton lads up Saturday by hitting to right field his first time up. This lad is one nice hitter and ever dangerous in the pinch.

Another Rogers kid by the name of Mutt collected 2 hits out of four times at bat.

Ben Black, (The Grimes of the Boone County League), was hurling his spitter in fine form Saturday. Ben was a crack moundsman in the days of such Boone County pitchers as Charlie Ryan, Carl Spaulding, Howard Huey, Henry Matthews and Gus Lassing. If Saturday's game was a criterion of Black's return to form Boone county hitters had better take notice.

Hacker Johnson, Walton's rotund outfielder who has been nursing a bruised hand returned to the lineup Saturday only to have the same mitt hurt again in attempting a diving catch. Hack is one of the fastest outfielders in the league and takes in all the fly balls like the boys take in Johnson's restaurant on a rainy Saturday nite.

Saturday the Walton club will journey to Hebron to cross bats with Garnett's pets. Hebron is the only club in the league Walton has not trimmed this season, as the initial game between these two clubs ended in a 2 to 2 dead lock in ten innings. Should Hebron defeat Walton the two clubs will be tied for first place and to say both clubs will be bearing down would be putting it mildly.

Anderson Gadd and wife of near Union, were callers at the Recorder office on Wednesday of last week Although Mr Gadd is among our oldest subcribers yet it was the first time that either he or Mrs. Gadd ever had witnessed a Recorder press in action.

Don't for get the childrens' Day program at the Methodist church Sunday night, June 14 at 7:30 o'clock.

Nearly Five Thousand Dollars In Loot; Car Goes North

GREAT DUEL

GOES TO BOEHLER OVER BRADY WHEN FORMER WINS OWN GAME IN SEVENTH— RUN HOWEVER IS UNEARNED—PETERSBURG WINS WITH 3 HITS—

In what will likely go down in the books as the best pitchers battle of the year Petersburg downed Rabbit Hash at the Petersburg park last Saturday by the narrow margin of one run. The margin also represented the total score as the final was 1-0.

The two B's, Boehler and Brady, were on the firing line for Petersburg and Rabbit Hash, respectively, and it truly was a battle royal. It proved to be a pitchers battle in more than one sense especially for the home team, as Boehler batted in the winning and only run with a timely two base hit with a runner on second base in the last half of the seventh.

Brady had the better of the bargain in allowing base hits as he allowed but three, while the visitors [illegible] two to one margin as he fanned 16 while Brady struck out eight.

The score was tied at the double zero mark when Petersburg came to bat in the last half of the seventh. The winning runner, Lowe, was given a life on an error and stole second and then was driven home by Boehler. The trailing Rabbit Hashers, however, were not yet beaten when they came up for their bat in the first of the eighth, for with a runner on second a single was shot to left and it looked like a certain tied score. But Cox retrieved the ball and shot it home in time to retire the runner by an eyelash.

HEBRON DEFEATS LOCALS IN ONE SIDED CONTEST

Just by way of showing the local team that their win over them at Hebron last Saturday afternoon a week ago was no fluke the Hebron boys came over here the past week and administered a severe drubbing to the Burlington county league entry. The final score was 10-1.

The same two hurlers as of previous engagement again faced each other. This time, however, Braun had all the better of the argument, although Akin pitched effective ball and, with first class support, would have fared much better. Braun allowed only three hits, two of which were bunched in the eighth to help in scoring Burlington's lone and inoffensive tally.

Akin was touched up for fifteen bingles, many of which were made after opportunity had been offered to retire the side. He fanned ten men against nine for Braun, while he walked only two, both in the first inning, while Braun handed out five.

Hebron presented a very strong line-up, in fact one which will cause trouble to some of the contending teams before the race is over. On the contrary Burlington placed a patched line-up on the field, indeed being forced to call the president of the league to don the spikes after six years of retirement in order to fill out the nine positions. Of course all of this was most injurious to the dignity of the said prexy, and especially mortifying when he stuck his head in craw fish hole in the outer gardens in an effort to block down Hafer's mighty drive in the eighth.

Needless to say the drive went for a homer while the president called a meeting so that the managers might decide whether or not to pull his head out of the hole. Manager Blythe of Burlington voted unanimously to leave him where he stuck, but Hebron went into a huddle with Manager "Red" Garrett, who very wisely voted to bring him out and leave him in the game. Mrs. EVA MILLER, ASSISTANT CASHIER FORCED INTO VAULT WITH CUSTOMER—J. G. RENAKER, CASHIER, AT LUNCH—DEPOSITORS FULLY PROTECTED—

For the first time in the history of Boone county a bank hold-up has been staged. With ten banks at one time, though there are now but nine; with a net work of good highways leading from nearly everyone of them to greater Cincinnati with hundreds of effective hiding places, yet history never before has recorded a hold-up in Boone.

But Monday they got away with it and, so far as authorities have been able to learn as we go to press most effectively.

It was about 12:30 when two men entered the Florence Deposit Bank and found no one there except Mrs. Eva Miller, assistant cashier. They proceeded casually to the customers desk as if to transact business. This they did, but it was with guns and not with pen and ink.

According to Mrs. Miller they wheeled from the desk as she advanced to the cage window and found herself facing two automatics. One of the men walked around the [illegible] and stripped the cash [illegible] ance of the bank notes on hand, ignoring the silver with an oath.

In the mean time, however, Howe Roberts an employe of the Boone County Telephone Company, had entered the bank and advanced to the window. The second bandit who had remained outside the cage politely infomed him that a holdup was taking place and placed his gun in Howe's ribs ordering him into the vault, where Mrs. Miller also ordered to remain until they got away. The whole affair is said to have taken place in less than five minutes. As soon as the two men left the building they hurried in to a waiting automobile, which was stationed outside with a third man at the wheel, and drove toward Covington.

It was then that Mrs. Miller hastened from the vault and sounded the burglar alarm and notified sheriff Herbert Snyder at Burlington. Covington police also were notified and all roads were guarded, but no trace was found of the car bearing the description of the one driven by the bandits.

The robbery was perfectly timed, as it took place within a few minutes after J. G. Renaker, cashier of the bank, had gone to lunch. Mrs. George Tanner also was absent from the building at the time. Neither were there any customers in the bank when the bandits entered and but few people were on the street. Those who were on the street paid no attention to the car or to the men, and for that reason there is a difference of opinion asto the color of the car and as to the number of men in it.

After a careful check-up is was learned that the men had gotten away with exectly $4,984.00 The silver which was spurned, amounted to less than $500.00. Depositors, however, need have no worry as the loss was completely covered by insurance in the American Surety Company of New York, representatives of which were on the job early Tuesday checking up the deficit.

Both Mrs. Miller and Mrs. Tanner said that a car had stopped opposite the bank on Saturday and that two men had gotten out and walked to a position in front of the building. It is believed that these men at that time were making a preliminary survey.

Mrs. Miller probably is the only person on the record, who, when ordered to "stick 'em up", held up but one arm when the was possessed of two perfectly good ones. She held up her right hand, but held the left one closely to her side to conceal her diamond ring. Just why the gunmen were not more exacting probably never will be known.

HIGHWAYS AND MOTOR VEHICLES

Slowly but surely we are making progress in the effort to find the best answer to all questions which the automobile and the paved road have created. Just a few items from the week's news:

West Virginia has a new traffic law, effective the last of May, which makes it unlawful for anybody to drive so slowly as to impede of block the normal movement of traffic. The top speed limit, where conditions make it reasonable and prudent is increased to 45 miles an hour. Slowly legislators are learning that it is carelessness, not to speed, which is dangerous.

Two of the big oil companies have notified the French authorities that they will discontinue roadside posters. Here's hoping they follw the same practicein Aerica.

The American Road Builders Association reports that the value of highways and motor vehicles in the United States is now around thirty people, eight billion dollars a year for the operation and upkeep of cars an average of $300 a year for each of the 27,000,000 autos. We buy 14,000,000,000 gallons of "gas" and pay in gasoline taxes and registration fees about eight hundred million dollars. Outside of that, the cost of maintaining improved highways is about $200,000,000 to the taxpayers at large. But everybody benefits by good roads and motor transportation, whether he runs a car or not.

AFTER THE DEPRESSION WHAT?

We are indebted to Rockwell Smith, a real estate man of Van Nuys, California, for the collection of certain facts about the financial depressions in the past, which should be valuable in predicting the future. Mr. Smith went through a file of newspapers back to the 1850's and finds these facts:

There was business depression in 1873 lasting thirty months.

There was a business depression in 1884 lasting twenty-two months.

There was a business depression in 1893 lasting twenty-five months.

There was a business depression in 1903 lasting twenty-five months.

There was a business depression in 1907 lasting nearly twelve months

There was a business depression in 1914 lasting eight months.

There was a business depression in 1921 lasting fourteen months.

The important thing about these post panics, however, is that every one of them has been by flush times and the longer the depression lasted the longer and more active the "boom."

The present depression has now lasted nearly twenty months. We can hardly say the the "boom" which will surely follow it has begun, but it is clearly on its way.

BIG FOUR PURHASES LATEST TYPE ENGINES

The executive offices of the Big Four Railway have announced the purchase of twenty new passenger locomotives. Ten of these are being built by the American Locomtive Co. and are known as the Hudson Type, like those hauling the Twentieth Century Limited.

These engines with tender are ninety-six feet long and the total weight is 667,965 pounds. They are equipped with roller bearings on the engine trucks, feed water heaters, boosters, automatic coal stokers, power reverse gear, automatic control, etc.

The tender has a capacity of twenty-four tons of coal and 15,000 gallons of water.

The other ten are known as K-5 type and also have the latest improved appliances.

These twenty locomotives represent an investment of well over a million and a half dollars.

Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Register.

Poultry production is only 90 percent normal in Rockcastle county this year, due to the sale of chickens during the drouth of last year, to the lack of money with which tobuy feed this year, and due to the low prices of poultry and eggs.

The Family Garden

THE FALL GARDEN

The early gardens are in full sway; in fact part of the early garden has already served its purpose. The mustard greens and the first planting of spinach are done. Many of the green onions are pulled, and the picking of the early peas is at its height. Many gardeners are cutting cabbage, and a few are even picking beans. The first tomatoes are turning pink, and soon they will be in heavy production. Satisfying as all this is, it is not nearly all of gardening to have vegetables now; a good garden will continue producing all summer long, to furnish a bountiful table supply, and a storing and canning surplus besides.

To have such a garden,planning must continue. The spaces from which vegetables have been harvested must be put back into later plantings, and the time that elapses the better.

June is the month in when much of this planting is done. For example, late cabbage should be started now. A good plan is to use the rows in which early spinach stood, or perhaps where the earliest peas were. In order to escape the hazard of transplanting slips in the dry hot weather of July, a good plan is to sow three or four seedlings to one. Late Flat Dutch and Louisville Drumhead are both good varieties.

Now likewise the time to provide for having late tomatoes. This is especially important in the event early varieties were used for the spring setting, for these go out of bearing after eight weeks. At least the quality and size of the fruit begins to fail at that time. The same method of starting as for late cabbage, may be used. If the John Bear or Bonnie Best varieties are used, there hould be an acceptable crop of fine fruit up to frost, and a quantity of tomatoes to ripen indoors, to make preserves. The tomatoes could occupy the space left in cutting the early cabbage.

Beets and carrots for winter storing should be started this month, for the remnants from the early plantings are usually not worth storing. The best variety of beets for storing is Detroit Dark Red, and the best variety of carrots, Chantenay.

The practice of making small plantings of beans every two weeks should be continued through June and July, but the size of these plantings should be doubled so as to assure a canning surplus. Space will occur in the early potato rows, or the early pea ground and even that from which the early sweet corn was harvested may be used.

In August the fall greens should be started. These are zale (Dwarf Siberian variety), turnips (Seven Top), and spinach (King of Denmark). It is wise to make plantings of spinach every fifteen days until September 15 or October 1, to make the spinach supply last even beyond "killing" frost. Onion ground or potato land may be so utilized.

Finally, a point to remember in making plantings for the fall garden is that the ground should be refertilized, with rotted manure, or better still with a high-grade complete fertilizer, at the same rate as when the "spring" garden was put in.

PARAGRAPHS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

The University of Kentucky Law College has been granted a chapter of the Order of Coif, honorary scholastic society. The installation of this society in the University of Kentucky Law College is quite a distinction, as only about 27 of the 70 law schools which have membership in the Association of American Law Schools have been granted chapters.

The May issue of the Kentucky Educational Association, cantains an article by Professor Edward Warder Rannells, head of the dapartment of the Art at the University of Kentucky, the title of which is, "Why Should Art be Taught in College"?

"INSTALLMENT PLAN" FARM WATER SYSTEM

Howard matso, an agricultural engineer at the College of Agriculture, outlines what he terms an "installment plan" or progressive system of developing running water for the farm home. When there are not enough funds on hand even to permit the installation of a pump at the sink and a tile disposal line a start can be made and other units added as fast as possible until a complete system has been obtained, he says.

The first step in such a progressive water system should be the sink and drainboards, with a tile disposal line. With the next money available a force pump can be purchased and placed at the end of the drainboards, with the water piped to the sink through a faucet at the back. The cold water system is now complete, and the third step is the addition of a range boiler connected to the cold water line by a tee above the sink, and to the hot connections to a water-back on the water faucet at the sink, with other range.

The final and most expensive addition to the force pump water system is a full set of bathroom fixtures, either in another room on the first floor or on the second floor of the house. These can be bought and connected up at a time if necessary. All the plumbing should be appearance and permanence, so that whenever it becomes possible to install a hydo-pneumatic tank in with gas engine or electric power pumping, no change will be necessary in the system except the removal of the force pump.

Blue prints, bills of material, and additional information on the progressive water system may be obtained from the College of Agriculture University of Kentucky, Lexington.

PARIS—KENTUCKY CITIZEN

Formation of a pool for the handling of the 1931 crop oi bluegrass seed will be discussed at a public meeting of seed producers of Central Kentucky, to be held in the Clark County Circuit courtroom in Winchester Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock, it was announced Saturday by J. W. Jones, of North Middletown, who is active in the movement to establish the pool.

A number of the larger producers of the seed have been invited to attend, but Mr. Jones said that any farmer in Central Kentucky would be welcome. William Collins, field representative of the federal farm board, of which James C. Stone, of Lexington, is now chairman, it has been announced. Contracts for the pool will be drawn up along lines approved by the farm board.

A good market for the product is promised but to the poor quality and quantity of the crop in Kentucky's competitor in the race for blue grass seed supremacy—Missouri—where the crop did not come up to expectations.

Thirty pieces of the University of Kentucky band, under the direction of Elmer G. Sulzer, will attend the 157th. anniversary celebration of founding of Harrodsburg, the first Anglo-Saxon town west of the Alleghanies, June 10 to 12. The University musicians will give a program which will be broadcast, to gether with the addresses of the Governors of Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio and Illinois, over the National Broadcasting Company network.

Carl Conway, head of the Continental Can Company, has a customer in Massachusetts who makes cranberry sauce.

One day when Wall Street was thinking that the world was going to the dogs, Carle dropped in on this Yankee manufacturer and found him very serene.

They dined together, and after dinner the talk turned to world business conditions which, says Carle, "seem to have eliminated prohibition from conversation, so that there is that much to be said in favor of the depression at least."

The cranberry man said: "During the war I was making cranberry sauce and we were not able to get sugar except at an exhorbitant price. Every one in the industry said we had better go out of business because we had to have sugar to make cranberry sauce, and sugar at thirty cents a pound would stop sales.

"I went into a huddle with myself that night and came to the conclusion that I would let the customers decide whether they would buy cranberry sauce made with thirty-cent sugar; that I had just one job in the world and that was to run my business, and I was going to let the world take care of itself, and every one else take care of himself, and I was going to figure how I could take care of my business and solve the problems each day as they came along."

"I did not think I was big enough to help or harm the world's progress but I did think I could help or harm my own business."

One thing which makes this depression seem more discouraging than others is the fact that all countries have been so closely knit together. In other periods of slow business we in the United States did not worry because the coffee market was bad in Brazil or the corn plaster industry had collapsed in Timbuctoo. We had our own troubles to fight.

This year our newspapers, through their truly wonderful news gathering forces, have brought us all the bad tidings from everywhere. The result is that the average American business man is going around trying to carry the troubles of the whole big world.

I may be all wrong, but my idea about the other countries is that they are all having serious difficulties, just as we are, but in every one of them there is a solid backbone of people just like you and me—hard working, sensible men and women who have their homes and families, who do not want to the social order overthrown and who are doing their individual best to solve their own problems.

Ultimately, I believe, this silent majority will win.

In the meantime, when anybody comes into my office to discuss world conditions, I courteously ask to be excused. I am trying hard to work out my own salvationn.

If everybody in the world does that the world will be saved.

"SIMPLE" LARYNGITIS

By this term, I mean the sort of "hoarseness" that has no chronic, tubercular, or other complicated nature. Its cause is, sudden exposure to extremes of temperature, or overuse of the vocal organs in an improper manner. Clergymen get it frequently—and amature vocalists children with adenoids, large tonsils and those who breath through the mouth, nasal or other respiratory infection.

The onset of simple laryngitis is usually sudden; its duration depends upon the treatment employed When, in the case of singers, hoarseness and husky voice appears, silence, if it can be enforced, may be maintained for 24 or 48 hours and will produce wonderful results. Simple gargling with warm water containing a mild antiseptic such as borac acid, is good home treatment.

"Croup," now seldom heard of, is laryngitis in the simple form. For a long time diptheria was called "membranous croup," singularly fatal before the discovery of antitoxin; the improved treatment is little less than a God-send which has almost banished terror of this, one of childhood's most fatal maladies.

The simple laryngitis of childhood may or may not disable the youngster. The hoarseness proceeds the loud, barking cough. The attack may be cured in two or three days, by the attention to the bowels and hygiene of the child; minute doses of any good cough remedy helps to dismiss the annoying cough; I employ one with a syrup of ipecac, to secure the relaxation of the skin and to favor sweating; of course the little patient is kept in an even temperature until he is well; and his play outdoors should be undertaken gradually, until he is well used to the pure out-door air. Lobelia is very useful in "spasmodic croup," but it should be given under the supervision of your doctor.

Letcher county's potato crop will be improved through the introduction of certified seed in several communities.

Grant county farmers now own a total of 19 purebred bulls. The county agent is campaigning for the eradication of all kinds of scrub livestock.

CAUSING OTHERS TO STUMBLE

Romans 14: 13-23.

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

The Minneapolis Times said on March 2, "Prohibition has come to the forefront as the leading national issue." This was the opinion after a poll had been taken. Administration of Justice was second on the list. Thus in giving attention to the quarterly temperance lesson you are but in harmony with the popular study of the day.

Paul was writing to the Romans from Corinth and took his illustration from things that were taking place in that city. Animals were killed and certain parts only offered to idols in worship. The rest was meat absolutely good for food. Many Christians objected to eating meat which had first been offered to idols. The Apostle says that respect should be paid to personal opinion and a thing omitted for the sake of the good in another which might not be any harm in itself. He gave as a good reason for such conduct: "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink. But righteousness, and peace, and joy in the Holy Spirit." The question about how muen we will give up for the sake of another centers around the consideration of how much we really love our fellow man and desire his greatest good.

In the case of the beverage, use of liquor, the matter is decided different, for alcohol is always poison. History does not contain a parliguor with a single achievement that has beneffited mankind. agraph that credits intoxicating

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Many Henderson county farmers have sown 25 to 50 acres of korean lespedeza, while at least a dozen and three have sown 300 to 500 acres each.

Class reunions, followed by an annual banquet and dance at the Lafyette Hotel, will be held on University of Kentucky Alumni Day, set for Thursday, June 4.

Fruit growing is being expanded in Graves county. More than double the usual number of farmers are spraying this year.

Oldham county has a large number of alfalfa fields, many of which will yield a ton or more the first cutting. Yields will be exceptionally good where marl or limestone was used on the land.

Failure Of Artificial Means To Restore Industry Noted

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Stop me if you've herd this one. No offense, of course, if you have, for it's at least 25 centuries old. It is of record that Aesop told it to a bunch of cronies in front of his hotel in Delphi in the year 600 B. C. Maybe it came down to Aesop from Noah, and for all we know in might have come to Noah from Adam.

A grazing ox once stepped on a family of young frogs. One of the survivors hopped off to his mother with the dreadful news. "How big was he?" asked the old frog. "As big as this?" puffing herself out. "Oh! Much bigger than that," was the response. "Well, was it so big?" and she swelled her self out still more. Annoyed with her little one for continuing to doubt her powers, the old frog tried yet again, and this time burst herself in the vain attempt.

Had the fabulist lived in this day and age, it is safe to say that his parable would have been told somewhat as follows:

A great big ox known as foreign competition once stepped on a family of infant industries. The few who escaped ran to old mother Congress with the dreadful news. "How big was he?" asked O. M. C., "as big as this?" adding several million dollars to her waist-line. "Much bigger," answered her progeny. "Well, as big as this?" continued the metamorphosed political tadpole, adding several hundreds of millions more to her girth. "Oh, mother! Still much bigger," was the reply. Then came the plain-clothes men, headed by Cordell Hull, Senator Pat Harrison, General Atterbury, Represenative Snell and others, gathering up frog-liver and gizzard and other parts of renal anatomy for Exhibit A at the coroner's inquest.

Among the reluctant witnesses may be included those gentlemen in Congress who fell over themselves to pass the Becharach measure, permitting the war veterans to borrow up to 50 per cent of the adjusted compensation due them in in 1945, They should be rubbing their eyes. The burden they wished on the Treasury has now passed the billion-dollar mark and promises to amount to half as much again. The comfortig estimates with which they tried to wheedle the public into justifying their generosity have been doubled and trebled in the event and may be quadrupled. Even the President's prediction of the size of the drain inhis veto message is being exceeded. But let that pass. It is a bag o'shells.

Then followed that other argument of our wise lawmakers that all this money put into circulation would promote the recovery of business. That seems also to have gone by the board. Here this money is being passed out in greater quantity then even the most pessimistic foresaw and yet business remains apathetic. The fact is, of course, that it has discounted in advance the artificiality of the stimulant. Expecting a Treasury deficit of a billion or more it can see little encouragement in an act which forces the government to borrow another billion to meet its obligations. The prospect of heavier taxes has offset the immediate "pick-up," such as it is. But let that pass. It is another bag o'shells.

What does provide immediate food for thought is the action of Canada America's best customer, in increasing tariff duties on some 200 articles, which has caused a major controversy between Republican and Democrat politicans. The Democrats contend that the new duties announced by Premier R. B. Bennett constituted a retaliation against the American Hawley-Smoot act, and they further contend that the new Canadian rates are another reason in the Hawyey-Smoot act should be lowered.

Naturally, the Republicans deny that the Canadian schedules mean the denial being Senator Reed a reprisal, one of those joining in Smoot, of Utah. Canada the Republicans say, is simply trying to protect her farmers and workers, just as Congress protects the farmers and workers of the United States in the Hawley-Smoot act. For the pot to call the kettle black causes no surprise. But when the kettle calls the pot white it's time to sit up and take notice.

It might have benn predicted in advance that Senator Reed Smoot can see nothing to suggest retaliation against the Smoot-Hawley law in the sweeping upward revision of the Canadian tariff. To him the campaign statement of Canadian Premier R. B. Bennett that "out of every dollar we spend abroad, 67 cents goes across the (American) border and yet decline to buy anything from us except those raw materials which they can manufacture and so give employment to their own people" is just a quaint little caprice, having to do with Mr. Bennett's tariff policy. The great body of American people, however, will pay no attention to Mr. Smoot at this unhappy juncture nor will they accept equally extreme statements to the effect that this Canadian revision is simply a scheme hitched in vengeful minds to lambast the U. S. A. What they will keep their eyes on is the course of trade between the United States and Canada. They will not see the steady migration of American industry to get behind Canadian tariff walls erected after, if not in response to ,our tariff barriers. And they will wonder how a tariff designed "to protect American wage earners" that transfers their jobs to foreign parts.

And as if that were not enough, some things said about the protective tariff at the meetings of the Foreign Trade Association in New Yory were extremely fantastic, at least in the political sense. Anybody who expects President Hoover to call at once a special session of Congress and urge it to cut the customs duties 50 per cent horizontally may next be found looking for snow falls in the nether regions. But apart from that such phantasams the way in which our tariff is assailed by leading American financiers, industrialists, exporters, farmers and merchants is enough to take away the breat of all brought up on the sacred diet of the protective tariff.

Grave Defect

A great defect of modern life is the desire to know about everything and to place more importance on knowing about things than on doing them.—Sir William Rothenstein.

Glad to Leave High Office

There is proof that Jefferson was not reluctant to relinquish the office of President. On this subject he wrote to his friend, Dupont de Nemours: "Never did a prisoner, released from his chains, feel such relief as I shall on shaking off the shackles of power."

Early Life Insurance

The earliest life insurance policy of which anything definite is known was issued in 1583 in London, insuring the life of William Gybbons for a twelvemonth. This policy was underwritten by 13 persons acting individually and the premium was $80 a thousand.

Bloody Conflict

The most sanguinary battle ever recorded in history, according to ancient records, was the battle of Chalons, where Attila, the Hun, was met by the Gothic prince Thorismund, commanding the Visigoths and Roman forces. The dead left upon the field is estimated as between 250,000 and 300,000 men.

Prize for Riflemen

The Wimbledon cup was presented in 1874 by the National Rifle association of Great Britain for annual competition by the riflemen of America. It is open to any citizen of the United States. The course is 20 shots at 1,000 yards. Any rifle sights and ammunition may be used, and the position is prone.

Only Coating of Salt at Utah's "Salt Palace"

The Salt Lake Real Estate board says: "The Salt palace was built as a dance hall in a local pleasure resort where were formerly a bicycle race track and various other entertainment attractions. The Salt palace was not constructed of solid salt, as many suppose, but rather was a cost over frame construction, which, however, had all the appearance of a real salt structure. Salt is extracted from the brine in Great Salt lake by pumping water into evaporating ponds, where the salt is finally deposited on whatever happens to be on the ground. It was discovered that when the brine, which is approximately 20 per cent in the lake, had evaporated sufficiently so that the solution was about 40 per cent in strength, articles dipped into the brine would attract the crystals and they would form on any surface, particularly wood. This was how the lumber was coated for the Salt palace. It was taken to these ponds, one side was allowed to become covered with these crystals, and then later salt water was poured over to weld the joints. At first the building was very bright, the crystals dazzling in the sunlight. However they were not immune to rain, and after several seasons they were no longer the same bright color that they were originally. The origin of the fire which destroyed it was never definitely determined. However, like many resorts in smaller cities, it had too much competition, and was therefore not sufficiently profitable to warrant rebuilding."

Readers and Playgoers Bored by Sensationalism

The twilight of the sensationalists has come. The gods they challenged dre either moribund, totally defunct, or so changed as to be unrecognizable. Respectability has become a joke; right and wrong, inextricably mingled, Louise Maunsell Field writes, in the North American Review.

We are all so used to having "the facts of life" paraded before us in their ugliest possible aspect that we no longer become excited or indignant. We can no longer be shocked at anything, because we have become used to everything. Familiarity breeds indifference at least as often as it does contempt.

We can still, some of us, be repelled by vulgarity and bad taste; and we can most of us be bored. We were profoundly bored last season by many plays that struggled to be daring, and succeeded only in being dull.

As for psychopathic studies produced under the guise of fiction, they may be well done and consequently interesting, or they may be merely tedious; but they can't rely on "frankness" and "daring" any longer.

Radio Peculiarities

Radio transmission reproduces not only the pitch and tone, but also the characteristic timbre of each musical instrument, because each sound wave entering a microphone has not only the general characteristic of frequency, but also infinitely smaller waves within the general frequency wave. These incidental—or supplemental—waves within the tonal frequency wave are caused by the peculiar or characteristic timbre of the instrument producing the sound. For example, the tonal frequencies of both the violin and the saxophone, playing the same note, "A," will be identical, but the incidental "overtone" waves within the frequencies will be different and will also be transmitted, identifying the characteristic "form" or "timbre" of the instrument itself.

California's Inland Sea

The Salton sea is a lake in the Colorado desert, in southeastern California. Under ordinary conditions it is a salt marsh covered in places by shallow lakes about 30 miles long, 12 miles wide and 280 feet below sea level. At times of freshets, the lakes expand into a water body covering approximately 50,000 acres. Water from the irrigating ditches of the Imperial valley keeps the level of the lake fairly constant and unless this is diverted it will continue to maintain its previous area despite heavy losses from evaporation. Terraces slightly above sea level on the sides of the basin indicate that there was formerly present a lake called "Lake Cahuilla," which was 12 miles long and 30 miles wide.

Horseshoe Superstitions

There are varying views on the origin of the superstition concerning the horseshoe. Some think it is lucky because it has seven nail holes in it. Another idea is that the horseshoe is lucky because witches are afraid of it. So if a horseshoe is placed outside your door, no witch will dare to enter. It is possible that one object of hanging up horseshoes in the old days was a desire to appear wealthy in the eyes of passers-by, for only a comparatively rich man possessed a horse, shod with iron. By the way, the luckiest horseshoe is supposed to be the first one shed by a mare, and you must hang this with the opening at the top in order that the luck may not drop out!

Knew Little About Him

"I have a compliment for you," Mrs. Jones told her son Jerry. "Mrs. Brown said you were a very fine boy."

"Well, Mrs. Brown doesn't know anything about me, does she?" asked Jerry.

"No, thank goodness, she doesn't," said mother.

Lovers of Wild Birds Mourn for Heath Hen

Many settlers along the Atlantic coast found huge flocks of the heath hen—in size and appearance much like the western prairie chicken—frequenting the sandy, scrub oak plains of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Long Island, New York and other coastal areas from Maine to Virginia.

The Cavaliers discovered that the heath hen was excellent for roasting on a spit before the huge fireplaces. The fowl helped Roger Williams and his followers through their first hard winters in Rhode Island. Pilgrims who hunted turkey or wild deer without success brought home heath hens for Thanksgiving. Thomas Morton wrote in 1637 that the bird is much "like our pheysant henne of England of excellent flesh and delicate meat."

The heath hen, however, was the pot hunter's prey. It flew in a straight line and rather slowly on flushing and it had an unfortunate habit of congregating in large flocks in open spaces.

It was extinct on the mainland as early as the Civil war, but still flourished on islands. Bird lovers called attention from time to time to the fact it was dwindling, and in 1925 there was a heath hen conference in New England in an effort to save the pinnated fowl. Thousands of dollars and much time and effort were expended, but it was the old story of priming the pump after the house burned down.

Grateful and Beautiful Tribute to Loved Wife

Those who report the inscriptions in old burying grounds do so ordinarily to call attention to what is quaint, untutored and bizarre. A different quest in these days might have as its object the discovery of inscriptions which testify, with simple sincerity, to long lives of joint happiness. The present-day world benefits by every reminder that there were such and always are.

Perhaps in all New England there is no more graceful tribute to a grateful devotion than that upon a headstone, placed not so many years ago, in the old Grove Street cemetery in New Haven. It was placed there at the grave of his wife by a physician whose high skill and learning were long in the service of the community and of the Yale Medical school, whose courtesy and graciousness became a tradition and who bore worthily a great name, Francis Bacon. Below her name and the fact that she was his wife, he added: "For forty years the crown of his felicity."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Football in America

The first football players in America were the "Oneidas," a football club in Boston, the first organization of its kind in this country and the predecessor of modern college football, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. According to an inscription on a monument in that city the "Oneidas" played all comers from 1862 to 1865, and never tasted defeat nor had their goal line crossed.

American colleges had their football during that period. The first intercollegiate game was played between Princeton and Rutgers on November 6, 1869, the latter having 26 men on the field to the former's 21. But the first real development of the modern game came in 1906 when at a meeting of the American intercollegiate football rules committee the forward pass was introduced.

Up-to-Date Youngster

A new nurse was engaged in the household of one of our most advanced doctors, and the first night, toward eight o'clock, she settled down with a book of fairy stories to read the doctor's daughter to sleep.

The child, aged six and very "modern," listened placidly through "Peter Piper," dozed over "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," and seemed to be sound asleep during the reading of "Jack and Jill," until suddenly, at the end of the poem, she started wide awake again. The poem ends, you will remember, with something about "tum-tum-tum, and Jack mended his crown with tinegar and brown paper."

"Why, isn't that awful?" cried the child, gazing horror-stricken at the nurse. "Didn't he even have an X-ray taken?"

Ashburton Treaty

The Ashburton treaty was negotiated between Great Britain and the United States in 1842 settling the international boundary between Maine and Canada. Lord Ashburton acting for Great Britain and Daniel Webster for the United States. Of the territory in dispute the United States received about seven-twelfths and Canada five-twelfths. The same treaty provided for the boundary of the St. Mary's river near Sault Ste. Marie and to the Lake of the Woods; for the suppression of the slave trade and for the extradition of criminals.

The Proper Comeback

A prominent English woman who recently visited us expressed her bewilderment with regard to the correct reply to the customary American greeting, "Pleased to meet you." No doubt there is a fitting response, if one could only think of it. Of course one might follow the lead of the old duke of Beaufort. An American gripped the duke warmly by the hand and said, "Pleased to meet you."

"And so you d—n well ought to be," returned the aged peer, crisply.—Boston Transcript.

CHANGING THE CONSTITUTION BY AMENDMENT OR A NEW DOCUMENT THROUGHOUT

(Lexington Leader) The Institute of public affairs, held at Centre College, Danville, on Wednesday last was well attended and proved to be a great success. The addresses were all of high order pointed, specific, moderate in tone, thoughtful, and well delivered holding the attention of the audience throughout the morning and afternoon sessions.

It is impossible in this space to speak at length of the excellent addresses or to argue the case pro and con. The proceedings will be published and given general distribution for the information of the people. The changes in the constitution which have been proposed from time to time it was generally agreed for the most part, but there was a wide difference of opinion as to the right course to pursue in effecting revision. On one side a constitutional convention, on which they are to vote in the fall, was strongly favored. On the other amendments were felt to be safer and the more satisfactory method of approach to the problem as provided for in the present instrument.

The argument of Mr. Jouett, who opposes the calling of a constitutional convention, seemed to the larger number present clear, cogent, and convincing. He pointed out that the constitution is only 40 years old, young compared with the that this is not constitution-making constitution of many other states, age, that only seven amendments have so far been adopted, that there is much radicalism abroad which might creep into a new consitution, that logrolling and trading would be almost certain to effect the results ,that even the selection of delegates would be influenced by partisan feeling and special feeling and special interests, and that such a convention would be insession for perhaps a year, or even more, and would cost somewhere in the neighbor hood of a million dollars. as the last convention did in New York, the results of whose labors were rejected at the polls.

Mr. Jouett, also, called attention to the fact that a long session of the legislature, perhaps running over six months, would be required, should a new instrument be adopted, in order to make changes in the laws to fit the constitution, and that this would be a part of theexpense entailed. Moreover as the present constitution for 40 years has benn constructed in innumerable cases by the corts, the long tedious, and disturbing process would have to be gone through once more over the years ahead.

One grave matter broached was the fact that it might very well turn out that the convention would remove the limitation upon the legislature in the matter of appropriations and permit of reckless expenditures of puglic funds, the increase of the tax burden and the states where the limitations of the creation of a bonded debt. In other Kentucky constitution in such matters do not exist, the public debts created are enourmous, as in Tennessee and North Carolina. Kentucky has no such indebtedness and can have none except such as the people aprove at an election.

As Judge Dietzman, Prof. Allen, Mrs. Settle and others pointed out, there are reforms which should be undertaken which will require changes in the constitution, such as the scientific reorganization of the state government, the removal of the salry limitations, the improvement of the magistral courts, the prohibition in more explicit language of the creation of more floating debts and the refounding of debts, providing for improvements in the court procedure, the consolidation ofcertain county offices, and the removal of courts ond judges from politics.

Those who stress these matters, that more than two amendments can be submitted at one time. Even this is doubtful. Are the people prepared to analyse, fully consider, and pass up on four or five such amendments at a single election? As it is it is difficult to get the voters to mark their ballots in any numbers on a proposed constitutional change.

What is needed most of all where amendments are submitted is to have campaign of election carried on, perhaps to have one or both political parties to approve, or disapprove, such amendments making the matter an issue and discussing it from the tump. Something, at this rate, should be done to acquaint the citizens with the facts and to clarify there minds. As a rule they fail to vote upon such matters because they do not understand them and are therefore, indifferent or fearful that changes may be undesirable on general principles.

problems which have arisen in late years or which have been created by changed conditions, favored a convention. These opposed, however, believe that such reforms can be instituted gradually by amendments. It might be well, first of all to so amend the constitution as

WHAT HIS FEAR WAS

There was a man who went to a revival meeting and was pressed to repent. He worried for a time and finall he raose and said: "Friends, I want to repent, and tell how bad I've been, but I dosen't do it when the grand joury is in session."

"The Lord will forgive," the revivalist shouted.

"Probably He will, answered the sinner. "But He aint on the grand jury.

Indeed it was quite a show and the chief executive already has received a number of very flattering offers from many of the managers, who have somewhat flattened exchequers. "To Heck with the exchequers, unless they guarentee outfields devoid of the treacherous craw fish holes,"—so quoth the president.

POULTRY MEETINGS JUNE 16

The Boone county Poultry Brooding Extension School will be held Thursday, June 16 according to county agent H. R. Forkner. The meeting will be in the form of a tour in the morning and a field meeting in the afternoon.

The morning meeting will begin at 10:00 a. m. slow time at Mrs. Lola Ernst of near Hebron followed by stops at Benj. Paddack and C. B. Turner,s of near Limaburg. The afternoon meeting will begin at 1:15 p. m. at Grant Maddox's of near Devon on the Dixie Highway.

Three hundred to 1,500 chicks were brooded in each demonstration in various forms of the clean chick program this spring. These chicks will be inspected and studied at each stop. Complete cost of production and brooding records will be available the ten clean chick sanitation principles coupled with certain good management practices and not medicine to cure diseasesis what turnes chick lessons into profits. The unfortunate part is that these meetings will be held on the 16th and not on the 17th or some other day. The big show is on the 16th and that is the day it is hoped the poultrymen of the county who are interested will make plans to turn out.

Many poultrymen report losses in their brooding operations this sprthtin Accurate records kept will show that a number of the demonstrations closely followed out made as high as $150.00 per brood of chicks in 12 weeks.

J. E. Humphrey, field agent in poultry work from the College of Agriculture will be present to discuss poultry problems. The meeting is held for Boone county poultrymen and it is hoped that as many as possibly can will turn out.

Deaths

MRS. LOUISA NEAL

Mrs Louisa Neal, passed away Saturday morning, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Bert Clore, in Union, Ky., following a stroke of paralydis several days previous.

Funeral services were conducted at the Big Bone Baptist Church Monday morning at 11 o'clock by Rev. Johnson, pastor, assisted by Rev. Miller of the Elsmere Baptist Church, after which she was laid to rest by the side of her husband, P. P. Neal, in the near by cemetery.

She is survived by two daughters Mrs. Bert Clore and Mrs. Tobe Marshall, besides grandchildren and great grandchildren and a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Edgar Berkshire, who is generally recognized hereabouts as one of the kings of strawberry growers, sent us one of his prize quarts of fruit. The quart contained three varieties-the Big Joe, the Town King and Ward's Wonder. They were the finest berries we have yet seen.

WITH MUTTON

Soak a tablespoonful of haricot beans overnight. Cut the mutton into small pieces, and fry them just brown in a little dripping, turnip, and onion, and fry them for five minutes in the fat the meat was fried in.

Put the meat in a casserole or stewpan, with a seasoning of salt and peper, the vegetables, and haricot beans. Just cover with water. Bring to the boil, remove any scum, then simmer for two hours.

Two cutlets, or four if small, may be cut off from the neck of mutton and grilled or fried in egg and breadcrumbs and served with mashed potatoes, or surrounded with boiled macaroni and tomato sauce.

REPORT OF RED CROSS NURSING SERVICE FOR MAY 1931

On May 2 with Mrs. Mabel Sayre, Secretary of the Boone Co. Chapter of the American Red Cross, I attended a State meeting of Red Cross workers at Lexington.

On May 8 under the auspices af the Parent Teachers Association of Verona I Conducted a Pre-School Child Health Conference at the School there. Nine children were brought to this Conference by their mothers, and I felt it was a day af especial significance in our Health work. It was requested, planned and put over entirely by the Committee of the P. T. A. who had charge of their May meeting, Mrs. J. T. Roberts being the chairman. We must conclude that when a local organization such as this one sets itself to promote the health and safety of their babies and preschool children that they are going a long way in community growth.

At Walton School, Margaret Walton received the State Blue Ribbon, having attained the Health Standards as set up by the State, as the requirements.

Miss Louise Conrad teacher of the 5 and6 grades has kept these standards before her pupils, and credit is due her for her general effort in behalf of better health among them.

Our Red Cross Nursing Committee spent an afternoon during May at the Childrens Clinic and Hospital in Cincinnati, where they through these places, where so much is being done for our babies and children, there was a group af six of us, and every one felt it a very instructive and impressive trip and I shall hope we may all be instrumental in interpreting the benefits these institutions have for the children of our county. Offtimes the parents fear from an examination, and I am sure no one will find occasion to tell the story of the beautiful care and provision given and made possible in the Clinic and Hospital, thus helping to educate our people to their opportunities.

On May 23 the 4—H demonstration contest was held at Burlington, two of the teams put on Health demonstrations, I can not help but be glad when they choose to do this, forI feel it emphasizes these truiths to the Clubs, and also to those who witness the demonstrations, and is a good way to keep the lessons for better health fresh in the minds of our people. Incidentally it was one of these demonstrations that won first place in the contest.

LASE WEEK'S RESULTS

Hebron	10—Burlington	1
Walton	5—Belleview	4
Petersburg	1—Rabbit Hash	0

The schedule this week offers three great prospects for good games—games that will mean something.

For instance the Hebron team, who counted themselves out of the race some weeks ago, now face the golden opportunity of gaining a tie for first place with the fast stepping Waltonians. A victory next Saturday for Hebron should not be at all surprising on dope as they quit in a 2-2 tie on opening day in the tenth. Of course both teams have sthengthened since then, but which has become the stronger can be told getter after this week's conflict.

At Belleview Ben Black, the speed ball artist, will hook with Boehler for the first time this season. A defeat will practically eliminate either team from a pennant chance in the first half, which closes June 27. So this should be a great fight also.

Then, of course, Burlington and Rabbit Hash will be scrapping it out at Rabbit Hash for that old cellar berth. A winner for Burlington would leave them in a tie.

SCHOOL TAX ELECTION NOTICE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIEVN to the legal voters residing in the Boundary of the Maple Hill Shool Destrict, described below, of an election to be held at the Maple Hill School house, between the hours of 1:00 o'clock P. M. and 5:00 o'clock P. M. Central Standard Time, on the 25th. day of June 1931, on the proposition as to whether or not there shall be leved a tax of (15c) fifteen cents on each ($100.00) one hundred dollars worth of property taxable for school purposes, owned by white persons and Corporations in said boundry. Said tax to be used toward paying ane-third of the cost of the Hamilton Consolidated School.

The Tax is to be leved and collected each year until the remainder of one-third of the cost of said school building (amounting to approxamately $10,000.00) has been paid by the entire Hamilton Consolidated School District.

The following question will be submitted to the legal white voters at said election, ARE YOU IN FAVOR OF A LEVY OF (15c) ON EACH ($100.00) ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS WORTH OF TAXABLE PROPERTY AND CORPORATIONS IN SAID DISTRICT, AND MAKING THE MAPLE HILL DISTRICT A PART OF THE HAMILTON CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL DISTRICT?

The boundary of the district is as follows: Beginning with Charles Bachelor on the Ohio River including him; thence to Walton Brothers thence to Walter Rector including him; thence to Ira Smith including him; thence down the Rabbit Hash and Union pike to Lick Creek; thence down said Creek to Lavin Stephens including him; thence straight to Caleb Ryle excluding him thence to the Ohio River and up said river to begining.

Art Treasures Buried All Price in Vatican

It would take volumes to enumerate the treasures of the Vatican. The Chapels of Sixtus and Nicholas, the Stanze and the Pauline are decorated with frescoes by Fra Angelico, Michelangelo, Perugino and others. Four chambers were decorated by Raphael.

The picture gallery is not large, but the paintings are among the most valuable in the world. Raphael's "Transfiguration," his "Madonna di Foligno" and his "Coronation of the Virgin," besides some smaller pictures, are here. So are works of Murillo, Titian, Perugino, Correggio, Paul Veronese and others of the greatest of painters.

The museum contains not only many of the most beautiful sculptures in the world, ancient Greek statues, among which are the Laocoon and the Apollo Belvidere, but also great numbers of antiquities, relics of ancient Italy, Greece and Egypt.

The library at the Vatican was founded in 1378, and now contains a valuable collection of 60,000 manuscripts and 250,000 volumes of rare books. A recent addition to this collection is the Rospigliosi library and archives presented by Louis Mendelssohn of Detroit, Mich. This library includes many valuable books gathered by Pope Clement IX of Rospigliosi during his pontificate from 1667 to 1669; also a portrait of Pope Clement by Carlo Maratta.

Bayberry Candle Boon to New England Women

Candles in days gone by were an item of expense to be reckoned with in the gay courts of Europe, as many as 5,000 being used on grand occasions when the vast halls were to be filled with guests. From the demand the making of candles developed into quite an important industry and laws were passed regulating the size and adulteration of the materials to be used.

When the Pilgrims found themselves on the bleak shores of New England with few facilities for artificial illumination, says the New York Sun, other methods of lighting their homes had to be devised. At first, like the Indians, they used knots of pitch pine to light their cabins, but it was not long until the thrifty New England woman learned that by boiling the little gray bayberries that grew on the low windswept shores along the coast she could procure a wax which rose to the top of the kettle. From this she made the first bayberry candles.

First Sunday Schools

A century and a half has elapsed since Robert Raikes began his organization of Sunday schools. The credit for the founding of the earliest of Sunday schools, as distinct from the Sunday school movement, however, is claimed for the little spinster Methodist, Hannah Ball, friend of John Wesley, whose first Sunday school was established in High Wycombe 161 years ago, 11 years before Raikes' historic movement, and is still active. An authority on the subject has stated: "It seems almost certain that John Wesley, who rode on horseback from place to place, and who visited Gloucester, spoke of the work of Hannah Ball to Robert Raikes, a man of great abilities, who thereupon not only commenced a school, but set himself to organize others."—Montreal Family Herald.

Standard Time

According to the United States naval observatory at Washington, standard time had not come into general use in 1885; no uniform standards existed then. At present, the time zone in which England is located uses the local time of Greenwich, and the time used in London in 1885 was practically the same as the Greenwich time today. Sweden adopted standard time in 1892. Since that date it has used time one hour more advanced than that of Greenwich. Stockholm, no doubt, used its own local time before 1892, which would have been a few minutes more advanced than the time used today. Owing to Greggland's spare population, that country has not yet adopted standard time.

Country's Foggiest Spots

The foggiest spot in the United States brightened a little in 1930, as it had only 1,562 hours of fog, so lighthouse keepers at Moose Peak, Me., have reported to the lighthouse service of the Department of Commerce. At Moose Peak, records for the last 16 years show a yearly average of 1,607 hours of fog. Runners-up on Moose Peak's record are Libbey Island and Petit Manan, also on the Maine coast. They are foggy a good bit of the time, but cannot quite match Moose Peak's figures. The United States lighthouse service states that Point Reyes light station holds the record for fog on the Pacific coast, with an average of 1,398 hours a year for 47 years.—Grit.

Remembered Old Debt

To pay back 50 cents he had borrowed from a schoolmate 50 years ago Ernest M. Ledden, New York, is said to have flown to San Francisco and handed a 50-cent piece to his creditor, Municipal Judge Fritz. Ledden was a student at college in San Francisco in 1880. The two boys wanted to go swimming one day. Ledden had no bathing suit nor any money to buy one, so Fritz lent him a quarter.

All Sorts of Virtues Credited to Turquoise

To the people of Tibet and Persia the turquoise appears in the light of a charm—a talisman endowed with curative powers and mystic benefits, writes Bayard Nellister in the Los Angeles Sunday Times. It was considered an astringent and sweet to the taste, an excellent means of provoking the appetite. Every poison, whether vegetable or mineral, or a mixture of both, was rapidly neutralized by the turquoise. It relieved the pain caused by demoniacal and other obnoxious influences. The stone was employed as an eye remedy and applied against the stings of the scorpion. It was used in temple worship and as an omen of good luck in the marriage ceremony."

For centuries the turquoise has been linked with the spiritual and physical welfare of the ancient nations. Derived from Tibet and Persia, these superstitions or beliefs were carried through conquest and trade to all the countries of the East, finding a ready following in India, China and among the more cultured peoples. Later, the ideas invaded Europe and it is held by many that much of the American Indian turquoise lore had its inception from these same beliefs.

Vivid Pen Portrait of Old English Gentleman

"I notice that this gentleman is dressed in more easy fashion than some," Dion Clayton Calthrop wrote in "English Costume" in describing an Eighteenth-century Englishman. "His coat is not buttoned, the flaps of his waistcoat are not over big, his breeches are easy, his tie is loose. . . . I know that he has a tremendous periwig at home covered with scented powder; I know that he has an elegant suit with fullness of the skirts, at his sides gathered up to a button of silver gilt; there is plenty of lace on this coat, and deep bands of it on the cuffs. He has also, I am certain, a cane with an amber head very curiously clouded, and this cane he hangs on to his fifth button by a blue silk ribbon. This cane is never used except to lift it up at a coachman, hold it over the head of a drawer, or point of the circumstances of a story. Also, he has a single eyeglass, or perspective, which he will advance to his eye to gaze at a toast or an orange wench."

Six Towns in One

There are six towns in one in Staffordshire, England. They are Stoke-upon-Trent, Hanley, Burslem, Longton, Tunstall, and Fenton, and they are now known under the name of Stoke-on-Tren, with a single head in the lord mayor, who is really five mayors in one with the use of five mayoral chains which are the badge of office, one for each town. There are also six town halls in the federation, but the police administration is centered in one chief constable. And there are six public libraries which were separate municipal undertakings, and there are five markets, which are now under one control. The towns are largely given over to the pottery industry of which there are more than 300. Foremost among them is that of Josiah Wedgwood whose bicentenary has been celebrated recently.

Modern "Dear Old Ladies"

They come down the garden path as summer rain comes on the thirsty ground, kindly and softly, these two old ladies in their dark clothes. Peace walked in their footsteps. Their gait was like the laying on of healing hands, their steps fell on the earth like a benediction. Strife and weariness never lived with them, one felt. Sure they had quiet in them, more wisdom than the great, else they never walked so freely down the garden path. They talked, as they came to the garden gate. Quietly they talked, with animated quiet faces. The sad passer-by heard them open the gate, and heard the taller lady say, their peaceful talk ended: "But, oh, my dear, if I were you, I'd hedge on Bumpur Tin, and sell my copper short."—Manchester (England) Guardian.

Odd Virginia Law

The idea that there is a law in Virginia that forbids a woman to become engaged to more than one man at the same time is probably based on the story of Cicely Jordan, a charming and wealthy widow, who engaged herself to marry two men, Capt. William Farrar and Rev. Greville Dooley, the latter of whom sued her for breach of promise. The suit was lost, but the governor and council of the colony were so aroused over the affair that they issued a proclamation against a woman's engaging herself to more than one man at a time. Wilstach, an authority on Virginia lore, says there is no known record that this edict has ever been revoked.

Fortune From Simple Idea

Among inventors of domestic utilities, a high place must be given to an unknown old lady of Durham, England, whose notion of grinding mustard seeds and sifting the powder through cloth led to Mr. Jeremiah Colman making a tremendous fortune and founding a worldwide business. The old lady was enterprising enough to forward a sample of her preparation to King George I, who was delighted at the new form of a condiment which previously had to be prepared by a clumsy and lengthy process, and his favor instantly established the success.

A Week Of Meat Dishes To Help You Save Money

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economic Dept.
H. J. Heinz Company

WHILE some women always plan their menus for a whole week in advance, most of us find it more satisfactory to plan the entire meal only a day or two ahead of time. However, it is a good idea to decide upon the meat dishes for at least an entire week. Then, when you are ready to work out the daily menus, you will find always at hand an idea from which to start.

Also, by planning the meat dishes for several days in advance, you may avoid serving the same main course too frequently. While it is decidedly more economical, too, if meat dishes are selected well in advance so that full advantage can be taken of purchasing opportunities. For example, when one knows definitely that she will serve meat pie on Monday, one simply buys a larger roast for Sunday, and then uses the left-over meat for the meat pie, instead of going to market a second time.

Below I am suggesting meat dishes for one week. Build your menus for next week around them, and see how much easier this task will be:

SUNDAY—Roast Beef with Yorkshire Pudding: Place the beef in a roaster with a peeled onion. Add 1 tablespoon water, cover, and roast at 400 degrees F., until outside of meat is well seared. Then reduce heat and bake in a moderate oven, allowing 30 minutes to the first pound, and 12 to 15 minutes for each additional. A five-pound roast will require about 1¼ hours to be well done, or about 1 hour and twenty minutes to be rare. If sprinkled with French Dressing the day before roasting, meat will be more tender and juicy. Baste while baking with hot water, to which has been added a tablespoon of Worcestershire Sauce. When about two-thirds done, season with salt and pepper.

To make Yorkshire Pudding, take several tablespoons of fat from around the roast and spread in a hot shallow pan. Mix 1 cup flour with ¼ teaspoon salt, gradually add 1 cup milk, and 2 eggs beaten until light. Pour into the shallow pan about ½ inch deep. Bake twenty minutes in a hot oven, basting, after it has risen, with several tablespoons fat. Cut in squares and serve around the roast.

MONDAY—Beef Pie: Cut 2 cups cold roast beef or steak cut in 1 inch cubes. Cover with boiling water, add 1 whole onion, ¼ cup Tomato Ketchup, and 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce. Simmer thirty minutes. Remove onion, thicken gravy with flour, and add salt and pepper. Add 2 cups of potatoes cut in ¼ inch slices and parboiled eight minutes in salted water. Put into a buttered baking dish and cover with biscuit dough or pie crust. Bake in a hot oven—about 400 degrees F.—for 20 minutes.

TUESDAY — Mixed Grill of Bacon, Sausages and Fresh Mushrooms: Arrange small sausages in a pan and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees F.—for ½ hour. Ten minutes before serving, place strips of bacon on half the broiler rack and halved tomatoes or mushroom caps on the other half, and broil. To prepare the tomatoes, wash and cut in half and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Then spread with Prepared Mustard and dip in crumbled, buttered Rice Flakes. Serve on a hot platter, garnished with parsley and slices of Fresh Cucumber Pickle. Grilled slices of apple or halved bananas may be used instead of tomatoes.

WEDNESDAY — Ham Loaf with Potatoes and Pineapple: 1 lb. raw cured ham and ½ lb. fresh ground pork; 2 cups Rice Flakes; 1 teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce; 6 white or sweet potatoes; 1 egg; ¾ cup milk; pepper; flour; pineapple.

Mix ingredients thoroughly, pat into a loaf and bake with a little water for about 1 hour. After first half hour, place white or sweet potatoes around the loaf, place sliced pineapple over the meat, and brown delicately.

THURSDAY—Broiled Lamb Chops

FRIDAY—Halibut Steak with Tartar Sauce: A fine tartar sauce is made by combining 3/4 cup Sandwich Relish with 1/3 cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. A few drops of juice scraped from an onion may be added.

SATURDAY—Cold Ham Loaf with Oven Baked Beans.

Diamonds in Meteors

More than one meteor has been found that contains diamonds, both black and white.

Fish That "Walks"

A semitropical fish known as the batfish is equipped both for swimming and walking, but usually uses the latter method of locomotion, hopping along the sea floor in shallow places.

Nomenclature

A very considerable number of names arise from the animal world. Examples are: Bullock, Bull, Lamb, Kidd, Colt, Badger, Hogge, Hare and Wolfe. In several of these the old spelling is still preserved.

Signifies Illegitimacy

The term "bar sinister" is derived from a heraldry term, "baton sinister," and signifies illegitimate birth.

Training Carrier Pigeons

Carrier pigeons must be trained in each new locality for a period of from three or four days to two weeks. Therefore, when an army is on the move, carrier pigeons cannot be used.

Tiny Volume of Sound

In analyzing and comparing the noises of the city, the unit of sound used is known as the "decibel," which is defined as "the smallest change that the ear can detect in the level of sound."

Believe in Yourself

Nobody ever did anything until he had faith in possibilities. It is faith in something which makes life worth living.—Country Home.

Commemorative Stamps

The number of commemorative stamps to be issued is specified by the Post Office department. The number is not always the same, as there is a greater demand for certain types of commemorative stamps.

Sad Story Not Wanted

"He who tells a sad story only for the sake of sympathy," said Hi Ho, the sage of Chinatown, "delays a remedy of his fortunes by wasting not only his own time but that of a friend who might be helpful."—Washington Star.

Treating Mental Disease

The first psychological clinic to be established in this country was the one at the University of Pennsylvania, under the direction of Dr. L. Witmer, in 1896. This clinic for many years was alone in the field and was the prototype of many mental hygiene clinics for children.

The Wise Hostess Serves But One Course at Parties

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

WHEN we entertain, deciding upon the menu for the party supper is an important problem—and often a puzzling one. Suppers planned for late in the evening should be composed of interesting and unusual food; yet, for the sake of the hostess, they should be easy to serve and require very little last minute preparation. Your guests, too, would prefer that you serve something light and simple, for most people, realize that it is not wise to eat an elaborate meal too near bed time.

The wise hostess solves this problem by limiting her refreshments to one course. This may be a salad, a rarebit, waffles, or a dessert and coffee but she serves only one course, and not two or three. This is the best way to avoid having a meal that is entirely too hearty to be eaten so late.

The following single-course party suppers are easy to prepare and serve, and are of a type that your guests will enjoy:

Mixed Fruit Salad with Cream Cheese and Currant Jelly Dressing
Crisp Crackers Drop Cookies
Coffee

Pineapple or Peach Upside-Down Cake with Whipped Cream
Coffee Salted Nuts

Deviled Rarebit on Buttered Toast Cubes
Hot Buttered Rolls
Sliced Dill Pickles
Coffee Mints

Fruit Salad With Cream Cheese and Currant Jelly Dressing: 2 sliced bananas; 1 cup diced pineapple; 1 cup white cherries or grapes; 1 cup marshmallows, quartered.

Chill fruits thoroughly and heap in deep cups of crisp lettuce. Serve with the following dressing:

Cream Cheese and Currant Jelly Dressing: ¼ teaspoon salt; ¼ teaspoon sugar; dash of paprika; ½ package soft cream cheese; 1 tablespoon Currant Jelly; 1 tablespoon Pure Cider Vinegar; 3 tablespoons Spanish Olive Oil.

Mix together the salt, sugar and paprika; add to cream cheese and mix until smooth. Then add Currant Jelly and mix well. Last add vinegar and oil. Chill and serve over salad.

Pineapple or Peach Upside-Down Cake: 1/3 cup butter; 2/3 cup sugar; 2 egg yolks; 1 teaspoon vanilla; 1 tablespoon Pure Vinegar; 1½ cups bread flour; 3 teaspoons baking powder; 1/3 teaspoon salt; 2/3 cup milk; 2 stiffly beaten egg whites.

Cream butter and sugar. Add egg yolks, vanilla and vinegar. Sift flour with baking powder and salt and add alternately with milk. Next fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Last, melt ¼ cup butter with 1 cup light brown sugar. When thick and syrupy, arrange slices of canned pineapple or peaches in the skillet, having syrup and fruit around edges as well as on bottom Pour cake batter into the pan and bake in a moderate oven—375 degrees F.—about 35 minutes. Remove to a large plate, turning upside down so fruit and syrup will be on top. Serve with whipped cream or hard sauce.

Deviled Rarebit: 1 tablespoon butter; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 medium can Cream of Celery Soup; 1 small can deviled ham; 2 hard cooked eggs, diced; Dill Pickles.

Melt butter, add flour, and when well blended, add cream of Celery Soup and deviled ham. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Add hard cooked eggs, diced. Serve on buttered cubes of toast, garnished with slices of Dill Pickle.

Old London's Wooden Houses

Timber was employed as a building material for most of London's houses before the great fire of 1666, stone and brick being employed only for churches, public buildings and the homes of the nobility.

Moving Qualities

There are few mortals so insensible that their affections cannot be gained by mildness, their confidence by sincerity, their hatred by scorn or neglect.—Zimmerman.

"How Old Is Anne?"

Under date of October 12, 1903, John Mahon of Brooklyn wrote a letter to a columnist of the New York Press which started the commotion over a problem which he stated as follows: "Mary is twenty-four years old. She is twice as old as Anne was when she was as old as Anne is now. How old is Anne now? A says the answer is sixteen; B says twelve. Which is correct?"

Handwriting Revelation

Handwriting experts state that persons who write with a wavering base line and make broken "a's" and "o's" and open "f's" and "s's" are usually evasive, deceitful and dishonest.—Collier's Weekly.

Patent Leather Shoes

To prevent patent leather shoes from cracking, first remove all the dust from the shoes with a damp cloth. As soon as dry, rub two drops of castor oil or vaseline into the tops, then polish with a woolen cloth.

Obligation That Hurts

It is not a great misfortune to oblige ungrateful people, but it is an unsupportable one to be under an obligation to a vulgar man.—La Rochefoucauld.

GARDENS TO HELP COAL MINERS LIVE

Johnson county miners out of work or employed only part of the time are turning their attention to gardening as a means of helping provide a living, according to County Agent R. T. Faulkner. Six hundred families, containing 657 miners, have leased at a nominal rental 700 acres of land from the Consolidation Coal Company at Van Lear.

Early in the spring the company furnished 400 bushels of seed potatoes, and followed with 400 packages of garden seeds. These were planted, most of the miners given careful attention to planting and cultivation. Mr. Faulkner expresses the opinion that this cooperative effort on the part of the mine owners and miners will do much to prevent actual need of food among the miners thisyear.

A circular published by the College of Agriculture tells 4—H Club boys and girls how to grow such small fruits as strawberries, raspberries, dewberries and grapes. It contains information about soils, plants, varieties, cultivation and other work in growing small fruits. A large number of boys and girls enrolled in 4—H clubs over the State are making money from small fruit at the same time learning how to grow fruit.

Men Who Made History

Morgan's Rifles was one of the companies of Washington's Continental army. The men were all backwoodsmen from the Adirondacks in New York state. It was a very famous company and was noted for the marksmanship of its members. All members wore buckskin uniforms.

ENTOMOLOGIST GIVES ARMY WORM CONTROL

Methods of controlling army worm outbreaks of which have been reported in the state, are discussed in a statement issued by Prof. W. A. Price, state entomologist at the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

"Grass lands, wheat and rye fields, especially those spots where the growth is rank, should be examined for the presence of worms," he says. "If present they will be found near the base of the plant. Should they be discovered in numbers over a small area the grass or grain should be mowed, raked, covered with straw and burned. If distributed over a large area the crop should be sprayed heavily with Paris green, one pound to 50 gallons of water. The crop should not be pastured.

"After the worms start migrating from one field to another the line of march should be broken up by establishing a dust furrow. This is made by plowing a deep furrow using the breaking plow and throwing the land side away from the line of march. A log or keg filled with water is then dragged up and down the furrow. This produces a fine dust over the steep sides of the furrow. When the attempt to go over this barrier they loose their footing and drop back to the bottom. A keg dagged through the furrow at this time will kill many of the worms. Also holes may be dug at intervals of 10 feet in the furrow. When the worms can be killed by tramping or treating with kerosene.

"A poison bait is often used in connection with the duse furrow. It is madeand used as follows: To 25 pounds of bran and one pound of Paris green add the juice of six oranges or lemons, two quarts of syrup and enough water to make the bran moist but not soppy. Broadcast this in the infested area at the rate of 12 to15 pounds to the acre.

MAKES DAIRY HEAD FREE FROM DISEASE

County Agent Julian M. Dyer tells of infection abortion has been eradicated from a dairy farm in Henderson county. Two years ago the herd was tested by Dr. T. P. Polk, extension veterinarian for the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, and 35 of the 36 cows found infected. The entire herd was sold, and the premises disdisease-free herd was taken to the farm, but for three months it was kept in barns that had not been used by the old herd. More cattle have been added from time to time, but always confined to tested animals. In only one instance has a reactor been found, and she was immediately slaughtered. The herd presents a demonstration in the eradication of this disease.

EXPECT 100 TO 200 AT POULTRY SHORT COURSE

Inquiries received at the College of Agriculture, University of Kendance of 100 to150 farm men and women at the annual poultry sort course, to be given June 29 to July 3. The course is a week's intensive training in poultry raising, with emphasis on the practical everyday problems which every poultry raiser meets. In addition to talks by specialists and farmers, there will be actual judging, culling and other handling of birds. The course is open free to all persons interested in poultry. Complete programs can be obtained by writing to the poultry department.

J. E. Humphry, of the poultry department of the College of Agriculture, in a recent radio talk, pointed out that there are only half as many chickens on farms this spring as there were a year ago. This indicates, he believes, that there will be a scarcity of good pullits next fall and winter, which may in turn mean better egg prices. He made a plea that pullets be given good care, including feed and sanitation for proper growth and development throughout the summer. Because prices now are low some farmers are neglecting their young stock.

Begining in1924 with two heifers, Eugene Culton, a Boyle county 4—H Club boy, has built up a valuable dairy herd. In the seven years he has bought $1,200 worth of cattle and sold $1,320 worth, and now has 17 cows and heifers. Many of his cows are wellbred, being daughters of high producing bulls, and two of his cows have Register of Merit records.

The paper used in the manufacture of postage stamps is made of bleached chemical wood fiber derived at the present time, from North Carolina pine trees.

Old Stage Favorite

The theatrical career of "East Lynne" dates back to March 23, 1863, when it was performed at a New York theater, Tripler's hall. Clifton W. Tayleure, a Brooklyn playwright, prepared what was probably the first dramatic adaptation. Lucile Western was the first actress to play the role of Lady Isabel.

T. H. Barr, a Jessamine county farmer, made use of a hill or knoll to establish running water system on his farm near Wilmore. He purchased a second-hand 16,000-gallon iron tank, which he placed on a hill 71 feet above the ground about the house and other buildings. Water is obtained from a spring 1,189 feet from the tank, a gasoline engine being used to force the water into the tank. The cost of filling the 16,000-gallon tank is 72 cents, according to County Agent C. C. Shade.

County Agent Earl Mayhew reports that the Knox County potato acreage has benn more than double. Four thousand acres were planted this spring. The largest increase was among farmers receiving help from the Red Cross. Mr. Mayhew is endeavoring to increase hay production. He has written letters to 800 farmers who usually do not grow hay. Present indications point to two to three times the normal hay acreage.

NOW WELL AND STRONG AND ROBUST

"For years I never knew what it meant to feel well. I was always tired out. I was actually becoming a burden to myself as well as others. I was examined by many doctors and they gave me many things to take—but nothing seemed to help me. I was really getting in a very serious condition. Then like a fairy God-Mother I happened upon Karnak and I will say without a bit of exaggeration, it is almost like magic—so marvelous and so quick in its wonderful power to make a new person of one. I often shudder when I think of what might have happened to me had I not found out about Karnak when I did. Instead of what 'might have been' I am strong and well and robust and the amount of things I can accomplish amazes everyone I know.

MASONIC DAY

PLANNED FOR JULY FOURTH AT FLORENCE FAIR GROUND—SPONSORED BY NORTHERN KENTUCKY LEAGUE—

The Northern Kentucky Masonic League will give their annual picnic this year July 4, at Florence Fair Grounds. This league is made up of three representatives from each Masonic body in Lodges in Northern Kentucky—all Blue Loges, York and Scottish Rite bodies, Grotto and Masonic Club.

The purpose of the League is to sponsor an annual outing or picnic for all Masons and their families. It is not the purpose of the League to make money, and if any money remains over and above expenses it is to be used for some worthy cause.

A small admission will be charged adults—not more than 25 cents—to pay for the rental of the grounds, advertising, printing, prizes, music, etc. Entertainment of all kinds will be furnished, such as running contests, and other athletic sports and dancing.

This organization was organized over four years ago and its object is purely of a social nature for Masons and their families. Its secretary is C. Matt Schaefer 330 Park avenue, Newport, Ky.

SECOND PLACE

GAINED BY PETERSBURG WHEN THEY HAND BELLEVIEW SHUT OUT SATURDAY—BOEHLER OPPOSES ROGERS ON MOUND—

The Petersburg club, after a rather indifferent start has been

ment of the crafty veteran Charley Ruth.

That there can be no disputing this we point to their last three games, all of which they have won impressively to gain sole possession of second place in the league standing.

Their last victory was the second shut out in a row that Boehler has pitched it was gained against the hard hitting Belleview team, one of Petersburg's chief rivals for the flag, last Saturday afternoon on the Belleview stamping ground. In this game Ruth also showed that his was not a "one-man team," as the masterly pitching of Boehler has led Boone county fans to believe. The work of his entire infield and outfield was more than impressive.

Pitted against Boehler was Bill Rogers, who also pitched a very effective game. And this much must be said of Rodgers before going farther with a description of this battle. He was in a tough spot Saturday. In the first place he was stacked up against the toughest bird in the league from a twirling stand point. Then, in addition to that, he had not pitched for several weeks, as he had been sitting on the bench watching the fine work of veteran Black. So he was expected to pitch almost perfect ball, first, to beat Boehler, and, second, to fill the shoes of Black. While he didn't hurl a perfect game by any means, yet he certainly did a nice piece of work, especially after a rather bad start.

At that a little more flashy support might have gotten past the fatal first without a score. Lowe led off with a clean hard single to center, the only untainted bingle of the inning. Mahan followed with an intended sacrifice, which was turned into a base hit when Hensley, Belleview third sacker, failed to get either man. Boehler and Bradburn then followed with scratch infield singles, either of which might have been fielded, to score both Lowe and Mahan with two tallies that looked as big a house to Petersburg with Boehler on the firing line.

Petersburg scored again in the third when Mahan doubled and went to third, while Ryle was throwing out Boehler after dropping his third strike. Bradburn then sent a long fly to center counting Mahan with the third run.

In the fifth Walton singled and was forced at second by Lowe, who stole second. Mahan, who was much the whole works for Petersburg in an offensive way, then plastered another double to send home the fourth run of the contest, three of which were just that many too many.

CRASHES FILLING STATION

Tuesday night about 11:30 o'clock while driving from the direction of Warsaw toward Cincinnati, Eddie Becker, of Ft. Thomas, demolishing two gas pumps and an upright pillar at the gasoline filling station of William Tryling at the junction of the Federal and Dixie highways at Florence.

Mr Becker said that he was a stranger to the road and did not know that it made such an abrupt turn to the left. Three companions were with him and he said that they had been driving for some time and that he became drowsy.

An effort was being made to adjust the damage with Mr. Tryling here Wednesday morning. No charge had been placed against Mr. Becker as we go to press.

CLUB MEMBERS

MAKE COMMENDABLE JUNIOR WEEK RECORD AT LEXINGTON ACCORDING TO COUNTY AGENT—ASSISTANTS THANKED FOR COOPERATION—

Boone county 4-H club members competing in the State 4-H contests Junior Week at the University of Kentucky, Lexington returner last Saturday in company with Mrs. Robert Grant, adult leader for girls, Wilton Stephens, Utopia Club representative and county agent H. R. Forkner after making a commendable record.

The girls home practice team composed of Adelia Riddell and Helen Grant of the Norbeh Champion 4-H club was awarded first Zion Eagles 4-H club and county strations. The Farm Practice team composed of Omer and Gilbert Dolwick of Constance Corneracker 4-H club presented their demonstration "Testing of Seed Corn" in splendid form. Woodford Crigler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Crigler scored 96.2 for fifth place [illegible] higher than the Boone county entry. Miss Ruth Tanner of the Mt. Zion Eegles 4-H club and county 4-H sewing girls style show champion represented the county in the style show contest.

This is the first year it has been possible for each county representative in the state contests to receive prize scholarships which were supplied by local community clubs, Early & Daniels Feed Company of Cincinnati and the L. & N. Railroad.

The county agent wishes to thank the above cooperators, Mrs. Rabert Grant, Miss Eunie Willis, county Red Cross Nurse, the local 4-H club leaders and others who helped in making the work a success.

BREAKS LIMB IN FALL

That trouble "never comes singly" will be a proverb long remembered by the family of F. M. Voshell, of Woolper neighborhood. It was just a week ago that the Recorder reported a loss by fire sustained by the Voshells.

On Monday morning of this week, while Mrs. Voshell was picking cherries she fell from the top of a step ladder, breaking both bones in one of her limbs.

Dr. E. J. Love, of Petersburg, was called and who, after a careful examination, stated that the breaks were not of a serious nature.

OLD FEATURES

ARE RENEWED IN RECORDER COLUMNS—"GUESS WHO" AND "EARLY FILES" ARE BACK AGAIN—LOOK FOR THEM THIS WEEK—

For the past few weeks the editor and the entire Recorder force have been thrown out of their regular routine. This was due to several causes, principal of which was the removal of an old Linotype and the installation of a new one, and then to some changes made in moving our front office from the ground floor to the second story.

These factors contributed to the loss of valuable time each week and for that reason we have omitted two of our best liked features, namely, our "Guess Who" column and our "Early Flies" column, both of which have proved very interesting. That is, if we are to judge by the great number of requests we have received from our readers for their renewal.

So this week both of these features are back with us. One of these it will not be difficult to continue that it entails in digging items from musty old sheets.

However, it is different in regard to the Guess Who column. When this was started more than two years ago our "morgue" contained what seemed to us an unlimited number of old "cuts," but these have melted away before our weekly onslaught until now we must begin begging. Although it will necessitate a weekly cost to the Recorder to have the cuts made, yet we are so anxious to continue this column for those who have requested it that we will shoulder the burden, if our readers will supply the pictures for us.

Just send any picture you have, [illegible] used. We still have a few ahead, but must have another supply soon. Start now!

FLORENCE METHODIST CHURCH

The services at the Florence Methodist Church next Sunday, June 14th. will be as follows; Sunday School 9:45 Preaching service at 11:00 o'clock with special music and sermon by the pastor. The evening service at 8:00 o'clock will be of special interest. The Men's Bible Class will have charge of the singing, and they have promised an unusual program. The message will be addressed to the men. While the service will be largely by the men and for the men the ladies are cordially invited to be present.

The last few Sunday night services have been unusually interesting and well attended. A full house is expected next Sunday night. to participate in and enjoy the service.

County Clerk A. G. McMullen witnessed his first big league base ball game, when he accompanied County Judge N. E. Riddell to Cincinnati on Saturday afternoon and saw the Reds win from Brooklyn.

The M. W. A. will give a fish fry and band concert on Saturday night June 27. A good speaker also will be present. Watch next week's Recorder for details.

NOT FISH!

EXCITING EXPERIENCE AT OLD REUBEN JARRELL HOLE RELATED BY WOOLPER FISHERMEN—NOT FISH STORY, BUT GOOD ONE ANYWAY—

We've heard fish stories, fox hunting stories, coon hunting stories, and what have you, but last week we heard a story of a different brand, but still a little akin to a fish story at that.

Edward Easton and Herman Wingate are the joint authors. We would rather print stories with two authors for the reason that they read better than those with but one. That is,people believe 'em better.

Herman and Eddie were fishing in what is known as the Old Reuben Jarrell hole on Woolper with average success. But when Eddie noticed a big splash way down at the other end of the hole he thought business was picking up and told Herman to take his "spinner" down and "get that bass." Herman went down as suggested and, just as he was rounding the bend of the hole, he heard another splash behind him. He was about to cast [illegible]

but nevertheless, opined that he was in for a big afternoon. But Herman was in for a big surprise, as about that time the water began to show signs of great activity beneath the surface. He leaned closer to the edge of the pool and peered expectantly beneath the water, which by this time was being roiled vigorously.

Why, that couldn't be fish. No. He gazed fixedlly. Suddenly something bobbed above the foaming surface. A mink! Then he tried to count. There were six, no eight —then seven. Nor was he able to count the accurately until one had caught a craw fish and started for the bank. When he reached the bank he sniffed, then cautiously advanced farther. Upon crossing the path that Herman had travelled in coming down he caught the human scent and, raising his head, let out a pecular cry, which is indescribable here.

Then out came the other six, for there were seven. Quick as lightning they literally melted from the face of the earth! What became of them the watcher was unable to determine, but they went places!

During all this time Herman had not moved a muscle. He stood stock still and took in the show, while Eddie watced flabbergastedly from farther up the creek, wondering what had come over him.

IN RACE

FOR MEMBER OF LEGISLATURE FROM BOONE AND GRANT COUNTIES—J. C. B. CONRAD MAKES FORMAL ANNOUNCEMENT—

Today's issue of this paper carries withit the formal announcement of J. C. B. (Brack) Conrad, of Williamstown, Grant County, Kentucky, as candidate for the office of Representative from this district subject to the action of the Democrat party.

Mr. Conrad is a Democrat of the Jeffersonian school and has throughout his active career been a leader in his party. Thirty-two years ago he represented this district in the Legislature and was again honored with the office at a period in the history of Kentucky when the tragic death of William Gobel threatened to precipitate revolution. His record during this tumultous period is a matter of pride to the people of Northern Kentucky, for as a legislator he evidenced the fine judgement and convervative poise that has brought to him a large measure of business success.

In a formal interview Mr. Conrad stated that his only reason for running was the fact that he believed that the agricultural interests of Kentucky were the backbone of our prosperity, and that unless the farmer could be protected from un[illegible]

Having been for more than forty years a successful farmer and knowing the needs of the agriculturist, Mr. Conrad's friends insist that he is eminently qualified to secure a reduction in the excessive appraisement valuation of farm lands, and also to drive the burden of taxation until the farmer will no longer carry more than his share.

With his wide circle of friends over the State of Kentucky, as well as with his legislative experience, Mr. Conrad, if successful in his political aspirations, will be a commanding figure at the next session of our legislature, and those who know him best predict that his vote and influence, will always be found on the side of equality and fair play and that the farmers of Kentucky find him one of their foremost champions.

GRADUATED WITH HONORS

Friends of Miss Fannie Berkshire, of Petersburg, are congratulating her upon her achievement in graduating with high honors from Transylvania University, Lexington, on June 3rd. Miss Berkshire not only attained honors in her scholastic work, but is entitled to additional credit because of the fact she worked her way thru her entire four years of college.

Car Located In Covington Garage is Clue; Owner Also Under arrest at Covington

Sheriff Herbert Snyder and Deputy W. B. Cotton returned late Tuesday afternoon from Detroit, where they had gone Saturday last week for two confessed members of the hold-up gang implicated in the Florence Deposit Bank robbery.

The two men, who registered as Earl Ciezentaner, 34, and Russell Clarke, 26, was lodged immediately in the Boone County Jail, where they will await trial.

Covington officers arrested the two men last week in Covington when an auto tallying with the description of the one used in the hold-up was found in a garage on Pike street. Boone county officers were with Covington officials when the arrest was made. The owner of the garage, Oscar Jackson, also was placed under arrest when Giezentaner and Clarke confessed and implicated Jackson in the deal. They said the hold-up was planned in his garage and that the loot was divided in Jackson's home next door to the garage. Jackson was held in Covington.

When officers obtained information that Clarke and Giezentaner had gone to Detroit they immediatley got in touch with authorities there, who caught the two men and held them for the arrival of Kentucky officers.

County Attorney B. H. Riley and Sheriff Snyder went to Detroit on Friday, where extradition papers [illegible]

Boone county officers then were accompanied to Detroit by Herman J. Fauss, Covington police chief, and Leroy Hall, patrolman, who desired to question them in regard to other hold-ups in Covington. They were later identified as having been the principals in the robbery of the Heilman Lumber Company, Covington, on April 18, when $600.00 was taken. Tuesday night Newport Police Chief Leo J. Livingston brought other victims of hold-ups in Newport to look at the men for identification relative to robberies there. Giezentaner was positively identified as one of the two men who held up a grocery there several weeks ago. Clarke, however, was not identified, it is said.

Snyder and Cotton reported that every effort was made by attorneys for Giezentaner and Clarke to delay their being brought to Kentucky, but all legal obstacles were overcome in time for them to leave late Monday, after days spent in Detroit. Clarke is a Canadian and it was said that relatives there advanced sufficient funds to employ counsel.

The third and possibly a fourth, member of the gang that was at Florence have not yet been apprehended, although authorities are in possession of strong clues.

Officers of both Boone and Kenton counties are to be congratulated upon their alertness and perseverance in running down and obtaining the confession of the robbers.

The Florence bank obtained a check from the American Surety Company, of New York, within three days after the robbery and for the exact loss, as shown by the check up with bank officials. The amount of the check was $4,984.00.

ROOSEVELT CALLS ON MR. Wm. H. O'BRIEN

(Lawrenceberg (Ind.) Press)

Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, New York's first citizen and outstanding candidate of the Democratic party for chief executive of the nation, was an honored visitor to Lawrenceburg last Thursday afternoon. Governor Roosevelt came here especially to extend his greetings and pay his respects to Hon. William H. O'Brien, one of the state's best known Democrat leaders and successful business men, whose eminent counsel is of high rating. Governor Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and members of his party came here from French Lick Springs, where the distinguished New Yorker had attended a Governor's conference. Governor Roosevelt has known Mr. O'Brien for some time and on arriving in Lawrenceburg had his car stop in front of the Peoples National Bank. Mr. O'Brien came out and was invited to a seat in the car and enjoyed a brief but pleasing conversation with the Governor.

Chief of Police Edward Fasnacht and Patrolman Pat Henke came forward to greet the official attendants upon the Governors party and to render any assistance and courtesy possible.

The Roosevelt party went from here to Cincinnati, where a conference and reception was held at the Sinton-St. Nicholas Thursday night.

The official party which accompanied Governor Rosevelt included Mrs. Roosevelt, Robert Fitzmaurice, executive officer for the Governor of New York; Miss Marguerite Hand, private secretary, and Sergeant E. R. Miller New York State trooper.

PRIZE WINNERS AT GOLF

(Rising Sun Recorder)

Mrs. E. V. Menefee and Mrs. Blanche Morrison, the latter from Aurora, won first and second prizes at the "Gay Parasol" golf course Monday night. E. V. Menefee and Mills Hemphill tied for first place in the mens contest, the latter winning when they played the tie-off. Jimmie Baxter won third.

These contests are held each Monday night when the names of five ladies and five men are drawn from a box in which each person who plays on the course has previously deposited a slip bearing his or her name. Prizes given are valuable and practical.

BLUE GRASS SEED SELLING AT 30 CENTS PER BUSHEL HERE

(Paris—Kentuckian Citizen)

Blue Grass Seed is being purchased at 30 cents per bushel for green seed, by local seed dealers, after opening at 25c earlier in the week. The price seeme low, as compared to the estimated value placed on cured seed by the Federal Farm Board, who are willing to advance 70c per bushel on July 20, on all pooled seed.

MONKEY TAKES FRENCH LEAVE

(Ohio Co. News)

Dowers & Son have had bad luck with the two monkeys which they had planned to use as an attraction at their golf course. One of the lively little animals died and the other escaped. As it left town it leaped from tree to tree and occasionally landed on a house top. When last seen it was near Pleasant Ridge church.

KENTUCKY FOLK JUBILANT

(Ohio Co. News)

In a letter to the News, Ed Lamkin editor of the Gallatin County (Ky) news which is published at Warsaw, Ky., states that folk in his section have gone "plumb crazy" over the discovery of gas and that a boom is imminent. A second well was brought in last week on the Robert Furnish farm near Ghent. The gas was brought in at about 300 feet and has an estimated flow of 4,000,000 cubic feet.

TO GO AFTER WEEDS

(Danville Advocate)

The county Road Department will shortly put out signs advising the farmers to cut the weeds along the county highways. This is one of the greatest aids to beauty that the county could do and it is most commendable. Get the old scythe down and begin whetting the blade, for the "Gobbins'll get you if you don't watch out."

LOVELY FLOWER GARDEN AT WILLIAMS HOME

(Carrollton News-Democrat)

A landscape gardener has recently planted a lovely garden in the rear of the home of Mr. Paul Williams on Highland Avenue. With a magnificent river view, the winding stone steps and a stone wall marks the terrace. Of symmetrical beauty, containig many well known varieties of flowers as well as those rare specii; featured by a lovely pool and sun-dial, also exquisite vases electrically lighted at night, it is sure to develop into a spot of surpassing loveliness.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" By B. Link

The Family Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Now is the time to make one of the regular bi-monthly plantings of beans. Excellent is to make this planting and those up to August 1 double the customary length so as to assure a surplus to be canned. Either of the varieties Stringless Greenpod or Full measure may be used.

This is the time, too, to watch the older leaves on the tomatoes, for the first signs of leaf spot and leaf mold. Unless checked, these diseases cause the dropping off of the leaves, and this reduces the yield and shortens the life of the plant. The way to hold leaf spot and leaf mold in check is to apply bordeaux mixture. Three applications, the first now, and the others two weeks apart, will pay.

The Mexican bean beetle has been slow in appearing in many parts of Kentucky. Even so, it is well not to be too saguine about it, but be prepared to dust or spray when the first egg clusters are found.

Many gardeners will shortly notice the beginning of the leaves of there salsify blackening and dropping off. To check this trouble bordeaux mixture should be applied. A second application, made two weeks later will furnish protection through the rest of the season. Still concerning salsify, close and deep working of the soil is not advised, for it may result in branched roots such weeds that occur in the rows should be removed by hand.

On the day the last cutting of asparagus is made the planting should be fertilized. Best to use is manure but if manure is not obtainable a fertilizer whose analysis is 8-6-8 may be used instead. Since this analysis is difficult to procure, a gardener may mix his own. To make 100 pounds of this mixture are needed: 50 pounds of nitrate of soda, 35 pounds of 16 percent superphosphate and 16 pounds of muriate of potash.

The rate of application is one pound to 20 square feet, broadcast and worked in.

The safe length of time to continue cutting of asparagus is 6 weeks for beds 5 years or over; 3 weeks for beds from 3 to 5 years. No cutting should be done until in the third year, after the bed is set.

FOREIGN HONOR FOR KENTUCKY SCIENTIST

The work of the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky received signal recognition from a foreign country when The British Bloodstock Agency, Ltd., of London, called as its guest to England to confer with scientists and breeders in regard to light horse breeding problems.

Dr. Dimock will sail July 3, going at the special invitation of John Crawford, M. R. C. V. S., general manager of The British Bloodstock Agency, which is the English association of light horse breeders. Dr. Crawford visited the Experiment Station at Lexington last May for the fourth time. He has always taken a keen interest in the investigations of Dr. Dimock and his co-workers in breeding problems.

Dr. Dimock will appear before noted English breeders' organizations veterinary and other scientific bodies, visit breeding establishments and confer with British authorities regarding diseases and other problems connected with the horse industry abroad. He will accompany Dr. Crawford to France where they will inspect noted studs and nurseries in Normandy and confer with French breeders.

The work of the Kentucky Experiment Station in investigating the causes of serility, infectious abortion and other problems in connection with the breeding of horses has not only been outstanding in this country but has attracted world-wide attention. Several European scientists have visited the Station from time to time to study the work being done here. One of the recent visitors was Dr. Gustav Danelius, scientist and official of the Swedish government.

Dr. Dimock served the Cuban government for four years as assistant chief of the department of animal husbandry and chief veterinarian to the national sanitary department. The University of Havana conferred on him the degree of doctor of veterinary medicine. After leaving Cuba he was head of the department of pathology and bacteriology of the veterinary division of Iowa State College.

Dr. Dimock is a graduate of the Connecticut Agricultural College and Cornell University. He is a member of the American Veterinary Medical Association, the United States Live Stock Sanitary Association for the Advancement of Science.

WASHINGTON SNAP SHOTS

The output of remedies for the depression continues on a large scale. It seems inevitable the genius should be turned from practical affairs during hard times to the more illusive field of economic theory. If as much attention were given to specific business problems as is given to the broad general subject, the clouds of depression might be expected to clear away.

Uncle Sam was pictured by President Hoover as an employer who not only has been unperturbed by the Nation-wide business depression but who has provided jobs for thousands of persons. Almost 1 per cent of the population of the Nation soon will be employed on Government work, according to figures announced by President Hoover. These figures, however, include an estimate of the number of persons employed by private business concerns in the multifarious ramifications incident to the Government building program.

The Federal Farm Board professes to be permanently out of the business of buying wheat, its departure heralded by a severe break in the cash price for that product which it seems to have been rather generally expected to keep pegged until July 1. If this profession is adhered to, it will mark the end of a chapter in one of the most bizarre governmental undertakings in the history of this country. The full story will not be told until the board finally unloads the enormous supplies of wheat it has accumulated.

International discussion of a conference on rehabilitation of silver brought a statement from the White House that there might be decided value in an informal discussion of the silver question by representatives of the powers most keenly interested in it. It was said that such informal discussion might prove educational and would give opportunity for consideration of various suggestions for improvement of the silver market, such as increased small coinage and extension of the use of silver in the arts.

With both Secretaries Stimson and Mellon off to Europe, it begins to look as though the Hoover Administration may at least be preparing to face the fact that the crisis of the operations of the Young Plan of Germany reparations payments, long in sight, but now officially proclaimed by the German Government is a matter calling for direct governmental attention by the United States. If this should prove the case and lead to an abandonment of the both theories and dangerous position that what is done about German reparations is primarily a matter of European concern, it might become an extremely important factor in the fortunate process of the world rehabilitation.

The country is suffering from too much politics and too little prosecution of law violators, the Wickersham Commission has reported to President Hoover. In order to correct this situation, which the commission holds responsible for the release of far too many criminals, it recommends the elimination of politics from the choice of public prosecutors and a study of means to raise the caliber and compensation of these officials.

Politics, as the commission insists, should have nothing to do with prosecutions for law violations The prosecuting officer has it largely within his power to bring a law violator to trial or to quash the proceedings against him. How often the power of freeing an accused criminal is exercised by prosecuting officials in some of the large centers of population scarcely needs the testimony of the commissions report.

The system of selecting the prosecuting officers is distinctly at fault Probably the wonder is that so many excellent officers, devote to their duty, are in office today. But assuredly the prosecutor, as well as the judge, should be relieved of all political influence in justice is to prevail for all offenders alike.

As it approaches its official end, the Wickersham Commission presents its fourth report and it is announced that there are to be eleven others, some if not all of which will necessarily have "posthumous" publication. This latest report, dealing with prosecutions , has caused bitter resentment from some Senators on account of the exposition of the evil influece of politics in the selection of Federal District Attorneys. But the truth of the commission's statement that the prosecutor's office, State or Federal, with its power of preventing prosecutions, is frequently regarded as a great political prize, cannot be successfuly denied.

The eleven remaining reports are to deal, among other subjects, with deportation of criminals, juvenile delinquency, the foreign born, the causes the prime lawlessness of criminals, the police and penal institutions. They will probably be highly instructive and conatructive. These reports alone may fully justify the total expenditure at $500.000 voted by Congress. For the legislation already enacted, providing for the transfer of the prohibition unit and modification of the Jones law, the researches by the commission were not essential. These measures had been long contemplated. But the forthcoming reports may be the basis for much useful legislation.

Strong support in Arkansas for Governor Roosevelt for the Democratic Presidential nomination was predicted by Senator Caraway upon his return from that State. Taking note of the possible candidacy of his colleague, Senator Robinson, Mr. Caraway said: "If Senator Robinson is not nominated, Roosevelt is the almost unanimous choice of the State. I have never seen quite the unanimity of public opinion as prevails in Arkansas for Governor Roosevelt. First, the people have confidence in him as a man. Moreover, his politics appeal to the people. I think he is available."

The President and Mrs. Hoover were hosts at the White House at the annual garden party for disabled veterans. Eight hundred veterans of the World War attended the fete. The hosts were assisted by the members of Cabinet, the little Cabinet officials of the Army and Navy and their wives. A section of the Marine Band stationed around the huge fountain, played during the afternoon and refreshments were served at gay colored parquees arranged about the White House lawn. Th veterans roamed at will, attended by the uniformed nurses and Red Cross workers, through the rose gardens which are spectacular in their profusion and beautythis year.

Although he is desirous of cutting military expenses as much as possible, President Hoover has closed the door to one avenue of reduction because it would conflict with the policy of maintaining wages at present levels. He has just tabooed any reduction in the rental and subsistance allowance of Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers.

Wheel's Centrifugal Force

The bureau of standards says that the centrifugal force of a revolving wheel is greater at any point on the rim than at any point nearer the center.

Fifteen thousand sires have been placed on Kentucky farms in the last ten years, through the efforts of county agents and the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, according to a summary of the work made by Wayland Shaeffer, field agent in animal husbandry. This includes 5,916 purebred beef and dairy bulls, 6,311 purebred boars and 3,264 rams.

In 1920 less than 20 percent of the bulls in use in Kentucky were of pure breeding. Now more than 80 percent of those in use in the state are purebred, and some counties have succeeded in eliminating all grade and scrub bulls.

Kentucky was the 48th. state to enter the national contest in replacing scrub sires with purebreds, but after five years it ranked first in total number of breeders enrolled. In 1927, Union county announced that the last grade and scrub bull had been driven across its borders. On May 7, 1926, the United States department of agriculture officially recognized Union county as the first county in the United Staets to have 100 percent purebred bulls.

Russell county farmers succeeded in replacing all grade and scrub bulls with purebreds in 1927, being the second county in Kentucky and the third in the United States to accomplish this feat. Taylor county was the third county in Kentucky and the fourth in the United States to reach the similar Position. There are 12 counties in the state in which more than 100 farmers have agreed to use purebred sires only.

ANNOUNCE HONORS IN AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

Honors for students in agriculture and home economics in the College of Agriculture were announced during the June Commencement of the University of Kentucky.

Miss Nancy Brown Scrugham, Lexington, one of the home economics graduates, won an Algernon Sidney Sullivan medallion, which is one of the highest honors awarded by the University.

Other honors in the College of Agriculture were:

James B. Haggin memorial essay contest—Kenith S. Venable, Murray Malcom Lyons, Frankfort; W. C. Scott, Gaston; Scott McClain, Taylorsville, and Ivan Jett, Richmond.

Weil scholarship prize for agricultural student making highest scholarship in freshman and sophmore years—Theodore Milby, Buffalo.

Alpha Zeta medal for highest scholarship in freshman year—Robert S. Reed, Covington.

LARGE FARM CLUB IN TAYLOR COUNTY

Taylor county, where C. V. Bryan is caunty agent, has the largest organization of older farm boys and girls in the United States. Eighty young men and women between the ages of 18 and 25 have organized a Utopia Cloub to study and practice the best known methods of farming and homemagink. Many of the young men are growing certified seed corn, red clover and tobacco, with a view to supplying farmers with improved seed. Others are raising hogs according to the best methods. The young women are interested chiefly in improved rooms, houses and othe living comodation on the farm. An advisory committee of farmers is assisting the club. The county agent and specialists from the College of Agriculture also are at the service of its members in advertising regarding methods and practices. The club recently was inspected by a representative of the United States Department of Agriculture.

An increasing number of farmers are growing Sudan grass which now is considered more drought resistant than any other crop that can be sown in June and July for hay and pasture. The College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, says the seed bed should be prepared the same as for corn, and 30 pounds sown, either with a wheat drill or broadcast and harrowed. Sudan grass will pasture 1,000 to 2,000 pounds of livestock to the acre from the time it is a foot high until killing frost. As hay crop will cut two to five tons to the acre, depending on fertility and rainfall.

COLLEGE ADVOCATES LIGHT CULTIVATION

Cultivation of crops to a depth three or four inches is wasteful of effort, it not actually harmful, says the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Tests indicate that cultivation to a depth of three or four inches, principally for the purpose of destroying weeds and conserving moisture, is better than deeper cultivations.

The destruction of weeds is cited by the college as the most important reason for cultivating corn. The tests did not indicate that more cultivation than is necessary to keep weeds down is beneficial. If weeds have gotten a larger deeper cultivation may be necessary to destroy them, but it is better to cultivate when they are small.

Other reasons for cultivation may include the conservation of moisture especially when corn is small, the areation of the soil, and keeping the surface loose to facilitate the intake of water.

Cultivation should never be close enough to disturb the roots. The first plowing of corn may be deep and close to the plants, but later workings should be shallow and preferably done with a cultivator which has small teeth or shovels.

The number of cultivations will depend upon the kind of soil and the weather and the apperance of weeds.

Tests made for four years indicate that six cultivations of potatoes, which many persons cultivate deeply, give better crops than nine deep workings.

NO SUBSTITUTE FOR MILK; FOOD FOR ALL

Milk is the one food which does not have a substitute and should be included in the daily diet of everyone, declare nutrition specialists at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. It is the best source of calcium, which is essential for the development and hardening of the bone and teeth. In fact it is difficult for the mother to supply sufficient calcium in the diet of her children unless a generous supply of milk is used daily.

Milk is also a good source of protein or muscle building material. One quart of milk daily will furnish from one-half to two-thirds the amount of protein needed by the growing child.

The butter of milk is an excellent source of vitamin A, which has been found to be necessary for the normal growth of children and the health of both children and adults.

Recent studies have been shown that milk is a good protective food against pellegra.

Every growing boy and girl should use four cups of milk daily and every adult two cups. If an individual does not want to drink milk, it may be used in the preparation of other foods, such as vegetable soups, creamed vegetables or meats, pudding and other deserts.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm rodio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of June 22. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

June 22—Peaches cafeteria style, W. W. Maghill. Canning equipment, Miss Florence Imlay.

June 24—Foot-rot in sheep, L. J. Horlacher, Why milk sours, H. B. Morrison.

PARAGRAPHS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

The faculty and alumni of the College of Engineering at the University of Kentucky entertained recently with a banquet in honor of F. Paul Anderson, dean of the College of Engineering, in celebration of his 40th. year as a member of the College of Engineering faculty at the University. Dean Anderson is the oldest faculty member in point of service on the campus.

The 1931-32 basketball schedule at the University of Kentucky has been announced with eleven Southern Conference games listed on the net card. Several inter-sectional contests will also be played including one with Georgia Tech and one

Among the prominent visiting professors who will teach during the 1931 Summer at the University of Kentucky are Dr. Paul S. Ogden, professor of History at the Ohio State University and Dr. J. D. Blackwell, member of the state department of Education, Baltimore, Md.

Two students in the department of Ecology at the University of Kentucky have received graduate assistantships at other universities for the coming school year according to a recent announcement. They are Nolan Rice, Belleview, who will go to Duke University and Vernon Gentry, Wheatley, who will go to the University of Kansas.

A number of novel features for the summer session at the University of Kentucky are being arranged, according to an announcement from the office of Dr. W. S. Taylor, the University and director of the dean of the College of Education at session.

Dr. George Rommert, eminent scientist from Munich Germany, will appear at the University during the summer term in a demonstration of his methods of microprojection. Dr. Rommert who is making an extensive tour of this country, has invented a combined microscope and projection machine which permite observation of the life processes of micro-organishs. His demonstrations of this method has been greeted with much interest by scientists of many contries.

The summer program of special events at the University of Kentucky also includes a one-day demonstration of sound motion pictures.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Alfalfa made large yields at the first cutting in Jessamine county. Some of it was three feet tall. Much of it was barn cured before being baled.

County Agent H. S. Long has located several new marl beds in Clark county, and hundreds of tons of marl will be used in place of limestone this year.

H. B. Gravens, the new farm agent in Breathitt county, has organized 12 junior 4-H clubs with a total membership of 300 boys and girls.

Crop prospects are so good in McCreary county that potatoes probably will be shipped out for the first time in years.

Unusually large acreages of rye, wheat and barley in Allen county are expected to yield 50 percent above average yields for previous years.

The Murray tobacco board of trade is sponsoring a two-acre tobacco production project, in which farmers will keep accurate records and endeavor to grow superior quality.

Concerted action on the part of farmers made it possible to give the tuberculin test to all cattle in Hancock county in one week.

The Owen County Golden Hoof Club has awarded the honor of master shepherd to Victor Roberts. He made a net profit of $6.44 per ewe with grade Hampshires last year.

Twig blith has so injured orchards in Laurel county that a short apple crop is in prospect.

Cantaloupe Italian Gift

The word "cantaloupe" is thought to be derived from Cantaloupe island in Italy, where such melons first were grown in Europe. The seed was obtained in Armenia.

"Americanism"

The word "Americanism," denoting words that are originally American in derivation or use, is attributed to Doctor Witherspoon, president of Princeton, about 150 years ago.

Reciprocal

Genius is not only an infinite capacity for taking pains, but quite often it is an infinite ability to give other folks pains.—Little Rock Arkansas Democrat.

Pioneer Woman Flyer

Dr. Bessica Raiche of Santa Ana, Calif., was the first woman to fly an airplane in the United States. She flew at Mineola field, Long Island, in 1910.

Dogs Free From Taboo

Dog flesh was used for ceremonial purposes only by the American Indians, because dogs were to them a clean animal, in the sense that they were not taboo to their gods.

Useless Worry

Let not future things disturb thee, for thou wilt come to them if it shall be necessary, having with thee the same reason which thou now usest for present things.—Marcus Antonius.

Early Bird

"Tyler" the town constable is both early and late. When he gets ready to retire he takes off his coat and vest and goes to bed. Then he wakes up.—Washington Star.

Earliest Soapbox

The first soapbox, "The Look," was used not by an investor, Miss Curtis, in December, 1929, but it was not until 1911 that the machine functioned well enough for a flight.

Elephant Driving

An elephant driver is called a mahout and the stick is an ankus. This goad is a stick about two feet long, capped with a sharp spike and hook. It resembles a short-handled boat hook.

SECOND PLACE

As related above Mahan was the batting star inasmuch as he tapped out four in four swings for a perfect day. Two were doubles and two were singles. Rogers fanned four men, while Boehler went him one better with five. Neither twirler walked a man.

All in all it was a very fine game to watch, though the result was not in tune with Belleview hopes. The same two teams will hook up again next Saturday at Petersburg, when the biggest crowd the latter team has seen this season should be on hand.

GAME FORFEITED

The base ball game between Rabbit Hash and Burlington went to Rabbit Hash by default Saturday due to the fact that Manager Blythe was unable to place a full team of eligible men on the field. An agreement was reached at a league meeting Monday night as a result of which consent was given Blythe to sign new men, provided they are limited to the Burlington precinct. This was done in order that the season might be completed with six teams in the league, as otherwise the Burlington team would have been compelled to drop out on account of loss of signed players.

"HOT SHOT" RESIGNS

The Recorder's valued base ball correspondent from Walton, who has been masquerading under the sobriquet of "Hot Shot", handed in his resignation as a contributor to these columns too late for us to obtain an accurate account of the Hebron-Walton game last Saturday afternoon. The game was won by Walton by a score of 6-3, although written protest was filed by the Hebron management Monday night and on which a decision was held up by the president until an answer could be filed by Walton "Hot Shot," whose real name is Clyde Laws, is player-manager of the Walton club and felt that it was not exactly apropos for him to give an account of games in which he was so vitally interested. Although the Recorder regrets to lose him, his attitude is commendable.

JAMES ROBERT HUEY

Friends and relatives of James Robert Huey, age 23, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Huey, of Belleview, congratulate him upon the completion of four year teacher training course at Western Kentucky Teacher's College, Bowling Green, Ky.

Mr Huey is a graduate of Belleview High School, of this county, and is known to be a most deserving and dependable young man. We are glad that Mr. Huey will be located in Boone county this year, having accepted a position at Hamilton. He brings back to us recommendations of the highest type from his alma mater.

All those readers of the Recorder interested in making the paper a newsy one may assist greatly by handing, or mailing your items to this office or to Bailey Greenup, who is assisting the editor as a news gatherer.

Great Newspaper Collection

The largest collection of newspapers in the world is in the newspaper museum at Aix-la-Chapelle, Germany, the 150,000 editions representing every language and country in the world.

CARD OF THANKS

We take this method of expressing our thanks and heartfelt gratitude to the many friends and neighbors who were so kind and helpful during the illness and death of our Dear Mother Mrs. Louisa Neal, who passed away June 6, 1931.

To Bros. Miller and Johnson for their words of comfort and consolation. Also to the singers, and for the beautiful floral offerings and to all who in any way assisted.

The Daughters

"THE SUNNIE DALE GIRLS"

Thursday Maw 28, Mrs Cecil Robinson and her sewing girls; club members of Mt. Zion 4-H (Eagles), went on a hike. The started at 8:30 Thursday morning and returned at 5:00 Thursday afternoon. Yes they certainly had a nice time hiking, sewing, wading, playing, taking snapshots and best of all eating the delicious lunch served them.

Eleven, counting leader and outsiders, completed the group of hikers.

Morjorie Bell.

AGENTS MEETING

Nortern Kentucky County Agents will meet at Y. M. C. A. Camp Ernst on Gnupowder Friday afternoon to discuss plans for the district 4-H club camp scheduled to be held at that place during the week of August the 11 to 15.

County and Home Demonstration Agents from Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant, Owen and Gallatin are expected to be present.

Special calf fitting and showing demonstrations will be given. Mr. Collins will also give helpful, information on the care and management of the 4-H dairy cow.

UTOPIA CLUB MEETING

Mr. Wilton Stephens, county representative to the first State Utopia Club Conferance will be a speaker at the June meeting of Boone County Utopia Club No. 2 scheduled to be held at Burlington, Thursday, evening at 7:30 P. M., June 18. Burlington group will be given in charge of a special program that has been planned.

BUGS BUGS

Cucumber bugs, Mexican bean beetles and all other bugs seem to be numerous this year. Many farmers and gardners have forgotten the proportions of their last years poison mixtures.

The following formulas are given; Mexican Bean Beetle.

1 Lb. can of calcium or lead Arsenate.
1 Lb. of dusting sulfur.
4 Lb. of lime.

Cucumber or Melon Bugs.
20 Lb. of Gypsum
1 Lb. of Calcium or Lead Arsenate

Keep plants and ground dusted around dusted good at all times.

Those who buy gypsum in 20 Lb. amounts or more can save considerable by buying by 100 Lb. sacks as it comes much cheaper. A number of stores did not have gypsum last week. The Farm Bureau has gotten in a supply and are selling it in any ammount wanted.

TAKE YOUR COUNTY PAPER

TRUCK GROWERS CERTIFICATES

A number of farmers have requested truck growers certificates to sell truck crops on the 13th Street Market in Cincinnati. The county agent has a supply of blanks on hand and is glad to cooperate in this work when such cooperation is a service to Boone county farmers.

Those farmers know by the agent may receive signed application blanks at the county agents office

DEAD ANIMAL

A fine work horse belonging to Ben Stephens, of the Belleview pike fell dead while plowing corn on Mr. Stephens' farm last Saturday morning. Mr. Stephens attributed the sudden death of the animal to over heating.

On Warm Days You'll Appreciate An Adequate "Emergency Shelf"

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

VERY often, at the end of a busy day, we find little time remaining for the preparation of a meal. When dinner must be cooked in half an hour or less, it entirely depends upon your supply shelf whether you will have an attractive, well-balanced meal, or a decidedly unappetising, pick-up one.

This is an excellent time to consider the possibilities for preparing quick meals from the "emergency shelf," since with warm weather coming, all of us naturally want to reduce to a minimum the work of meal preparation. An adequately equipped supply shelf will mean better meals in less time, and many additional hours of freedom for you every day this summer.

Here is a list of prepared foods that will help you to serve many "quick-time" dishes this summer. And the menus suggested below will show how entire meals can be prepared from your convenient supply shelf:

A. For Quick Appetizers and Relishes:

1. Spanish Olives, stuffed and plain.
2. Sweet Gherkins.
3. Sweet Mustard Pickles.
4. Cream of Tomato Soup.
5. Cream of Celery Soup.
6. Consomme.
7. Canned Pineapple; Peaches; Grapefruit; and Maraschino Cherries.
8. Tuna Fish, Sardines or Shrimp.

B. For the Main Course:

1. Oven Baked Beans—Boston Style; Vegetarian Style; with Tomato Sauce and Pork; and Kidney Beans.
2. Cooked Spaghetti in Tomato Sauce.
3. Canned Chicken; Dried Beef; Jar of Bacon; and Corned Beef.
4. Pimiento and Cream Cheese in glasses.
5. Corn; Peas; Asparagus; and Mushrooms.

C. For the Salad Course:

1. Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.
2. Pure Olive Oil.
3. Pure Vinegar (Keep French Dressing made and tightly covered in the ice box).
4. Fruits and fish as listed under appetizers.

D. For the Dessert Course:

1. Prepared Fig and Plum Puddings.
2. Mince Meat.
3. Packaged Cakes and Crackers.
4. Cheese.

E. Miscellaneous:

1. Ready to serve and quickly cooked cereals:
   a. Rice Flakes
   b. Cooked Cereal
2. Sandwich Spreads:
   a. Peanut Butter
   b. Sandwich Relish
   c. Apple Butter
   d. Fruit Jellies
3. Plain and fruit flavored gelatins and evaporated milk.
4. Beverages:
   a. Grape Juice
   b. Ginger Ale
   c. Cocoa
   d. Chocolate
   e. Coffee

Emergency Chicken Shortcake: 2 tablespoons butter; 1½ tablespoons flour—unsifted; 1 medium size can Cream of Celery Soup; ¼ teaspoon salt; ⅛ teaspoon pepper; 3 hard cooked eggs, diced; 1½ cups diced chicken.

Melt butter, add flour, then soup. Cook until creamy and slightly thickened, stirring constantly. Add seasoning, chicken and eggs, and when heated through, serve between and on top of hot biscuit. Garnish with slices of hard cooked eggs and Stuffed Manzanilla Olives.

Biscuits: 2 cups sifted flour; 4 teaspoons baking powder; 1 teaspoon salt; 3 tablespoons fat; ¾ cup milk.

Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Cut in fat, then add milk. Roll 1/8 inch thick and cut with a large biscuit cutter. Brush ¼ of biscuits with melted butter and top with the others. Bake at 450 degrees F. for 10 to 12 minutes.

Quick Cold Slaw: To 4 cups of cabbage chopped very finely, add 1 teaspoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Mix ½ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing with 3 tablespoons Pure Vinegar and pour over the cabbage. Add a chopped green pepper and a grating of onion juice. Mix thoroughly and serve on crisp lettuce.

Tuna Fish a la King: Melt 4 tablespoons butter, and blend with 4 tablespoons flour. Add 2 cups milk and stir constantly until thickened. Season with salt, pepper and a few drops of Worcestershire Sauce. Add 3 sliced hard cooked eggs, 1 can tuna fish, and several sliced Stuffed Spanish Olives. Serve on buttered toast.

Toasted Bacon, Chili Sauce and Peanut Butter Sandwiches: Toast bread on one side, and spread the untoasted side with Peanut Butter, then with Chili Sauce. Top with slices of bacon, and place in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp.

Welsh Rarebit with Oven Baked Kidney Beans: 2 tablespoons butter; 2 tablespoons flour; 1 cup milk; ½ teaspoon pepper; ½ teaspoon salt; 1 cup American cheese; 1 small can Oven Baked Red Kidney Beans.

Melt butter, remove from fire, and mix with the flour. Scald the milk and stir into the butter and flour. Cook until the mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Beat in the grated cheese, and add the beans. Serve on hot toast with broiled bacon slices.

From Our Exchanges

TWENTY YEARS AGO
Local Happenings

The Fiscal Court of this county should convene at once to take some steps in regard to preventing the further spread of small pox in this county. The time to stamp out this disease is before every neighborhood in the county has been infected. Prompt action at Walton and Verona prevented the spread of the disease in those neighborhoods, but there seems to be lack of the proper precaution at present, and it is said that one or two of the persons who has small pox has been seen away from home, after being informed of the nature of their disease, and before they had recovered. No citizen has the right to imperil the health of another and to supress this carelessness on the part of patients. The Fiscal Court should meet and cooperate with the county board of health in its effort to stamp out the disease at once.

Henry Quick, of the Hebron ship carpenters, has built a book case in the county clerk's record room, in which to place several volumes of the history of the late war, presented to the county by Congressman Berry.

Charles S. Chambers, son of T. F. Chambers, of Walton, was granted license Monday by the Boone Circuit Court to practice law. It is said that he passed an excellent examination. He is a young man of good address and will make his way in the profession.

County Clerk Adams claims to have the best garden in Burlington or within ten miles thereof. We understood him to say that he has peas, cabbages, beets, radishes, onions, potatoes, lettuce, cucumbers, It has been understood all spring that Brother Sproles was at the head of the Burlington class de affairs pertaining to gardening.

Mr George Gorden of the Constance precinct, had a narrow escape form being killed by a street car last Wednesday. He was selling vegetables near Sedamsville, when he drove out of a narrow street, and his horse was struck by an electric car, the motorman who dragged Mr. Gordon into his car, saving his life. He received, however, several severe bruises. His horse was unhurt, but the wagon was badly wrecked and vegetables scattered over considerable territory.

Croquet has lost all its charm for Burlingtonians and has been superseded by the ancient game known as pitching horseshoes.

Lawrenceburg Ferry

Sim Strader sold his crop of tobacco to John Berkshire at 6½ cents.

The Stevens Brothers have sold their lambs to J. M. Conner, of Cincinnati, at $3.75 per head.

Limaburg

The local thermometer registered 42 on the 8th. and on the 11th. it climbed to 94.

Gasburg

Ben Berkshire is feeding fifty hogs for market.

Mr. Geisinger, and family, of Prospect Hill, were down exploring the recesses of Split Rock Sunday

Bud Moreland became so discouraged over the poor prospects for farming interests, that he pulled up stakes and went to Illinois.

Bullittsville

Edgar Graves is anticipating a new buggy in the near future.

Since my last communication several of our citizens have had phones put in their residences. They afford much pleasure, as well as aid to business.

Union

L. W. Lassing has finished planting corn.

The farmers who plowed their corn while the weather was dry can now laugh at those who have grass four inches high all over their corn fields.

B. L. Rice wants it distinctly understood that I made a wide shot of the mark when he was set down for the New Constitution. He is opposed to it from the first to the last, and will cast his vote accordingly. Beg pardon, Lute.

As long as a man has 72,000 pounds of tobacco between him and the devil he is tolerably safe. So I will say that my statement last week, was 80,000 pounds bought by Matson Rachal instead of, as your "devil" said, 8,000.

Just like a sinner, blame everything on the "devil". We set it like the copy—Devil.

The rain and hail storms which struck the south part of the county last Wednesday evening, destroyed about ten acres of fine wheat for W. W. Grimsley and destroyed James Taylor's entire crop of corn, tobacco, etc.

FORTY YEARS AGO
Local Happenings

George Blythe has been doing some first class work on the public roads in this district.

Honorable L. W. Lassing will deliver a speech in the court house in Burlington on the first Monday in July, County court Day.—Speaking will begin at 10 ½ o'clock A. M.

The picnic at Harvest Home Grounds last Saturday was a most enjoyable affair. There was quite a good attendance and every thing passed off without a single incident to disturb the pleasure of anyone.

Stanley Clutterbuck, who has been clerking for Dudley Rouse for a year or so, went to work on the roads last Monday, and came near having a sun stroke.

Petersburg

Jack Berkshire and Billy Crisler each have new bicycles. They have a great deal of pleasure on their wheels.

Dave Snyder is at home on a two weeks vacation.

Flickertown

Corn is looking very badly on account of much cool wether.

Louis Messmer is talking of building an addition to his shop for painting buggies and wagons

John Baldon is helping the looks of his premises by tearing away the old log kitchen and replacing it with a new one and building a new porch the whole length of the house.

We understand that Rev. Carney made an appointment to preach at the school house on the first Sunday in July at three o'clock P. M. But the Sunday School says it will not allow it, as three o'clock is its hour. Why can't the Sunday school be held at two o'clock like it is when its preacher wants to preach there.

Verona

New Bethel Baptist church has been beautifully papered.

Quite a number here have received the artistic souvenir edition of the Williamstown Courier, for which they were thankful.

Hathaway

Misses Marietta Riley and Virginia Conner, of Union spent several day with relatives and friends in the neighborhood last week.

FIFTY YEARS AGO
Local Happenings

Tom Cowen likes to peddle beef in Belleview. He meets many handsome young laddies.

We hear considerable complaint of windows being broken in outhouses by some of the mischievous boys of the town.

Several of the citizens kept late hours last Saturday night to see the eclipse of the moon, which occurred between twelve and one o'clock.

It has been ascertained the some of the new revisions of the new testament are full of errors. Those sold by Mr. William Gaines are correct in every particular.

Some of the boys are offering a liberal reward for the name of the correspondent, who furnishes the random notes from this place for the Sunday Enquirer.

The strawberry market opened in Burlington last week at two quarts for a quarter. There was a rapid decline in the market and in a few hours they were selling at three quarts for twenty-five cents.

We are in receipt of the Owen County Democrat, a new paper started at Owenton, and edited by J. R. Garrett. It is a newsy sheet, well printed. The county of Owen has two good papers and we doubt not that she will sustain them.

Dr. W. H. Terrill, of Petersburg, and a number of the Democratic Executive committee, was in town one day last week. The doctor prefers a delegate convention for the nomination of candidates for county officers. He thinks it a better means of harmony in the party.

Miss Alice Owens and Miss Joe McGann, of Price Hill, Cincinnati, spent Monday afternoon with Miss Lawinia Kirkpatrick and daughter, Mrs. Bess Rouse.

Born to Ralph Wells and wife a son, Thursday last.

Epp Miller, Alex Brooker, Gladdis county, and Lee Stevens of Newport, Ky., visited the Springs Thursday.

Anna Dudgeon and daughter, Gladys, made a business trip to the city Friday.

Our up-to-date postmistress entertained our mail carriers with a fish dinner Tuesday.

Mrs. Lizzie Wood Miller, who is very low, shows no signs of improvement. Her children are at her bedside.

Mrs. Lizzie Schwink, of near East Bend, visited Mrs. J. G. Finnell the first of the week.

Freddie Williams from Happy Hollow was calling on friends here the week-end. He looks very well, though bent with age. He must be 100 years old.

Robert Allen is sporting a new Ford car. Girls, see who gets the first ride.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hamilton were the guests of relatives at Beaver Lick Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Finnell entertained Sunday afternoon, Mrs. Binder and daubhter, Miss Lena, of East Bend, Mrs. H. E. Miller and Mrs. Eliza Hamilton.

William Dudgeon, wife and granddaughter, of Inidiana, were the guests of Richard Dudgeon several days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Tom Hamilton entertained Rev. Johnson of Big Bone church Sunday.

Harry Adams is on the sick list.

Mr and Mrs. Conner Littrell, of Verona, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Littrell Sunday.

PETERSBURG

A large crowd attended the social Saturday night and all had a grand time.

Miss Emelyn McCord was shopping in Cincinnati Saturday.

Edward Black is quite ill at present.

Miss Eva Carver is in Price Hill this week, the guest of her daughter Mrs. P. L. Myers and Mr. Myers.

Courtney Walton, of Erlanger, was calling on friends here Saturday. Mrs. Pauline Walton and little daughter, Betty Alden, and Miss Elizabeth Walton have returned from a very pleasant visit with Misses Nora and Lucile Rucker.

VERONA

Miss Editha Ransom, of Covington, formerly of this place, who was operated on for a diseased appendix, is able to be out again. She accompained her sister, Mrs. Mary Alderman to Bristol, Tenn. where she will spend several weeks.

Dr. and Mrs. Harry W. Hamilton of Chicago, were called to the bedside of his mother, Mrs. Bettie Hamilton, who passed away Sunday eve. about 8 o'clock.

This vicinity was visited with a severe storm last Friday evening, which did considerable damage to crops and trees and telephone poles.

Prof. Ira L. Harrison and family moved to his property at Leitchfield last Wednesday. The Professor has accepted the Graded School as principal and will board during the coming session.

The impending European tour of Secretary Stimson is expected by informed officials here to have a salient effect on the course of international affairs during the next year, despite the Secretary's desire to minimise its importance. Informality will be the keynote of the tour. Yet it was at the informal surroundings of President Hoover's Rapidan camp that he and Minister Ramsay MacDonold talked intimately of their countries' naval problems and thus gave impetus to the London Conference. With this precedent in mind, officials here would not be surprised if the Secretry's quiet talks with European statesmen prove helpful in the solution of international problems.

The White House lost its oldest employee in point of service when William Strauss, gardener, fireman and general handy man, retired the civil service act. He is sixty-nine years old. He has passed forty-three years in the White House service. His service record exceeds by three years that of Irwin Hoover, chief of White House ushers Strauss worked first in the green house of the Presidential grounds in Grover Cleveland's administration. He was born in Stuttgart, Germany, on May 29, 1862.

Only a short time ago nearly everybody was speaking of the tariff in hushed tones. Today none is so poor as to do it reverence. Nearly everybody is villifying it and chasing it all over the lot. Once sacredly immune from criticism, it is now the common butt of violent attack. Even Republicans are rising up, as if they were so many inhabitants of Dahomey, to drive nails into the tariff fetich which has worked according to the prophecies of those who did the incantations before it. Really, this open abuse of the tariff makes one almost sorry for it. Like a man who has seen better days, it makes a mute appeal for sympathy and help. There must be many who, in these days of its having fallen into disgrace, must feel like taking pity onthis modern Belisarius, reduced to beggary, and throwing an obolus to him.

A Senator's daughter plans to show Parisian countries a thing or two. Dispatches from New York reveal Miss Feyton Elizabeth Hawes, daughter of Senator Haws if Missouri and well known in Washington society, has a revolutionary idea. She will reverse and establish formula and take New York creations to Paris. Miss Haws, chief cloths designer of Haws, Inc., a swanky Fifth avenue shop, has arranged a July exhibit in the French capital, not, as she says, to compete with the French but to "add prestige to American work." The Missouri girl is bubbling over with enthusiam for the work of American designers. She thinks they are far better equipped to dress American women than are the French gown experts. She contends the designers of thei tastes, needs and fancies of American girls.

The new Canadian tariff schedules are more frankly protectionist than usual and, as Canadians do most of their foreign buying in the United States, they inevitably give the effect of being discriminatory if not retaliatory, The principal aim behind the changes is to remedy the unemployment situation and help the farmers. Rates on a long list of farm products are increased and in a general sense the increased duties on manufactured goods are designed to encourage home production.

"Our car" has been sold to the Senate for official use, so the automobile of the late Speaker ofthe House Longworth will never be used by "Jack" Garner of Texas, should the latter become Speaker. Garner, a close friend of Longworth, referred to the automobile as "our car," Longworth always denied the joint ownership, but used to drive his crony "Jack" home after the day's sessions. A new car will be purchased for the next Speaker.

Col. Edward M. House, President Wilson's most intimate advisor, has re-entered national politics as an active participant in the movement to obtain the Domocratic presidential nomination for Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. Col. House's exact status in the Roosevelt movement, which, in spite of its strength, is as yet without any definate organization, is cloaked with some of the same quiet mystery that surounded his missions for the he has openly acknowledged he was active when it was brought to his attention that reports seeping back to New York that his friends in Texas and in various other Western and Southern States had been receiving letters from him urging them to support Mr. Roosevelt for the nomination next year.

Col. Charles A. Lindberg will leave within a month for a flying tour of the Far East, making the trip by air across the North Pacific. Mrs. Lindbergh will accompany him. The exact date of his departure has not been determined, but at his request the State Department is asking the Japanese and Chinese governments for permission for him to land in those countries. Although the trip across the North Pacific will not involve any long over hops, Col. Lindbergh is taking every safety precaution.

The $800,000,000 bond issued announced by Secretary Mellon was oversubscribed more than seven times when the books closed last night with total subsciptions of $6,000,000,000.. The Treasury Secretary announced that subscriptions for the 18-year 3½ per cent bonds, issued to begin to reffunding of the short-term debt of more than $3, 000,000,000 had been closed. Announcement of the actual amount of subscriptions and the basis of allotment will be made within a few days.

Vice President Curtis departed for his home in Topeka, Kansas, where he will stay a month or so, leaving unanswered a question that now is to the fore in Republican circles—whether he will again seek the vice presidential nomination or run for his old seat in the Senate, occupied by a Democrat. "I have decided nothing. I may have something to say in the fall; I may not." was the word when he left here.

Four months ago when the bonus loan proposal was before Congress the Washington atmosphere was filled with dire prophecies as to the financial disaster that would follow any large offering of Government securities. Now the Treasury Department's issue of $800, 000, 000 3½ per cent bonds to run for eighteen years has been seven times over-subscribed and this without creating any serious disturbance in the bond market.

It appears to be only a question of time before many ofthe most important Democrats of New York get on the Roosevelt band wagon It is known that many of them, who have so far not come forward with open support of the Governor's nomination, are merely biding their time and will take their cue from the Governor himself as to the proper time to announce themselves. There is still talk of Al Smith, the standard bearer in 1928. But there are plenty who believe that in the end it will be Alfred E. Smith who places the name of Franklin D. Roosevelt in nomination at the Democrat convention. And if Governor Smith does that thing, what a roar will go up from the delegates! Under such circumstances there is little doubt that Roosevelt would be the party choice on the first ballot.

Let These Salads Banish Mealtime "Spring Fever"

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

SALADS of luscious, chilled fruits in deep cups of crisp lettuce, served with flavorful dressings, will appeal to appetites suffering from Spring fever. Fruits, both fresh and canned, furnish in abundance the minerals, vitamins and roughage so essential to good health at all times, and especially at this season.

Fruit salads will be welcome many times in the week's menu, since they can be used both for the salad and dessert course at dinner, and are ideal for afternoon or late evening party meals. And with dainty sandwiches and coffee, a substantial fruit salad makes an excellent lunch on a warm day.

The following recipes are for fruit salads that are more than ordinarily delicious, and you will be delighted with them if you are on the look-out for attractive salads, either for everyday menus or for entertaining:

Bunch of Grapes Salad: 2 halves canned pear; 1 package cream cheese; 1 can pitted black cherries, or 1 pound green or red grapes; stems of parsley; ¼ cup chopped nuts; Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Drain pears thoroughly. Then mash cheese and thinly coat the rounded sides of the pears. Cover with halved cherries or grapes, to give the effect of a cluster of grapes. For a stem use a sprig of parsley from which the leaves have been removed. Place on a crisp lettuce leaf over a spoonful of Mayonnaise Salad Dressing mixed with chopped nuts.

Fruit Cup Salad with Banana Dressing: Arrange 3 small cup-like leaves of lettuce on a salad plate. In one cup, place sections of peeled orange or grapefruit; in another, diced pineapples or peaches, and in the third, white cherries from which the stones have been removed. Sprinkle with chopped pecans or English walnuts. For the dressing, mash ½ banana, add ½ teaspoon vinegar and 2 tablespoons confectioner's sugar. Fold the banana mixture into ½ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing. A few tablespoons whipped cream or a beaten egg white also may be added if desired. Pass this dressing after the salads are served.

Pineapple, Prune and Marshmallow Salad: Arrange individual nests of lettuce. Upon the lettuce place a slice of pineapple, and top with three cooked prunes, each stuffed with a half marshmallow. Serve with Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Gherkin Fruit Salad: 2 oranges; 2 bananas; 2 apples; 2 slices pineapple; ¼ cup chopped Sweet Gherkins; ½ cup nuts; 2 teaspoons lemon juice; ¼ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing.

Dice oranges, bananas, apples, and pineapple, and add nuts, Gherkins and lemon juice. Chill thoroughly, and add enough Mayonnaise to coat the fruit. Serve in lettuce cups, garnished with Mayonnaise and Maraschino cherries.

Ambrosia Salad: 2 sliced bananas, (sprinkled with lemon juice); 1 cup white grapes or cherries; ½ cup pineapple, diced; 1 cup quartered marshmallows; ½ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing; ½ cup whipped cream.

To the sliced bananas add the other fruit and marshmallows. Moisten with salad dressing and whipped cream and serve on crisp lettuce.

Over-Night Fruit Salad: 1 egg, beaten; 2 tablespoons Pure Vinegar; 2 tablespoons sugar; 1 cup white cherries; 1 cup pineapple; 1 cup marshmallows; 1 orange; ½ cup whipped cream.

Put egg in double boiler, add vinegar and sugar, and stir constantly until thick and smooth. Cool and fold in whipped cream and fruit. Mold in ring mold and set in refrigerator over night.

First American Factory

The first industrial enterprise in the United States was a glass bottle factory erected in the Virginia colony soon after 1607. It was located in the woods about one mile distant from Jamestown.

Mixed Blood in Mexico

Mexicans are largely a mixture of Spanish and Indian ancestry. If Spanish blood predominates they belong to the white race, whereas if Indian blood predominates they belong to the red race.

Silence and Speech

By keeping silence when we ought to speak, men may be lost. By speaking when we ought to keep silence, we waste our words. The wise man is careful to do neither.—Confucius.

Valuable Nut

A kind of nut which is said to stop toothache grows in India. The natives chew it to relieve pain.

Height of Goliath

The Hebrew cubit being equal to 17.33 inches, and a span 8.70 inches, Goliath was nine feet six inches tall.

Ancient History on Stone

The Moabite stone, found in 1868, and whose fragments are now in the Louvre, contains one of the earliest inscriptions in the Phoenician alphabet and records the revolt of the Moabites against Israel after the passing of Ahab.

Figures in English History

The palace of Fulham has belonged to the see of London since 691. It is said to have been given to Bishop Erkenwald, bishop of London, by Tyrthfrid, bishop of Hereford, with the consent of Sigebard, king of the East Saxons and Cosmod, king of the Mercians.

STRAWBERRY CUP

Strawberry cup is an easily prepared dessert which makes use of sweet berries in a delicious way. Line a glass dish or individual dishes with split lady fingers, and fill in the centers with the sweet berries and whipped cream. Serve very cold.

A GOOD VEGETABLE SALAD

One of the tea rooms in a big city makes a specialty of this vegetable salad: Lettuce as a foundation. In one lettuce cup a big spoonful of potato salad mixed with mayonnaise; in another pile of diced pickled beets. Then a slice of tomoto, a spoonful of string beans, and two stalks of asparagus, The whole is dressed with French dressing.

Every Appetite Responds to Attractive Sandwiches

By JOSEPHINE B. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept., H. J. Heinz Company

RECENT figures show that more than thirty million sandwiches are eaten every day in the United States. This figure is sufficiently startling to make us realize their popularity.

Sandwiches, in fact, form the "back-bone" of many excellent, quickly prepared luncheons. A substantial sandwich, with a hot beverage and fresh fruit, makes an ideal noon meal for those engaged in office or other types of sedentary work where a light lunch is desirable. And many busy housewives wisely are allowing this popular type of food to save them much time and labor in preparing meals.

The possibilities for varying sandwiches are almost numberless. They may be made from all kinds of bread, rolls and muffins, with a great variety of savory fillings. And they may be served either hot or cold.

I am sure these excellent sandwiches will be welcome additions to your Spring menus:

Venetian Eggs on Toast or Toasted Muffins: 1 onion (small); 1 tablespoons melted butter; 1 small can Cream of Tomato Soup; ¼ lb. American cheese, cut in small pieces; salt; ½ teaspoon Worcestershire Sauce; ¼ teaspoon Mustard; 2 eggs (well beaten).

Garnish for each service: one slice broiled fresh tomato. Chop onion fine, simmer slowly in butter, and add Tomato Soup, cheese, and seasoning. Cook until cheese is thoroughly melted. Then add eggs and cook about two minutes. Serve on toasted English muffins with a slice of broiled tomato on top.

Boston Sandwiches: Press 2 cups drained Oven Baked Beans through a sieve, or mash until free from lumps. Chop 4 sweet Gherkins and 8 Stuffed Spanish Olives, and add to Baked Beans. Add Mayonnaise Salad Dressing to make a smooth paste, and spread between buttered slices of Boston brown bread.

Deviled Cheese and Ham Sandwiches: 1 cup grated American cheese; ¼ cup ground ham; 2 teaspoons Prepared Mustard; 1 teaspoon Worcesterahire Sauce.

Butter rye bread on both sides. Spread filling ¼ inch thick on one slice, press together, and toast a golden brown. Serve with Genuine Dill Pickles.

Peanut Butter and Sandwich Relish Sandwiches: Peanut Butter; Sandwich Relish.

Spread 1 slice of bread with Peanut Butter, another with Sandwich Relish, and press firmly together.

Salad Club Sandwiches: Mix ¼ cup minced chicken or other cold meat (veal, pork or lamb), ¼ cup finely diced celery, ¼ cup Mayonnaise Salad Dressing, 1 chopped hard cooked egg, ¼ cup Stuffed Spanish Olives, chopped. Spread between two slices of toast or in heated, buttered rolls. Serve on crisp lettuce, garnished with slices of Sweet Dill Pickle.

Toasted Cheese and Chili Sauce Sandwiches: Mix 1 cup grated American cheese with 3 tablespoons Chili Sauce. Spread between buttered slices of white bread, trim crusts and toast. Serve hot on a crisp lettuce leaf, garnished with Spanish Queen Olives.

Creamed Tuna Fish Sandwiches: 1 cup tuna fish; 2 tablespoons butter; 2 tablespoons flour; ½ teaspoon salt; 1½ cups milk; 3 tablespoons Preserved Sweet Gherkins, chopped; paprika; dash of Worcestershire Sauce.

Heat fish over hot water. Melt butter, add flour and salt, then gradually add milk. Cook until thick, and add the chopped pickle. Spread buttered toast with a layer of fish, cover with sauce, add a second layer of toast, more fish, and sauce. Garnish with paprika and slices of pickle.

NEW STEAMER IN LOCAL TRADE

Tom Green Begins Regular Trips Between Cincinnatti and Louisville—Boats are Sold Monday.

Tom Green, well known steamboat owner, on Monday purchased the steamers John W. Hubbard and Kentucky and the wharfboats at Cincinnatti, Louisville and Madison, formerly owned by the Louisville Packet Company. The transaction was the result of a voluntary bankruptcy petition filed in the United States Destrict Court at Cincinnati March 6.

The steamer Tom Greene came down Monday night and will continue to make three round trips weekly. The steamer Alabama, which has been running in this trade for several weeks, was withdrawn Friday night and Sunday is said to have been the first Sunday a packet has not made a trip between Louisville and Cincinnatti when the river was navigable in one hundred twenty-two years.

Organized in 1807, the Louisville & Cincinnati Packet Company is reputed to be the oldest inland waterways boat line in the country. It has been conducted under the present name for sixty years and when river traffic was at its height, operated a huge fleet of both passenger and freight steamboats. Some of the larger boats distributed mail up and down the river and consequently were known as mail boats.

Operations of the company gradually became less extensive with the slowing down of river buisness.

Captain Green expects to revive the trade and has announced other steamers will be operateed if the business justifies it.

High school teachers who act in an advisory capacity to editors of school publications will have an opportunity to study the technical features of such supervision through a course offered by the Journalism called "Supervision of High School Publications" which will be given during the first term of the University of Kentucky Summer Session.

An outline of the course including the topics which will be covered each day stresses such discussions as the branches of a modern newspaper; staff organization; staff duties; sources of news; classification of news; news, style; the news story; features; human interest stories; special stories; editorials; proofreading; libel; editing the day's news; copyreading; headlines, schedule; make-up; advertising, circulation and administration.

This course has been designed to meet the demands of teachers who advise high school publications and who have not had the opportunity to study the technical side of their duties. It will be a two-hour-a-day course and will be given in the mornings, during the first term of the 1930-31 Summer Session. This is the second time the course has been offered, having been innovated at the beginning of the 1930 Summer Session. The first term will open June 15.

Thoughtful Bride

Mistress of parsimonious habits and strict economy, who had been engaged to wed another woman, has become engaged to the same person a second time. In the interval of a certain intervening second event, crowding which with amazing humanity she contrives to weave a new web over the framework of the permanent structure, seems an addition to Better Homes and Gardens.

Although the framework of the simple structure, which consists of three spokes resisting from a single point, is constantly under repair, the finished web is never repaired no matter how damaged it may be. Only wires are anchored to leaves, blades of grass, with a crow's foot fastening. Then follow the radial lines which retrace the original spokes of the permanent frame. The dainty tatting wheel in the center serves as a feast hall. The last stroke is biting out the floss constituting the hub, which leaves an aperture for the unwary insect to crawl through and be enmeshed. Then follows the fastidiously chosen feast, continues Better Homes and Gardens, after which the web is carefully removed and, if no longer of service, devoured to make more silk and be respun later.

Population of Babylon Has Been Overestimated

There have been various attempts, by comparing its area with the area of modern cities, to estimate the population of ancient Babylon. On the lowest calculation it would be found, supposing it to have borne any considerable resemblance to a European city, to have had a population of 5,000,000. The map of Asiatic Turkey shows that the extent of country around Babylon available for agricultural purposes must have been quite inadequate to supply the necessary demands for anything like such an immense population. Perhaps, on the whole, says a recent writer, one may estimate the population at from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000. This supposition derives support from the fact that Seleucia, with a population of 600,000, is stated by Strabo and Pliny to have been about half the size of Babylon in the days of her greatest glory.

Satisfied With Their Lot

The minister of the flock had been invited to dine with the Jones family, and the four young boys had been told to wait for their repast until the grownups had finished the meal. They were to come in for the "second serving."

One of the lads, however, secreted himself under the table to listen in. Commenting on the four boys, the minister said to the hostess: "Mrs. Jones, it is too bad that at least one of your children couldn't have been a girl."

This was too much for the little stowaway. Out shot a bristling little red head from under the overhanging tablecloth, and a volley of protesting words:

"Well, Tom wouldn't been 'er; Ed wouldn't been 'er; Hal wouldn't been 'er; and I wouldn't been 'er! I'd like to know who'd 'a' been 'er!"

No other answer was needed; the point was settled.

Originated Postal System

Hailed by many as the father of the modern postal system, the one hundredth anniversary of Heinrich von Stephan was modestly celebrated in Germany. He came from very humble origin and rose to be director of the Royal Prussian post. The work for which he is particularly remembered was engineering the world postal union, which became effective on July 1, 1875, after the Berne conference had sat only a week and a half before accepting his scheme without change.

Germans perhaps treasure Von Stephan's memory particularly as the originator of the cheap-rate postcard. Indeed, his name is closely associated with all the postal innovations of his time.

Weight and Health

Recent insurance experience has shown that average weight tables are often misleading. The average weights are by no means the best weights. At ages under thirty, the best conditions apparently exist among those whose weights are from five to ten pounds above the average. After age thirty, the most favorable conditions are found among those whose weights are below the average. The amount below average increases with advancing age, and at the age of fifty, persons seem to be at their best when their weights are as much as 20 or 30 pounds below the average. Insurance experience shows that underweight is definitely an advantage so far as long life is concerned.

Hard to Trace Origin

Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly in his book on "Idioms and Idiomatic Phrases" says "Let her go, Gallagher!" is an Americanism of unknown origin, traced by various persons to different sources. He quotes, however, C. E. Gallagher of Youngstown, Ohio, who wrote in 1921: "Let her go, Gallagher!" was first seen by the writer (Mr. Gallagher) on posters advertising a dance at Salamanca, N. Y., about 35 years ago. My father was postmaster at that place, and working in the post office were a number of very popular young ladies who were always active in the social affairs of the town. These posters referred to the girls who worked for Gallagher."

Great Pyramids' Stone

The Egyptian pyramids were built of a hard, rough-hewn limestone, but large blocks of granite were also used, especially on the outside. The stone was taken from quarries in the cliffs which line the Nile valley in its lower reaches.

Reminder of Old War

An old cannon was fished from the sea at Finalmarina, Italy, with fragments of human bones clinging to it. It is thought that a gunner was blown up with the piece when the British bombarded a fort there in 1745.

Feels Better Than Any Other Time in Life

"So great was my suffering that I hardly cared whether I lived or not. Every bite I ate gave me the most severe pains—the indigestion, heartburn, bloating and biliousness were simply terrific. Even nights were torments to me—night after night sleep would never come. I began losing flesh rapidly. I began to look twice my age. I was truly in a terrible condition. My neighbor advised Karnak for which I will thank her to my dying day. It is the most marvelous medicine in the world. It not only rid me of my suffering but it has caused me to gain in weight and I feel better than I ever felt in my life and sleep like a child. I thank my neighbor and I thank Karnak."

Off-Season 'Cackling' Of The Senate Is Puzzle To Writer

Editor's Note The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

That touchy old hen, the Senate, has had her feathers ruffled again. For a year or more her antics have provided a wonderful source of amusement, but it was thought when the incubation season was over, and she was shooed out of the coop, the old bird might calm down—possibly even succumb to estivetion—and permit us to indulge in other distractions. Perish the thought.

What occasioned this off-season cackling and fluttering of wings was not that any naughty little President of the United States threw stones at this deserving provider of political omelets and economic stews; it was not that—being a trained and educated pullet—she had further opportunity to protest against a committee of barnyard overseers kicking out a couple of misfit apprentices. No thrice no! Another group of barnyard experts reproved her for attempting to fly over the legislative fence and scratch for succulent worms in the executive garden. After the manner of poultry crossed in its whims, she is vociferously cackling her disapproval.

Criticism of Senatorial interference in the appointment of Federal district attorneys in the report of President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission brought prompt and pointed replies from several Senators who remain on Capitol Hill, with many an absentee yet to be heard from. The Wickersham Commission, which never has developed more than a speaking acquaintace with Congress and heretofore has provoked that august body to the point of animosity, has found itself plunged into the thick of another controversity that is expected to bring unfavorable reaction when Congress convenes in December.

The commission has made public a report in which it freely criticises the political interference of Senators in the naming of Federal attorneys. The report is now being answered, and not without high-temperatured emphasis. Senators, both Republican and Democrat, took offense at the commission's attitude in a way suggestive that if the agency were alive in December, instead of officially dying July 1, there would be little chance of approving funds for its functioning.

The Wickersham Commission's report has proven no exception to the rule that when the Senate is assailed by an outside agency there is a common tie which obliterates party lines and establishes a unification of attact against the enemy. Senators were quick to note that the report pointed to the constitutional power held by the Senate to confirm or reject presidential appointments as presenting a possible evil.

Senator Walsh of Montana, rank-Committee, said, "If the Senate is to be accused of injecting politics into the selection of Federal appointees and particularly district attorneys, it may be reported that politics are are rarely absent in the nomination of them by the Executive. Why assailed the Senate or Senators in such a matter and exempt from like criticsm the President, who has sole power of appointment?"

Senator Bingham, Republican, Connecticut, defended the right and the practice of Senators in recommending appointments to the judiciary and insisted that the Senators were in a better position than others to know the best qualified men in their States and were held responsible for the appointments.

Senator Caraway, Democrat, Arkansas, turned the criticism back to the commission. He said, "That indictment could have come in that hadn't thought itself to be a political smoke screen for this administration's failure to enforce the law."

The commission's attack upon the Senate brought into the open conflict between a considerable group of the Senate and the executive over the making of appointments. President Hoover at the outburst of his administration announced a policy of independence in judicial nominations. However, it was not long before pressure was brought to bear from the Senate, principally from the Republican regulars, for more attention to their recommendations for judicial appointments.

The Wickersham Commission, having had to confess the want of reliable comparative statistics in regard to American criminal justice, has largely had to depend on existing accounts for the facts of its "Report on Prosecution." That report is accompanied by a comprehensive study of court procedure criminality and the prevention of crime by Mr. Betiman of the Cincinnati bar. The range of recommendations, many or most of them familiar, made by the Commission is too large for even the most cursory comment. Each State will make or not make on its own account changes in the administration of criminal justice.

The commission in its report filed with President Hoover said that looking upon the office of District Attorney as a reward for political activity "its a serious menace to activeity "its a serious menace to the enforcement of law. The Senate's claim, not merely to exercise a collective power of rejecting unfit nominations but to dictate appointments as the patronage of Senators in which State the district lies, has often had bad effect upon the personnal and conduct of the office."

This was only a part of a general indictment of the present prosecuting system, but the Senate rallied quickly against the indictment. There never has been any thought, it was said, of picking men for district attorneyships who prove unacceptable to to national committeemen and state organization.

"Individual Senators exercise no more authority in these cases than in the appointment of other Federal officers. "Senator Walsh said. "Evidence is not wanting that politics sometimes enters into the appointments of even the highest Judges." In this latter statement, Senator Walsh was understood to be refering to the nomination of Judge Parker for the Supreme Court bench, an appointment which was rejection at the hands of the Senate after much political discussion in which it was charged that the President made this appointment upon political grounds.

The Pennsylvania Senators, Reed and Davis, have been having a hard time of it in getting a District Attorney for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, and it was pointed out that as a check on possible bad nominations by Senators, the Department of Justice can and has declared nominees unacceptable and that its decision prevails.

It was admitted in other senatorial quarters there was some substance to the commission's criticism that were Senators are in opposition to the Administration, the political organizations insist on treating a Federal appointment as purely patronage thus depriving the President of information he should have in order to make suitable appointments.

However, no matter how constructive its other labors, the Wickersham Commission's record will popularly be appraised in the light of its unsuccessful attempt to solve the prohibition problem. That will be remembered to the obscuring of such really valuable services as it may have performed in illuminating the causes and cost of crime and suggesting preventative and reformative measures.

VOLUME 49 — Established 1882 — BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, JUNE 25, 1931. — $2.00 Per Year — NUMBER 39

FIRST PRIZE

IN RECORDER "LOST WORD" CONTEST GOES TO MRS. SAM RYLE — MRS. ELMER COURTNEY, ERLANGER, AND MRS. LILLIAN PRESSER, WATERLOO, TIED FOR SECOND

The Recorder's second Lost Word contest closed with the issue of June 11th, and promptly at 5 P. M. last Thursday the coupon box was closed anda check up begun.

After a careful count it was found that Mrs. Sam Ryle, of Burlington, was the winner of the first prize of $25.00, with a dead lock existing between Mrs. Elmer Courtney, Erlanger, and Mrs. Lillian Presser, of Waterloo, for second place. Third place money was divided equally between Mrs. W. B. Cotton, William Albert Weaver and Harry Cook.

According tothe rules of the contest $50.00 was to be distributed among the prize winners as follows: $25.00 to first place; $10.00 to second place; $5.00 to third place, making a total of forty dollors. Then ten dollars was to go to the next ten in the contest, . or one dollar each. However, a very peculiar condition exists in this contest in that there were twelve contestants tied for fourth money. In other words ten dollars must be divided between the twelve, or eighty three and one third cents each.

The correct words in the contest are listed below intheir proper rotation; Belt, Are, Used, Now's Greatly, For, Of, You, The, These, Home, From, In, The first word was missing from an advertisement on the page of the first week of the contest, the second word from that of the second week, and so on. From the above list it will be an easy matter for any contestant to check up the entire lost as compared to his or her answers.

There were more than one hundred in the contest and the original list went right on to the finish line.

This contest of this kind conducted by this newspaper was held in the fall of 1928 and the first prize at that time was won by Renselear Wilson, of Vermillion Grove, Illinoise Young Mr. Wilson again was an entrant in this contest, but was not so fortunate. This time he was tied with the twelve in the one dollar list.

BRITISH BREEDERS SEEK SERVICES OF KENTUCKY SCIENTIST

Dr. W. W. Dimock, head of the department of animal pathology at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky, will sail for England July 3, as the guest of The British Bloodstock Agency, Ltd. the English association of light horse breeders.

Famed the world over for his work in horse breeding, Dr. Dimock will confer with scientists and breeders in England and other foreign countries regarding diseases, sterility and other problems. His investigations at the Kentucky Experiment Station have attracted the attention of many breeders and scientists and investigators in other countries.

Many noted foreign scientists and investigators have visited the Experiment Station at Lexington to study the work of Dr. Dimock and his co-workers. The Swedish government recently sent over Dr. Gustav Danelius. John Crawford, M. R. C. V. S., general manager of The British Bloodstock Agency, has made several trips to Kentucky. On his latest visit he arranged to haev Dr. Dimock go to England for a series of consultations and lectures.

Dr. Dimock was chief veterinarian of the Cuban sanitary department for four years, and head of the department of pathology and bacteriology of the veterinary division of Iowa State College before coming to Kentucky. He is a graduate of the Connecticut agricultural college and Cornell University. He is a member of the American Veterinary Medical Association, the United States Live Stock Sanitary Association and the American Association for the advancement of Science. The University of Cuba conferred upon him the degree of doctor of veterinary medicine.

Miss Lucile Ryle entertained a number of friends with a lawn party at her home on the Hebron-Limaburg road last Wednesday evening. About fifty young people from various points in the county were in attendance.

HEBRON CLUB

WILL TACKLE BELLEVIEW SATURDAY IN FINAL CONTEST OF SPLIT SEASON— HAVE FINAL CHANCE TO WREST FIRST PLACE FROM LEAGUE LEADERS— WALTON AT RABBIT HASH

In one of the fastest games of the year Rabbit Hash went down before the Hebron team at Hebron last Saturday. The score was 5-1.

Braun and Brady were the opposing hurlers and both were good, although Braun, twirling his best effort of the season, was just a little better. The control of both was perfect, neither passing a man. Braun allowed two hits according to the Hebron score book although some critics credited the Rabbit Hash tabulator said six. Several, indeed, were questionable and could be called either way, although a few hits off Brady were looping flies that might have been handled.

RabbitHash scored in the fourth when Stephens, the visiting catcher, drove out a three base hit to deep left and countedwhen Joe Aylor made one of his rare wide throws in returning the ball to the diamond. Hebron scored in the second, third, fifth and made two in the eighth.

Reibling, for Hebron, was the hitting star, making a double and a home run. He also made a fine running catch of Less Ryle's terrific liner in the ninth and doubled a runner at the plate after the catch for the final out of the game.

LOCAL MARINE MAKES GOOD

San Deigo, Calif., June—By showing special aptitude for his military duties at this Marine Corps post, Ollie Bachelor, a U. S. Marine from Boone County, Ky., has been promoted to the rank of corporal. His name is listed with the men who were recently advanced in rank.

San Diego is the headquarters of the West Coast expeditionary force, and the principal base of the Marine Corps on the Pacific. It is a point of departure and arrival for the soldiers of the sea, many of whom see service in China, the Hawaiian Islands, the Philippines, or aboard naval vessels.

Corporal Bachelor was born in Boone County, and formerly made his home with his father, George Bachelor, on rural route No. 1, Petersburg. He previously saw service with the Army, but for the last few years has been with the Marines. When certain Marines at this post ware recommended for promotion Bachelor, who is with the Service Company, was one of the men selected.

4-H CALF CLUB MEETING

Twenty-two 4-H calf club members and others interested in calf club work attended the two calf fitting and showing demonstrations in Boone county on last Friday by Mr. Jesse L. Collins from the College of Agriculture.

Mr. Collins informed the boys that the club heifers owned by Boone county members that had seen were as good or better than any he had seen this year.

Edward Oliver, of Louisville, spent a few minutes with his brother-in-law, W. H. Ward of this office, Tuesday.

DEFEAT

HANDED TO BOEHLER, OF PETERSBURG, AFTER STRETCH OF VICTORIES— BEN BLACK RESCUES GAME AFTER ROGERS IS SENT TO SHOWERS IN FOURTH INNING

Belleview went into a tie with Petersburg for third place in the county league standing last Saturday afternoon by virtueof great ten inning victory. The score was 6-5.

The victory was somewhat of a surprise to many league fans in that they had begun to think that Boehler, Petersburg's star boxman, was well nigh unbeatable in view of his sensational performaces over the past five or six weeks. But the Belleview lads got to him in the early innings for a nice lead and broke out of a tied score in the tenth when Allen Rogers singled to drive in Mutt Rogers with the winning counter.

Bill Rogers again was selected to do the Belleview hurling job. He went nicely until the fourth when the Petersburg bats went to work with startling precision and violence to drive Bill from the mound. Black, who succeeded Rogers, was almost invincible the rest of the way and received credit for the victory.

Belleview opened on Boehler in the the very first inning when Miller and Mutt Rogers singled and were pushed around on fielders choices to the infield. In the third Hensley singled and Miller walked advancing Hensley to second from where he scored on Mutt Rogers single. Miller went to third and Rogers advanced to second on the throw-in from the outfield, Bucky Rogers then doubled to send both runners home with the fourth and tieing runs.

Petersburg came back in the fourth against them Petersburg opened up their offensive outburst in the last of the fourth. Lowe singled and walked Boehler to fill the sacks. Bradburn counted two runs on his single and Klopp followed suit to send home the third, Bradburn taking third and Klopp running down to second on the play.

This was the signal for Rogers to vacate and for Black to assume the pitching burden. Runners were on second and third with no one down, but Black put on the brakes and got Jarrell on a roller to third and Matthews on a hopper to the box. Cox then hit a pop fly back of second on which Mutt Rogers and Cook executed an Alphonse-Gaston and the tying runs scampered over.

But from there on Black held the lid on and Boehler settled into his natural stride. Then the followers of the two clubs were treated to one of the most spectacular pitchers battles of the year.

Belleview broke the tie in the 10th Hensley was first and fanned, but Boehler faltered to the extent of passing the hard hitting Miller. Mutt Rogers was safe on his infield grounder on which Miller was snuffed out at second. With two down Mutt then stole second and rode home when Whitey Rogers singled to center.

In the Petersburg half the home team gave the fans a run for their money. Hitzfield started with a fanning bee, but Lowe doubled. With a runner on second base and Petersburg's "top" of the batting order up it looked like a tied score, but Black dug his toe into the rubber and set Mahan down on strikes and forced Bradburn to bounce to the box for the third out.

Black and Rogers held Petersburg to nine hits, while Boehler permitted Belleview but seven. Boehler fanned twelve of the visitors and Black seven, Rogers setting back four via strike outs. Rogers walked one and Black one, Boehler passing two. Russell Miller drew both of Boehler's passes and each was responsible fora run. Miller scoring himself inthe third and the pass to him in the tenth being responsible for Mutt Rogers being on base when Whitey's single sent him home.

SEWING GIRLS MEET

Hebron Unit 1 & 11 sewing club girls met at the school house with their leaders Miss's Alberta Baker and Alice Kathryn Tupman for a sewing meeting on last Thursday afternoon.

The Hebron sewing club is making splendid progress under the supervision of good local leaders.

GOOD RESULTS

SHOWN BY POULTRY BREEDERS WHO HAVE CARRIED OUT FIVE POINT PROGRAM—FAIR ATTENDANCE AT DEMONSTRATIONS, LAST FRIDAY—

Fair attendance and good meetings at the demonstration field tour meetings held in Boone county last Friday are reported by county agent H. R. Forkner.

The steps on the five point clean chick brooding program were given special study at each place visited. While only approximately one third of the brooding demonstrations in the county have been completed to-date enough figures were available to give approimate results.

Records on 2,126 chicks completed up to the time of the meetings last Friday gave the following results; 2,126 chicks put in the brooder house, 1,940 or 91.3 percent raised to 12 weeks of age; average weight per chick at 12 weeks, 2¼ pounds; feed cost per chick varied from 9 to 12½ cents per pound; total cost per chick 34 to 40 cents per head; Six and one half to 10 pounds of feed required to produce a pound of chicken up to the above age (12 weeks). The records also show that the greater the feed consumption, the greater the gains and the lower the cost of production per pound of chicken raised.

While a completed report on all brooding demonstrations will be made at a later date those poultrymen who carried out the five point program have secured splendid results.

Mr. J. E. Humphry from the College of Agriculture discussed the subject, "What is ahead for the Poultryman" at the afternoon meeting. He said that just a few more than half the number of pullets being raised for egg production this fall will be kept for this being the last the poultrymen who grows his pullets out and puts them in the laying house in good shape this fall should be well paid for his trouble.

Good poultry husbandry and not just raising chicks should be the slogan for this year.

19 EGGS PER HEN

Three of the four demonstration poultry flocks on which complete monthly reports were received by the county agent paid a profit the past month. The three flocks represented a total of 636 birds which laid a total of 12,069 eggs or an average of approximately 19 eggs per bird. The average return above all expenses was 21.8c per bird.

B. H. BERKSHIRE ILL

Friends of B. H. Berkshire, prominent Petersburg farmer, will be concerned over the news that he is critically ill at his home following a stroke of paralysis.

He was stricken at 4 A. M. to day (Wednesday). Mr. Berkshire is the father of R. E. Berkshire, editor of the Recorder.

June the 15th., was Miss Annie Stott's 81st., birthday at the invitation of Mrs. Carson Stott a number of her friends suprised her by going in to spend the evening, each one carrying flowers and other gifts the occasion was especialy honored by the presence of Mrs. Nannie Gaines, who is a life long friend of Miss Annie's. Delicious refreshments were served to the following; Miss Annie Stott, Mrs. Nancie Ganes Mrs. Elihu Alden, Mrs. Pauline Walton, Mrs. Chas. Cox, Miss Pearl Cox, Mr. E. E. Helm and children, Mrs. Helen Helm, Mrs. Cora Stott, Miss Cordelia Early, Miss Elizabeth Walton, Miss Irma Rotor, Misses Lena and Mary Alden, Mrs Herma Mathews, Miss Laura May Mathews, Mrs. Eva McWerty Mrs Ben Crisler, Mrs Lena Grant, Mrs. Lou Stephens Mrs. Lawrence Chambers, Mrs. Ed Stott, Mrs. Omar Watts and Mrs. Carson Stott. At a late hour these friends bade Miss Annie "goodnight" wishing her happiness and many returns of birthday. Miss Annie returned to her home Tuesday after having spent eight weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Caeson Stott.

The Baracca Sunday School class of the Big Bone Baptist church will give an ice cream supper at the church Saturday night June 27 for the purpose of buying base ball uniforms for the Sunday School team.

The ice cream will be home made and everybody welcome. Your help will be appreciated.

Northern Kentucky County Agents and representatives of the Covington Y. M. C. A. met at Camp Ernst on Gunpowder last Friday evening to perfect the final plans for the Northern Kentucky District 4-H Club Camp to be held at that place August the 11th. to the 16th.

4-H club members from Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant, Owen and Gallatin counties are looking forward to one of the best and most wholesome district 4-H club camps ever held in Northern Kentucky. Swimming instructions twice daily is being included in the regular agricultural, home economics, and recreational program for the first time.

A number of folks from Burlington attended the ordination ceremony of Rev. Raymond Smith at Belleview last Sunday. Rev. Smith will become the pastor ofthe Baptist church at Belleview.

SIXTY YEARS

BOONE COUNTY PITCHER WHO WAS SEEN IN ACTION LAST SATURDAY— "PAP" BRADY RETURNS TO HILL FOR BURLINGTON

Burlington took a reorganized squad to Walton Saturday to play the fast league leaders. Manager Blythe's line-up included players of all ages, ranging from inexperienced youngsters to that grizzled veteran, the indomitable Hubert Brady.

"Believe it or not" Brady took the mound for the visiting aggregation and served them up to the Walton hitters for seven innings and said that he could have gone on indefinitely. Akin pitched the eighth and last inning. It was the first time that Brady, who is in his SIXTIETH year, has been with clean support he would have made a very creditable showing against the Walton sluggers. The final score of the game was 15-4.

Dewey Benson twirled for Walton and never was in danger, although touched for nine bingles by the Burlington boys.

88 RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

About five hundred interested school patrons from every point in Boone county braved the sweltering heat here last Friday evening to witness the presenting of diplomas to the 88 graduates from common school this year. Rev. Sam Allen, pastor of the Walton Christian church addressed the graduates and made a splendid talk. Supt. D. H. Norris presented the diplomas. The Rouse medal for the highest received in the county wide test was presented to Miss Madeline Vest, of Verona, the winner. The American Legon medal for the most outstanding record in the county wide tournament was presented to Gilbert Dolwick, of Constance.

The Y. W. A of the Baptist church met June 16 with Mrs Hu Alpha Rogers.

The president Mrs. Davidson being absent Mrs. Jenings vice president presided.

A good and helpful program was enjoyed by all. There were eighteen present. Delightful refreshments were served by Mrs. Rogers. After pleasant social hour adjourned to meet in July with Mrs. Lena Surface.

C. L. Cropper and family and J. K. Cropper and wife enjoyed a birthday dinner at the home of W. L. Cropper and family Monday evening. The dinner was a joint observance of the birthdays of W. L. Cropper and Mrs. C. L. Cropper.

Tax Commissioner J. S. Carson attended the annual meeting of all county tax commissioners in the state, which was held at Frankfort last week.

E. E. Gordon, of Petersburg ,was doing some interior decorating at the home of G. S. Kelly last week.

Edward Osborne, Florence tonsoral artist, took time off to come to Burlington for a fishing license last Friday afternoon. Mr. Osborne was planning for a week-end trip down-state.

Alfred H. Jones, rural carrier on R. D. 3, is taking his annual summer vacation, while his brother Arthur Jones delivers the mail in his stead.

"DESCRIPTION"

OF TRIP TO LEXINGTON FOR JUNIOR WEEK GIVEN BY CLUB WORKER IN LETTER TO BOONE COUNTY CLUB MEMBERS

Dear 4-H Club Members:

I am glad to have this opportunity to write and tell you of my trip to Lexington, Junior Week. Boone county delegation consisted of Ruth Tanner, Helen Grant, Adelia Riddell, Woodford Crigler, Omer Dolwick, Gilbert Dolwick, one Utopia Club member, Wilton Stephens, chaperone Mrs. Robert Grant, and H. R. Forkner. We arrived at Lexington about eleven thirty eastern standard time and were immediatly assigned to our rooms

Our regular schedule program did not begin until Monday at four P. M. when we started playing games on the University Campus. From then on we continued with our regular program through out the week. Monday night we attended Vesper services in the open air theater back of the Memorial Building. These services were attended each night at six forty-five.

Tuesday morning everyone was up bright and early, but the second morning we were tired enough to rest. Six o'clock was our regular rising time and seven o'clock breakfast was served. Eight o'clock we attended convocation services in the Memorial Building each morning with different speakers making an address. Tuesday morning each county made a report of the number attending Junior Week, and afterwards divided into groups according to the location of the counties. The Boys work concerned the judging of livestock, while the girls home economics. Each group attended four group meetings each day which were very interesting as well as instructive.

Wednesday afternoon we were taken on a tour of the University Campus, while at Lexington was our trip to Frankfort. We all had the pleasure of going through the Old and New Capitol. Governor's Mansion and also shook hands with the Governor. We had a new honorary member to add to our list this year, Gov. Flem D. Sampson.

Friday afternoon we visited the great horse farms around Lexington. We saw the world's fastest race horse, Man O War and a great many other fine horses. We also saw Henry Clay's monument and his old homestead.

If any of you club members ever have the opportunity to go to Junior Week do not hesitate to go, for I insure you an enjoyable as well as instructive trip.

SATURDAY ENDS FIRST HALF SPLIT-SEASON BOONE COUNTL LEAGUE

Next Saturday will mark the end of the first half of the split-season in the Boone county league.

By consulting the standing in this week's Recorder it will be seen that Walton is leading by a comfortable margin, with Hebron second and Petersburg and Belleview tied for third. Walton has lost but one game and that to Petersburg, with the last game on their schedule to be played at Rabbit Hash next Saturday. Hebron will lock horns with Belleview at Belleview.

In digesting the chances of Walton landing out of first place let it be assumed that Hebron wins and Walton loses. That would Close the schedule with Walton winning seven and losing two and Hebron winning six and losing three. Then these two clubs have a postponed game which has been hanging in the balance since opening day. Grant that Hebron should play and win that game—then the standing would be Walton 7—3 and Hebron 7—3. Then, in addition to that, Hebron has lodged a protest against the Walton victory over them week before last and if they should be successful in that and win the play-off—if there should be one— they could beat Walton out for the pennant.

So the games at Belleview and Rabbit Hash next Saturday afternoon will be important ones after all, for, if Hebron wins over Belleview, the postponed game at least will have to be played of before Walton has chinched the pennant. However, if Hebron loses and Walton wins the race is over—postponements and protests to the contrary notwithstanding.

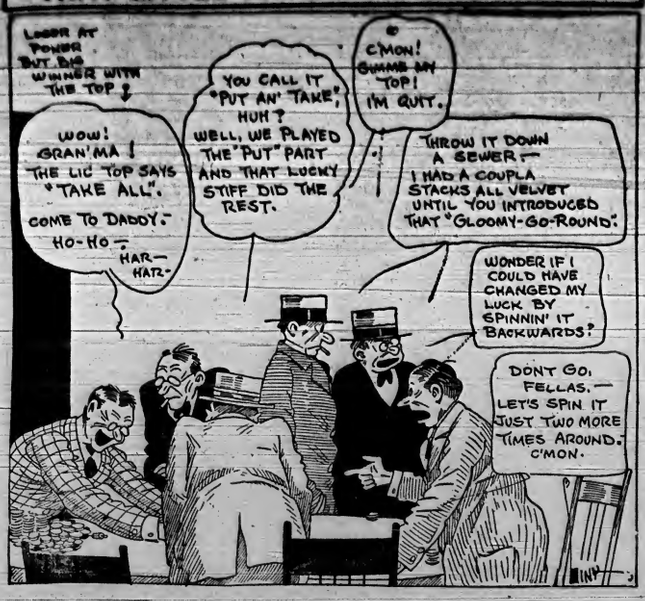
TIME TO BEGIN SPENDING.

This is the time to begin putting money back into circulation. There is more money in bank, subject to checks of individuals than at any previous time in our national history. It is lying there because its owners have been waiting for the business situation to "touch bottom."



All the indications now are that it has touched bottom and has begun to rise. At the moment, retail prices of every sort of commodity are lower than they have beensince the days before the war. A dollar will buy as much of almost everything today as a dollar and a half would two years ago. The reduction in the price of raw materials is now being fully reflected in the price of manufactured goods to the consumer.

There may never be another opportunity, in the lifetime of most of us, to make a dollar go as far as it will go today. We would never advise anybody to go contrary to Benjamin Franklin's wise counsel, when he said: "Never buy anything you don't want merely because it is cheap." But we know thousands of people in this comunity and vicinity have been putting off buying things which they really want, believing they would go lower.

We feel justified in saying to those people that the time has come for them to buy. Business in general is beginningto pick up rapidly. We can't tell how far up it is going, and probably we shall not have another such "boom" as we had three and four years ago—at least not right away. But with business picking up even appreciably, money for wages and materials getting back into circulation, the number of buyers will increase and the law of supply and demand will attend to sending retail prices upward again.

If ever the advice to "buy now" was good, it is today.

Sunday School Lesson

JESUS THE WORLDS SAVIOR

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D.D.

With this study we conclude a six months course on the Life of Christ during which the texts have been taken from Luke 14 to the end of the book, and made a survey of the entire gospel if possible. You heve been journeying with Jesus and the disciples from Galilee to Jerusalem by way of Perea. Parables were used fequently to drive home the truth to indifferent or to eager listeners. Then we came to Jericho with Him, after fording the Jordan near that ancient city.

The steep climb was then made from Jericho to Bethony, where the Teacher paused during the observance of the Sabbath a banquet was provided at the home of a man who had been cured of leprosy. When she thought no one would observe her act of testimony, Mary—the sister of Lazarus—came with her precious ointment and anointed Jesus. The odour disclosed her deed and Judas began to criticise, but the Master defended her.

Early on the first day of the week Jesus, and others who had come up for the Passover, went in procession to the Holy City. Incidents are thick along the way. On Thursday the Passover was celebrated and the Lords Supper instituted. From the upper room the little company went to the Garden of Gathsemane where Judas's kiss led to the arrest. Trials followed to the number of six after which He was taken to Calvary for the terrible crucifixion. When he said "It is finished" atonement had been made for the sins of mankind. The grave could not hold even His body and on Sunday the resurrection took place.

GRASS SEED POOL IN EFFECT

Paris Kentuckian—Citizen)

With nearly 700, 000 bushels of blue grass seed pledged by contract, the Board of Directors in a resolution, as provided in the contract, in a meeting held on June 10th. declared the pool in effect. Sufficient seed had been pledged to place the pool in operation. John W. Jones, North Middleton, Secretary of the pool in statement said that he had in his possession contracts covering more than 600,000 bushels and solicitors in the field reported contracts for 100,000 bushels signed, but not turned in yet.

The Federal Farm Board, which already has given its approval to the pool in its contract, has recognized this volume as sufficient to justify the operation of the pool, and on the strength of the volume already secured and the action taken bythe board of directors in declaring the contracts effective has made its first commitment for a loan to the association to be used as an advance to the pool members.

Mr William Collins, formerly of Borbon, and Mr. B. P. Anderson, formerly of Lexington, were in Kentucky the past week assisting in completing the details for carrying out financial arrangements with the National Farm Board, so that advancements of an average of 70 cents per bushal will be ready for July 20th. the time fixed in the contract to begin receiving.

All farmers who have signed contracts or intend to do so are urged to get the contracts to Mr. Jones as soon as possible so the association may know how much volume it will handle and thus be in a position to complete its arrangements for financing and handling the seed.

Werehouses for the concentration of thepooled seed will be announced in plenty of time before July 20 for growers to arrange for delivery.

The resolution adopted by the association follows in full:

"To the members of the Kentucky Bluegrass Seed Growers Cooperative Association:

"In compliance with the terms of our marketing agreement, the Board of Directors of the Kentucky Bluegrass Seed Growers Cooperaffecting the association, decided Kentucky, on the 10th. day of June 1931, and, after considering all facts and figures pertaining to the sign-up and all other conditions affecting the association, decoded unamimously that sufficient signup has been secured to enable the association to operate effectively.

"Therefore, notice of this dicision is given to the signers of the contracts all of whom are now obligated to deliver their seed to the association in accordance with the marketing agreement. All other seed growers of seed who have not already signed the contract are solicited to sign now and join with those who have already signed in this effort to effectively and efficiently emerchandise our bluegrass seed.,,

"JULY" POTATOES

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

The name "July" potatoes is given to that large group of varieties whose seed can be kept in good planting condition until late June or July, without resorting to cold storage. Most of the "July" potatoes are McCormicks, but there are several other varieties coming to the fore, which posses all the good points of McCormick and which are superior to it in quality.

There are: Perfect Peachblow, Rose of Aaron, Kentucky Snowflake, and a variety so new it is still nameless, except for the name "French Variety," given it locally. Tests of these sorts made in several sections of the state indicate that they will ultimately displace the McCormick, which although a good home potato, if stored away from light and air, is not an acceptable market potato, becaust of its tendency toward becoming strong when displayed in open bins, as grocers usually display potatoes.

Because July-planted potatoes must contend with hot dry weather the seed should be planted deep. Four inches is proper. Because hot and dry soil conditions favor the occurrence of scab, all precautions should be taken to avert it. These are to use manure as a fertilizer sparingly, if at all, and cleanse the seed of possible scab germs with the standard corrosive sublimate treatment.

The size of the seed piece for the "July" potato crop will also bear considering. The seed pieces should be large so as to insure enough moisture to drive the sprouts to the surface. They should weigh 1¼ onces, or be the size of a pullet's egg. The shape of the seed pieces, moreover, should be thick and blocky rather than thin and slender, so as to present the minimum surface through which the evaporation of the moisture in the seed may take place.

FERTILIZER

All potatoes need fertile ground, the "July" sorts especially. Too they need deep soils plentifully supplied with humus to hold moisture through the dry weeks of July and August. Since any but well rotten manure may cause the crop to to be scabby, it is important to turn under early in the spring any manure that is to be used, or to substitute, rather a "green" manure crop of rye or even a coat of weeds plowed under at least six weeks before planting time.

A good commercial fertilizer, as for example, 3-8-6 or 4-10-4 should be used, in addition. The method is to sow it in the bottom of the furrow and mix it thoroughly with the soil. The rate is one pound to 30 feet of furrow.

PLANTING

The seed should be dropped 15 inches apart, one piece to a place, and it should be covered by throwing two furrows over it, the ridge thus made to be dragged off level just before the sprouts break through.

CULTIVATING

All cultivations should be shallow and the soil should be left level. A 14-tooth "garden harrow" is an excellent tool to use, but a sweep that merely shaves the soil is better. Such cultivating keeps precious soil moisture from passing off into the air, and serves, too, as an additional safe guard aganst the occurance of scab.

PESTS

Sometimes the Colorado potato beetles migrate from earlier plantings of potatoes close by, but they many easily controlled by arsenical dusts or sprays.

Te Black Fleabeetle and the Leaf Hoppers are frequently numerious enough to give a gardener concern, for they stunt the plants, already struggling with lack of moisture. Their control is applying Bordeaux Mixture to which arsenical is added. A good plan is to anticipate all these pests by spraying with Bordeaux and poison when the plants are 4 inches tall, and again in two weeks, and a third time, two weeks after.

HONOR STUDENT AT LUDLOW

Miss Wanda Hafer is an honor student of the graduating class of Ludlow High School, having obtained an A grade during her entire four years of high school. Despite the fact that she is one of the youngest in the class of thirty-eight, she was voted by the entire student body as the best student.

The honor of making the salutatorian address has fallen to Miss Hafer. She took four years of English and History, and had two years each of Latin and Spanish. Besides taking the required subjects for the classical course she also had commercial subjects, winning medals each year for speed and accuracy. She will graduate with a total if 19½credits.

For two consecutive years she has been winner in the State flute contest. She conducts a class in piano and is assistant organist of the First Presbyterian Church of Ludlow. She is a worker in the Christina Endeavor Society of that Church and is being sent for the third year as delegate to the Young Peoples' Conference of Presbyterian Churhes at Danville.

In Memory of Little Rosie Mae Louden

Jut a year ago to day
Our little darling passed away
Asthe sun was sinking in the golden west.
Our little Rosie Mae closed her eyes in peaceful rest
She was sent to us from heven just a blue eyed baby girl
And we thought her one of the sweetest ever brought into the world
Oh how we loved her no human tongue can tell.
But we could not keep her here with us so she has gone to Heaven to dwell.
Although kind hands had cared for her nothing more could be done
So little Rosie fell asleep at the setting of the sun.

OSGOOD HEALTH OFFICER MAKING WAR ON MOSQUITO

(Osgood (Ind.) Journal)

Miss Mayme Kanary, town health officer for Osgood hs opened a war all ponds have been olled but one on the pesky mosquito. She reports and it will be looked after. Oil will kill mosquitoes if it applied where they live. Tey live and hatch wherever there is stagant water. This may be in a pond or tin can and the health officer can not take her time to look up all the old tin cans in town but each property owner or resident can do so and upset all vessels of any kind that contain water that is exposed. This must be done after every rain and if done, the mosquito will be come very scarce.

It is said that the mosquito does not travel very far, so if people are bothered with them they have not very far to look for the source of the trouble. Keep all ponds and pools olled and keep alleys free of tin cans or other receptacles containing water and the mosquito will not be much around.

Glad to Leave High Office

There is proof that Jefferson was not reluctant to relinquish the office of President. On this subject he wrote to his friend, Dupont de Nemours: "Never did a prisoner, released from his chains, feel such relief as I shall on shaking off the shackles of power."

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

THE THREE D'S

There have been many serious conferences in this year of tough business, and recently I attended one of them.

The problem was whether a certain industry, which was encountering difficulties, could be kept going. Three men spoke; their remarks were about as follows:

First Man: Conditions are much wose than anybody is willing to admit. Car loadings are off; steel production is flat; the automobile industry is on its back; every business barometer points down. You can argue that the country has faced the same situation before and has come through. But this is different. Now America is a world power, depending on the world markets. When ever you look in the world you see nothing but trouble. I think any enterprise which is losing money ought to be stopped. We are justified in taking chances.

Second Man: I wouldn't go as far as the first speaker. Things are undeniably bad and may get worse, but I do not think we are justified in assuming that the world is going busted. What we need is plenty of time to get all the facts and talk them over and be sure we are right. I suggest we appoint a committee and then we can meet again in a couple of weeks and have another conference.

Third Man: I disagree with every thing that has been said. This depression isn't different from a hundred others that have preceded it. Always people lose hope just when the turn is about to come. Always it is argued that "conditions this time are different." I do not see that we shall gain anything by appointing committees or delaying. What we need is not more facts but more guts. I am in favor of going to work right now to pull this business through.

Men divide themselves into different classifications which are called by various names. There are the optimists who are consistently hopeful and the pessimists who always fear the worst.

The are what the psychologists term the "introverts," those whose eyes are turned inward, the broodders, the hypocondriacs, the mystics; and the "extraverts," whose vision is outward and forward.

In good days it is not so easy to distinguish, but these past few months have been a testing time. They have divided all men into three great groups:

The Debaters—who say it can't be done.

The Debaters—who say, let us appoint a commission and adjourn until another time.

The Doers—who say, let us pick out the toughest problems and hit it first.

Eeach of us falles into one of the other of these three groups. In which one are you?

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

THE EVIDENCE

My readers may possibly wonder why I am so frequently denouncing the six o'clock dinner; this; when so many of our formost citizens indulge the feast as a sort of triumph of civilization.

(1) From a study of aged men and women, I find the longest lived to be those who are hearty breakfast-eaters, and who do not load the digestive tract at the evening meal.

(2) From a study of vital statistics I find that six o'clock dinner devotees succumb to "heart disease" or cerebral hemorrhage, never later than the middle sixties. These are city dwellers who are too busy to eat necessary meals until the day's business is done.

(3) If I were to inject the expressive juice of the average six o'clock dinner into a patients veins, I feel sure that I would kill him instantly! Well—the six o'clock glutton gets those juices into his veins more slowly, hence he slower about dying of "heart disease" than he'd be with intravenous injection.

(4) The tired body—the tired, half-exhausted nerveous system cannot supply the necessary gastric and pancreatic fluids to digest a heavy six o'clock feed; hence the juices of the "gorge" are taken into the system by absorption, and in a shape that cannot be utilized in the repair of bodily tire—not all, nor half of it can be said to be fit.

(5) Hence, it is carried with the blood-current, an active poison, unfit for the human systemic repair. Hence the eater does not want breakfast next morning—has a feeble appitite at noon—but is ready for a disappointing over-feed at the following six o'clock. The very arteries of the heart become poisoned slowly. The vessels of the brain give way in their walls. Short breath and apoplectic symptons develop slowly, insidiously. They finally kill.

(6) Any thinking physician, if he will observe carefully, cannot fail to agree with me. Lastly, if I want to have a groggy, heavy, indolent feeling tomorrow, I will stuff my carcass with a six o'clock dinner tonight, at the church dinner that I am billed to attend.

Washington Snap Shots

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

President Hoover's speech at Indianapolis is being appraised in Washington as not only defining the issues which the Republican party will put forward in the Presidential campaign in 1932, but as outlining the course he will pursue for the rest of his administration.

Particularly interesting to Washington observers is the interpretation place on that portion of the President's remarks which dealt with the economic self-sufficiency of the United States. A widespread opinion here is that he was laying down a doctrine of America for Americans, to put in a bad way. The belief is held that he intended to convey the idea that with a constant increase in population, the country could be virtually independent of the rest of the world in the sense that its people would absorb most of its industrial and agricultural output.

This is regarded as fitting with the President's insistance that high wages and an increased standard of living are the materials composing the corner-stone of a prosperous economic structure.

Washington banks have the largest cash reserves in their history, total dollar volume of private construction permits issued in the first five months of 1931 exceeded those during the same period last year, automobile sales are far ahead of other cities, while department store trade and other business has more than held its own so far in 1931, the president of the District Bankers' Association, told more than 200 delegates at the opening of the Association's thirteenth annual convention.

The zero hour for the biggest sustained offensive in prohibition history against leaders of the illicit liquor industry has been set for July 15 by Federal officials. Exactly 15 days before that date, Prohibition Director Woodcock said, a corps of 350 new dry agents will be concentrated in a dozen cities spread from coast to coast for an intensive two-week training course. Added to the present force of more the 1,500 to make it the biggest and best trained Federal dry army in history, he said, they will be instructed specifically to concentrate on the large-scale commercial violators and the higher-ups of the liquor gangs, leaving the speakeasy and small-time bootlegger pricipally to local enforcement.

When on July 1 it ceases to exist, the Wickersham Commission expects to have placed in the President's hands eight reports on national crime conditions, to supplement the four already submitted. Mr. Hoover has appointed thirty more commissions,but this is the one which will be best remembered. In three of its reports already made there was much valueable material, and in the next to come there will undoubtedly be more. But the commission will be chiefly famous for its document on prohibition, and for the confusion and controversy which followed the sending of that report to the President January 5, 1931.

In his speech at Indianapolis President Hoover touched, among other things, upon the demands for a "plan" for the future development of United States. The idea has been broached a number of times recently and has arisen, no doubt, out of the Soviet Five-Year Plan. Usually it is based upon the necessity for combating Soviet competition, the rallying cry being that "you can't beat a plan without a plan." Some of them have been broader in nature, as, for example, the proposal made by Mr. Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federation of Labor.

Mr. Woll's suggestions are comprehensive. He favors a determination of the needs of the country in commodities and services for the next ten years, with special reference to labor—based upon the six-hour day and five-day week—to credit, to distribution, to raw materials and the apportionment of them in accordance with a balanced program. He advocates legislation to remove obstacles to such a plan. But more than this, he recommends an industerial congress which would "legislate" for industry, composed, not of individuals as such, but of representatives of the various phases of American industrial life. Mr Woll is convinced that this is the only democratic way to attack the problem, and that if industry does not act itself, the Federal Government will be compelled to step in.

The more the position of Messrs. Smith and Raskob in relation to Governor Roosevelt's Presidental prospects is studied, the more interesting it is. Most politicans take it for granted they want to block him, prefer some one else. This may not be true but there is pretty good basis for the idea, and it is widely entertained. While no one can cite a public word from Mr. Smith indicating Roosevelt hostility, his refusal upon several occasions to say an approving word has been rather marked. It is more significent, however, the close personal friends of Mr. Smith in New Yory, the men —and women— of whom he sees most, are unmistakably not for the Roosevelt nomination. There is no doubt about them.

If a bumper farm crop in America augurs recovery from the depression as some sources both here and abroad are inclined to believe, then prospects are indeed rosy. Figures just published by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics indicate that farm crops as a whole, and wheat in particular, promise a 1931 harvest well in excess of last year's yield; wheat, in fact, looks so healthy that there is every probability of the surplus in this country being doubled before next fall.

Just why a bumper crop and resultant low prices should be expected to lift the world from its slump is hard to explain, even for those who believe in it. There is the possibility of reasoning conversely from the very evident fact that a crop failure would be disastrous, but the more logical reasoning seems to be that the very presence of plenty—the sight of bulging granaries and elevators-Will inspire new confidence. And there is the thoroughly patent fact that good crops will provide work in the harvest fields and income for the growers; on the other hand, there is the equally obvious fact the 1,000,000 bushels of wheat at fifty cents a bushel is worth less to the growers than 500,000 bushels at $1 a bushel for the 1,000,000 bushels may cost twice as much to produce.

Postmen, who do more walking in a day than the average person does in a week, have been called upon to demonstrate to the Department of Agriculture the relative merits of two methods of tanning shoe leather. Chemists desired to compare hides tanned by the vegetable and the chrome retan processes. The mates of a pair of shoes each carried a sole of the different tanning. Washington postmen were furnished with these shoes and after a thorough test the chrome-tanned soles showed considerably less wear, but in rainy weather they became water soaked and slippery where the vegetable-tanned did not.

And speaking of bandwagons and candidates the Democrats are pushing into the driver's seat one Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York, who will make formidable timber and a man difficult to defeat. David Lawrence, Washington correspondent, sees just one handicap under which the Roosevelt boom is launched and the is it is too early too start. He says, however, Hoover started more than a year before the election in 1928. Hoover started much earlier than that. He tried to run as a Democrat in 1924. But that's enough of him. Adherents of Roosevelt feel that he can be depended upon to carry New York and eastern states and have a fair chance with the progressives. In the south, they argue, he is acceptable to the voters on the prohibition issue. While he does not favor prohibition he is not for repeal of the 18th amendment. His ideas of the problem are in line with those of the late Woodrow Wilson and what ever his stand he cannot be classed as a pussyfooter. But the country may want a pussy-footer, again who knows?

TO THE VOTERS OF THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY

Of the 62nd. Representative District of Ky. Having been solicited from almost every Precinct in the district to make the race for Representative, I have consented to enter the campaign.

I shall endeavor to outline some Legislation that I am very much in favor of seeing enacted into laws: First, I am in favor of a tax placed on the product of coal, sufficient to reduce the tax on real estate and especially on farm lands to the extent of about 30 per cent., which would mean about 10 cents on the ton of coal mined in the state each year.

It is the greatest source of wealth that the state has, and is being taken out of the state by Eastern Capitalist, without paying one penny of revenue to the state.

Second I am in favor of passing an amendment to the Constitution giving the people the right to vote on the state doing the public printing, instead of letting it out to the lowest bidder as the Constitution now provides. I favor a printing establishment being located at the college, and save the State the use of trailers being used on State University, which will give the young men and girls an opportunity to work their way through lots of money each year. I believe that the text books can be printed and given to the schools under this system at a very small additional cost above the present cost of the public printing.

Third, to pass a law prohibiting the use of trailers being use on any truck, hauling freight on the highways of Kentucky and to limit the length of trucks to a length of 35 feet from the front of the motor to the rear end of the truck.

Fourth, I am in favor of passing a law reducing the present Highway Commission from 8 to 4 members, notwithstanding, it took almost all of last session pass this law I am opposed to any one man politican making laws to suit his own conveniences at the expense of tax payers.

My past record in the legislature will show that I have always voted for what I considered the best interest of the taxpayer, the interest of the farmers, shall be my first consideration.

I have always stood for the rights of the people in question, not only from a political point of view, but from a business standpoint. I want to say to the Democrats, that your party interest will be just as safe in my keeping as it will be in the hands of any other man. I shall always vote with my party on all questions so long as it doesn't conflict with my oath of office or the interest of the taxpayer.

The farmers must have some relief from this burdon of taxation, and that is to demand your rights as other business men do. Forget you are a Democrat or Republican, as the business people do and demand your rights and you will get recognition.

As long as you let the politician dictate the laws you are to live under, just that long you are going to bear the burden. It is costing too much to collect the taxes and I think there can be some legislation passed that will relieve this situation. We must cut down the county expense.

If the voters can see their way clear to support me, I shall give you the best there is in me.

Respectfully,
C. W. BURTON.

SAYS BEAN BEETLES CAN BE CONTROLLED

Dr. W. A. Price, state entomologist at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky, says the Mexican bean beetle can be controlled if thorough and timely spraying or dusting is done. The fight should begin as soon as beetles or signs of their injury are seen. The poison should be put on the underside of the leaves, which means sprayers or dusters with upturned nozzles must be used.

If a spray is desired, use magnesium arsenate at the rate of a pound to 50 gallons of water; or an ounce or 5 level tablespoonfuls to three gallons of water. One gallon will cover 125 feet of row and 100 gallons an acre.

As a dust, use one pound of calcium arsenate and 7 pounds of hydrated lime; or a pound of calcium arsenate, a pound of sulfur and 4 pounds of hydrated lime. Mix well and apply at the rate of a pound to 500 feet of row or 20 to 25 pounds to the acre. Apply dust only when plants are dry.

Spray or dust two or three times, at intervals of week or 10 days. Snap beans should be sprayed after the pods have set.

From Our Early Files

FIFTY YEARS AGO
Local Happenings

James Rogers of Belleview precint has one hundred acres of good wheat. Jim always raises large crops.

The nut worms have been giving tobacco growers considerable trouble this spring. There are plenty of plants for re-planting.

W. J. Rice is the most popular barn builder in the county, if the number of these buildings erected by him is anything by which to judge.

The auditor's deputy agent at this place, H. J. Foster, has taken the preliminary steps for moving against the Boone County Distillery Company, at Petersburg, for failure to list all its whisky for taxation. The case will be watched with considerable interest.

Dr. L. C. Cowen, East Bend's popular physician, and wife attended the picnic Saturday and remained over at his father's for Sunday.

A stranger to this part of the state was in Burlington a few days since and, calling at our office, remarked that he was greatly surprised to find the town as small as it is. He had been reading the Recorder for two or three years and had expected to find its home a place of at least 1,500 inhabitants. We are sorry that he was disapointed. The Recorder has never made any unwarranted statements as to the size of the town, but its get up being equal to that of much more pretentious places led the gentleman into an erroneous idea as to Burlington's dimensions.

Beaver Lick

The fish fry at Big Bone springs last Tuesday week was a failure, owing to an unexpected rise in the river which carried away all fish boxes containing the fish that had been engaged for the occasion.

Florence X-Roads

Dut Tanner sold to Ben Easton, of Covington, his fine buggy horse for $250.00 last week.

Petersburg

Elihu Alden, who can clerk, pilot, engineer and captain a steamer, or in other words is a whole crew in him self, wants to establish a landing for the Minnie at Covington since the Burlington picnic. The scheme, it is thought, was concocted at said picnic.

J. Frank Grant has been investing in more real estate in this city. The general opinion is that Frank's purse has a healthy growth, the result of strict attention to business.

Plattsburg

Uncle Bob Mosby has sold his farm to Johnnie Terrill for fourteen thousand dollars. Uncle Bob will move with Mr. Tom Stewart to Switzerland county, Indiana, this fall. In their departure this part of the county looses two of its very best citizens.

George Gibbs killed a snake the other day about three feet long, which had two large and well developed feet. It was quite a curiosity.

What is the use of having a law unless it is enforced. There is a party of men and boys around here that seine the creek nearly every day. Now if they were brought to justice and each one fined about $20.00 it would stop for a while anyway. Watch out boys, the grand jury sits again this fall.

Croquet is all the go in Burlington. At any hour of the day you can see three games in progress at one time.

J. C. Revill's weather ledger shows that rain has been falling at some time during the 24 hours of each day of this month up to and including Sunday.

There is no excuse for idleness now Everybody who desires can get work, as harvest is at hand, and the corn and tobacco crops need much work. The weeds have lost no time and many corn fields are in bad condition.

They had a cloud burst over near Garrison last Saturday. Plowed land was badly washed while fencing was torn out and washed away. The creek that empties into the river at Lawrenceburg Ferry was higher than ever before.

The Limaburg and Anderson Ferry pike is a go. A call has been made upon the subscribers for twenty per cent of the amount of their subscription. One by one the principal roads in this county are being piked and every road piked makes it easier to raise funds for some other. Keep the good work up Boone county is able to pike all her principal roads.

Notwithstanding the damp weather last Saturday, between 1,500 and 1,000 people attended the picnic given at Parlor Grove by the K. of P. Lodge at Petersburg. The boat that left Rising Sun conveyed a very large crowd from the towns along the river, while many came from the country in buggies and wagons. The picnic was a success in every particular.

Croquet Etiquette

Don't play bareheaded, especially if you are bald, for the sun will scorch your scalp.

Don't use profane language when you miss a ball or wicket.

Don't express sympthy for your opponent before the game is out, for you may be the one entitled to sympathy at the close.

Don't depend on your partner putting you through half the wickets. Rather not make them at all.

Say but little think a great deal and play for more than is in sight.

Last Wednesday Deputy Sheriff Roberts, of Verona, arrested a man by the name of Cash on a warrent from Pendleton county, charged with bastardy. Mr. Roberts brought his prisoner before Judge Baker and there being some doubt about the law authorizing him being lodged in jail until he could be taken to Pendleton county, Cash was placed in charge of Tim Westbay as a guard. About night Cash went with Tim to the pasture after his cow, when he took a notion to circulate. Although Westbay entered a protest, he made a start, then when Tim gathered him by the collar and a lively little tussle ensued, but Cash found that he was fooling with the wrong man, and surrendered. When Sheriff Beall reached home that night he took charge of the prisoner and the next day Deputy Sheriff German took him to Falmouth and delivered him to authorities there.

J. D. Norris, of Petersburg, was a guest of Judge Riddell last Friday.

Marce Riddell attended the Rainbow Fete at Walton last Saturday evening. He reports a delightful time and the festival a great financial success.

Losses of Wild Birds

Measure For Health Can

Many settlers along the Atlantic coast found huge flocks of the heath hen—in size and appearance much like the western prairie chicken—frequenting the sandy scrub oak plains of Massachusetts, Connecticut, Long Island, New York and other coastal areas from Maine to Virginia.

The Cavaliers discovered that the heath hen was excellent for roasting on a spit before the huge fireplaces. The poet helped Roger Williams and his followers through their first hard winters in Rhode Island. Pilgrims who hunted turkey or wild deer without success brought home heath hens for Thanksgiving. Thomas Morton wrote in 1637 that the bird is much "like our pheysant beone of England of excellent flesh and delicate meat."

The heath hen, however, was the pot hunter's prey. It flew in a straight line and rather slowly on flushing and it had an unfortunate habit of congregating in large flocks in open spaces.

It was extinct on the mainland as early as the Civil war, but still flourished on islands. Bird lovers called attention from time to time to the fact it was dwindling, and in 1925 there was a heath hen conference in New England in an effort to save the pinnated fowl. Thousands of dollars and much time and effort were expended, but it was the old story of priming the pump after the house burned down.

Grateful and Beautiful Tribute to Loved Wife

Those who report the inscriptions in old burying grounds do so ordinarily to call attention to what is quaint, untutored and bizarre. A different quest in these days might have as its object the discovery of inscriptions which testify, with simple sincerity, to long lives of joint happiness. The present-day world benefits by every reminder that there were such and always are.

Perhaps in all New England there is no more graceful tribute to a grateful devotion than that upon a headstone, placed not so many years ago, in the old Grove Street cemetery in New Haven. It was placed there at the grave of his wife by a physician whose high skill and learning were long in the service of the community and of the Yale Medical school, whose courtesy and graciousness became a tradition and who bore worthily a great name, Francis Bacon. Below her name and the fact that she was his wife, he added: "For forty years the crown of his felicity."—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

Football in America

The first football players in America were the "Oneidas," a football club in Boston, the first organization of its kind in this country and the predecessor of modern college football, says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. According to an inscription on a monument in that city the "Oneidas" played all comers from 1862 to 1865, and never tasted defeat nor had their goal line crossed.

American colleges had their football during that period. The first intercollegiate game was played between Princeton and Rutgers on November 6, 1869, the latter having 26 men on the field to the former's 21. But the first real development of the modern game came in 1906 when at a meeting of the American intercollegiate football rules committee the forward pass was introduced.

Up-to-Date Youngster

A new nurse was engaged in the household of one of our most advanced doctors, and the first night, toward eight o'clock, she settled down with a book of fairy stories to read the doctor's daughter to sleep.

The child, aged six and very "modern," listened placidly through "Peter Piper," dozed over "The Old Woman Who Lived in a Shoe," and seemed to be sound asleep during the reading of "Jack and Jill," until suddenly, at the end of the poem, she started wide awake again. The poem ends, you will remember, with something about "tum-tum-tum, and Jack mended his crown with vinegar and brown paper."

"Why, isn't that awful?" cried the child, gazing horror-stricken at the nurse. "Didn't he even have an X-ray taken?"

Ashburton Treaty

The Ashburton treaty was negotiated between Great Britain and the United States in 1842 settling the international boundary between Maine and Canada. Lord Ashburton acting for Great Britain and Daniel Webster for the United States. Of the territory in dispute the United States received about seven-twelfths and Canada five-twelfths. The same treaty provided for the boundary of the St. Mary's river near Sault Ste. Marie and to the Lake of the Woods; for the suppression of the slave trade and for the extradition of criminals.

The Proper Comeback

A prominent English woman who recently visited us expressed her bewilderment with regard to the correct reply to the customary American greeting, "Pleased to meet you." No doubt there is a fitting response, if one could only think of it. Of course one might follow the lead of the old duke of Beaufort. An American gripped the duke warmly by the hand and said, "Pleased to meet you."

"And so you should be," returned the aged peer, crisply.—Boston Transcript.

Mills Once Centers of Community Social Life

"Quilting days" are revealed in an article in the Arcadian Magazine:

"Two or three generations ago, the mill was a vigorous community center, the popular meeting place for all classes and conditions of men. It was no uncommon thing to ride 50 miles to mill and camp two or three days while waiting a turn. The burrs ground slowly and quite often the output did not exceed two or three bushels an hour. This gave opportunity for amusement and social contacts. It was a great place to play marbles, pitch horseshoes, to play rustic pranks, swap news, stories and jackknives. Sometimes there were fights, for hill blood is fighting blood, but, for the most part, the men fought fair.

"At midnight on Saturday night the watergate was closed and not opened until the following Monday morning. The closed gate formed an excellent fish trap and often the catch was good. It was the custom at one mill to auction off the fish that might be caught over the Sabbath to the highest bidder. The auction was held on Saturday afternoon before the gate was closed and if no fish happened to get in, the successful bidder paid just the same.

"Sometimes the mill floor was used for the dance when the day's work was done. Or if no fiddlers were present, the young folks stepped to the tune of 'Buffalo Girls' or 'Old Dan Tucker,' singing as they danced. Many an old mill was the scene of this beautiful custom that has today lost out in competition with the modern dance."—Detroit News.

Kyritz, ancient city in the northwest part of Brandenburg province, has a Thanksgiving celebration which is different.

Every year on the last Monday in February each citizen who attends the traditional morning church services receives a loaf of bread in memory of the defense of the city against destruction by the duke of Mecklenburg and the repulse of Mecklenburg's riders.

The feud between Mecklenburg, and the nobility of Prignitz, of which Kyritz is the capital, began in 1331. Mecklenburg's chief lieutenant, Von Bassewitz, made two unsuccessful attempts to capture the city. He was killed in the last one when he tried to enter the city by tunneling under the walls to the church, whence he planned to attack.

His calculations miscarried, however, and the tunnel ended in the market place, where the burghers promptly slew him and all his men.

The Glory That Was Rome"

On the heights above Monte Carlo stands, as it has already stood for centuries, La Turbie, the crumbling ruin of one of Rome's greatest and finest towers. It has stood by the wayside for more than 20 centuries, and seen the Greeks, the Romans, the Alpine tribes, the Goths and the Moors fight beneath it. So massive is it that Marshal Berwick, son of James II of England, failed to destroy it with his gunpowder. Tales tell us it was a most glittering sight in the days of Augustine—built of polished granite and Luna marble, dominating the sea like a Roman guard far from Rome. It had its doric colonnade, its fluted tower, also doric and on the sides of La Turbie were engraved the names of the tribes it had seen fall before Rome's power.

Origin of "Fore" Obscure

The origin of "Fore!" is veiled in antiquity, says an article in the New York Times. No satisfactory explanation can be found as to the time and method of its entrance as an accepted expression in "the Royal and Ancient Game of Golf," which received its first notice as a trouble maker in the Scotland of 1457. "Fyre!" is defined in Jamison's Scottish dictionary, published in 1820, as "a cry of golfers to persons standing or moving in the way of the ball." Probably, according to present-day authorities, the word began as "Before!" and, with proper Scottish regard for economy, was shortened to its present form.

"Milk Snakes" Myth

The United States biological survey has stated with regard to the silly belief that snakes can suck milk from a cow: "Anyone who has ever milked a cow knows that the suction required to obtain a flow of milk is much greater than could be exerted by any snake. Furthermore, a snake has two rows of sharp recurved teeth in the upper jaw. If the mouth of the milk snake were closed to permit suction, the teeth would sink into the teat and the snake would find itself fully occupied in efforts to avoid injury by the cow."—Detroit News.

Earth's Existence Timed

According to the Epistle of Barnabas, the life of the earth will be divided 2,000 years between the creation and the fall and the declaration of the promise of redemption through the prophets, 2,000 from the prophetic era to the era of redemption or Christian era, 2,000 of the Christian and preparatory era to the beginning of the millennium of 1,000 years of rest, after which will come the final judgment and the destruction or reorganization of the present earth

PECULIAR WEATHER IN GRANT COUNTY

(Grant County News)

While farmers in the extreme northern section of Grant county were complaining of too much rain the first of the week, other farmers in the southern half of the county were threatened witha drouth.

The rain fall was excessive in the northern part and the land was badly washed on some of the steeper slopes by a terrific rainfall Friday of last week. This was followed by more showers Saturday, Sunday and Monday. The rainfall was heavy from Dry Ridge north to the Ohio River.

In sections of Northern Grant county, parts of Boone and Kenton counties, a heavy hail accompanied the rain and considerable damage was reported. A large part of the tobacco crop was transplanted in the southern half of the county, but the amount transplanted in to Wednesday with no rain in the southern half was negligible up sight.

The office of the Weather Bureau at Lexington Wednesday reported a shortage in rainfall since the first of January amounting to 8.16 inches, which indicates that the Blue Grass counties are pretty dry. However, as most of the tobacco in that section is transplanted with machine setters, a full crop may be expected.

H. C. Brown, farm agent for Fulton county, made the following report: "Alfalfa is doing better than any other crop in the county. One fine cutting has been made from old seedings, and another cutting will be ready June 15. Most of the hay is being baled direct from the windrow, this giving a maximum saving of labor and costs. Alfalfa is increasing rapidly, and will continue to increase with the decrease in cotton growing."

Breakfast "in a Jiffy" Starts the Day Right

By JOSEPHINE P. GIBSON
Director, Home Economics Dept.,
H. J. Heinz Company

WELL balanced, nourishing breakfasts are essential on these cold winter mornings for those who wish to be at their highest efficiency for the day's work. This meal follows the period of longest fast, and precedes the hours when the best work of the day is accomplished. It is foolish, therefore, to try to drive inadequately nourished bodies through a busy morning.

We all know this, yet we are likely to neglect breakfast to a much greater extent than either of the other meals. The hurry of getting off to work or school in the morning leaves little time for preparing or serving breakfast, and all too often menus are allowed to slip into a rut and become uninteresting.

It is easy, however, to serve a hot, nourishing breakfast without spending much time in preparation. Have it simple enough to be eaten quickly, and varied enough to be interesting. This is not nearly so difficult as it might seem at first glance.

Fruit, fruit juice, or the modern, popular Tomato Juice cocktails should begin every breakfast. These are not only welcome appetizers, but are healthful and necessary, and require no preparation. During the winter months, a cooked cereal with a generous supply of rich milk is ideal. Fruit or Tomato Juice cocktails and cereal make a nourishing breakfast, but for those who want a heavier meal, buttered toast with Currant or Grape Jelly and crisp bacon can be added to the menu with scarcely a moment's preparation.

The following well balanced breakfasts can be prepared in only fifteen minutes. Surely all of us can spare that much time for this important meal!

Grapefruit
Rice Flakes with Top Milk
Bacon with Fried Apple Rings
Toast
Coffee

Tomato Juice
Breakfast Wheat with Top Milk
Buttered Toast
Currant or Grape Jelly
Coffee

Sliced Bananas with Cream
Fried Breakfast Wheat with Maple Syrup
Crisp Bacon
Coffee

Orange Juice
Pancakes Syrup
Pure Apple Butter
Coffee

Grapejuice or Tomato Juice
Bacon Waffles
(Batter prepared the evening before and kept in a cool place)
Syrup Coffee

Bacon with Fried Apple Rings: Core but do not peel apples, and cut in slices about ⅓ inch thick. Fry in the skillet beside the bacon, and while cooking, sprinkle with granulated sugar. The apples will be tender in about five minutes. Serve the bacon on a platter and surround with the apple rings.

Fried Breakfast Wheat: Allow cooked breakfast wheat to set over night in a greased loaf pan. Next morning cut in slices about ¼ inch thick. Brown the slices delicately in butter, and serve with maple syrup.

Pancakes: 1 cup self-rising pancake flour; 1 cup Rice Flakes; 1½ cups milk.

Fry on a hot griddle and serve with butter and maple syrup, or with pure apple butter.

Bacon Waffles: breakfast Wheat; 3 teaspoons baking powder; ¾ teaspoon salt; 1 tablespoon sugar; 2 egg yolks; 1¼ cups milk; 2 tablespoons melted butter; 2 egg whites; uncooked bacon.

Sift together the flour, breakfast wheat, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add egg yolks beaten and combined with milk. Then add melted butter and fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour a small amount of the batter on a heated waffle iron, place a slice of bacon on top, and bake like ordinary waffles.

MILLIONS HEARD OLD BUTLER BELL

(Falmouth Outlook)

Many citizens of Pendleton County tuned in last Friday afternoon and heard the sweet tones of the old Butler Methodist Church bell on the nation-wide-hook-up at Harrodsburg. The bell is placed in the belfry of the Lincoln Marriage Shrine and was rung that day to announce the wedding of Thomas Lincoln to Nancy Hanks, which took place in Washington County. This wedding was reenacted that day in the presence of notables from all over the United States. This bell was heard by millions of people from Maine to California.

The citizens of Butler were especially interested in the service at Harrodsburg and they were rewarded by hearing the old bell that had not rung for sixty years. There were a number of Pendleton County citizens who attended the dedication of the marriage shrine at Harrodsburg and saw the old bell hanging in the belfry. A rope is attached to the bell and it is rung in the same fashon as when it summoned the members of the old Union Church in Butler.

ERNEST ALEXANDER BRINGS IN CRESCENT SHAPED EGG

(Trimble Democrat)

There are curiosities and curiosities. We have seen more curiosities in the egg line this spring and summer than ever before. There have been little eggs and big eggs, but never in the history of this paper has there an egg been brought to this office the shape of the one which Ernest Alexander carried in the other day.

Mr. Alexander lives on A. D. Tingle's place, east of Bedford, and with his wife owns some hens with a record for laying eggs. To make a short story long, this egg is the shape of a quarter moon. Such a specimen of hen fruit was never seen or heard of before, so far as extends our information of the Encyclopedia Americana. If such an egg had been in existence newspapers would have been full of its decription up to this good hour. We have heard of quarter moons, honeymoons, moneymoons, and moonshine but this is the first egg shaped like a quarter moon. If we should paint this egg in different colors and place it in the window, some passerby might mistake it for the rainbow.

Radio Romeo, Juliet

JULIA SANDERSON and Frank Crumit, in one of their best remembered stage poses. It was in such a balcony as this, not unlike the famed balcony in Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet", that Frank first sang "Sweet Lady" to Julia, in the musical comedy "Tangerine." That was the beginning of the team of Crumit-Sanderson. Now they're perhaps the best known team in radio, starting twice weekly on the Blackstone Plantation Program. During the summer months they will feature such famous songs by Crumit as "The Gay Caballero", and "Sweet Lady", the latter which he wrote, incidentally, in honor of the merry Julia.

NEXT AUDITOR HERE

(Danville Advocate)

Hon. Dan Talbot, of Bardstown who was recently nominated for State Auditor by the Democrats in Lexington, was in Danville today mingling with party leaders and friends. Mr. Talbot was en route to Crab Orchard Spring Hotel, where he will meet with the State Pharmeceutal Association, which is in session there for three days. He is one of the leading druggists in Kentucky and has taken an active part in civic affairs in Nelson county for many years, where he is regarded as one of the best business men of his section of the State. While here he paid his respects to Miss Sara Mahan, who was also nominated on the same ticket with him for the office of Secretary of State. Mr. Talbot told a representative of The Advocate that he had traveled in many counties since being nominated and that he had not found any dissatisfaction with the State ticket.

572 BOYS AND GIRLS FROM 90 COUNTIES ATTEND JUNIOR WEEK

The 11th. annual Junior week at the University of Kentucky attracted 572 Junior agricultural club members from 90 counties, representing the outstanding individuals among the 22,000 farm boys and and girls enrolled in 4-H clubs in the state.

Classes in livestock judging and other phases of farming, and in home-making, music, dramatics, and health; demonstrations of improved farm and home practices; a style show, health contest, the judging of baked and canned food; an address by Gov. Flem D. Sampson, a trip to Frankfort, lectures and moving pictures, comprised a large part of the program of the week.

Floyd county won the farm practice demonstration contest, in which 36 counties entered champion teams and Boyle county won the home practice contest in which 30 counties competed. Among the practice demonstrations were seed corn testing, soil testing, mixing fertilizers, culling poultry, candling eggs, producing good milk, roadside marketing, fertilizing tobacco, care of the sick, furnishing rooms, care of cloths, laundering, buying shoes, school lunches and care of the feet.

Mary Sue Ball, Campbell County, Won the style show and will enter a national show in Chicago. Clyde Burnett, Wayne county, and Martha Gray, Harrison County, won the health contest and will represent Kentucky in a national contest. Mary Lou Hay, Green county, in judging baked foods. Both will receive trips to Chicago.

Gov. Flem D. Sampson, following his annual address at Junior Week, commissioned Miss Mildred Young, Simpson county, and Conrad Fultner, Laurel county, colonels. Gov. Sampson was made an honorary member of the Kentucky Association of 4-H Clubs.

The Junior club members and their county and home agents and volunteer leaders went by special train to Frankfort, where they saw the old and new capitols and were received by Gov. Sampson.

George Krutz, Garrard county, is the new president of the state of 4-H Clubs; Herbert Finn, Simpson county, is vice-president, and Helen Morgan, Laurel county, is secretary.

Six hundred dollars in cash prizes were divided among the county demonstration teams while trips to Chicago, cups, ribbons and other prizes were awarded during the week.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of W. H. A. S. the week of June 29. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

Rheumatism So Bad He Walked the Floor in Agony

"Karnak has done me such a wonderful amount of good that I believe every rheumatic sufferer should give it a trial.

"No one will ever know the tortures I have gone through with rheumatism during the past three years. I ached all over. At nights the pains were so great that I walked the floor, and I've gotten out in the middle of the night to go to the doctor for a hypodermic I tried every thing in an effort to get relief. Even serum treatments failed to help me. My relief finally came when a friend advised me to try Karnak. To my surprise this medicine went right to the roots of my trouble, and brought complete relief. Every ache and pain has disappeared, and I am now in condition to resume active duties once more, thanks to Karnak."

"Depression" Time Is Being Over-Played, States Writer

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Isn't it about time for us to awaken to the fact that this tune we call "depression" has been overplayed far beyond the stage of safety? Go where you will, you will get an earful of depression, depression, depression; unemployment, unemployment, unemployment; unrest, unrest, unrest. And you will note the consequent lack of interest in the work at hand. From the lowest to the highest station the same lament is crooned. We get up to the tune of it, eat to the tune of it, wear our clothes to the tune of it, employ our help to the tune of it, carry on our conversations to the tune of it.

Of course there is unemployment There always has been and there always will be unemployment. Possibly the percentage of unemployment at this time is in excess of the normal. But if you cut those who never have worked and never will work, and those who never have been and never will be able to hold a job, and then subtract from the remainder those who once worked for fifteen dollars a day and now won't work for less, and those who have been for a time in the white collar class will not wear overalls, a large part of that "excess" will have been accounted for.

There is a growing suspicion that "depression," more than anything else, is a smoke-screen to cover our own desires for something different from which we have had. When in the history of mankind could one find so much real luxury and such scattered luxury? Many of the supposedly poorest of families have some sort of motor vehicle, a radio, telephone, insurance, and in many of cases electric refrigeration, while not so many generations ago they were kept busy making the cloth with which to clothe themselves. Modern machinations have given us more time for recreation, and have also served to make necessities of what once were purely visionary extravagances.

Most of us have too much time to think—and envy. Inventive skill has given us ease and opportunity to note what is growing in our neighbor's garden. The habit of reading anything outside of the newspapers seems to have gone out of fashon, but you will find the book-stores full of buyers of first editions at unheard-of prices. How many are so "depressed" as to lack opportunity to "turn on the radio" and listen to selective entertainment broadcast from thousands of stations all over the world? Try to see one of the major baseball games try to see a good play or movie; try driving your car through the downtown section; try your favorite sport golf, tennis, boating, horseback riding, horse and motor races, afternoon tea or after-theater supper, and what do you find? Every place crowded, money lavishly spent, and interminable conversation about depression.

What do we mean by "depression," anyway? Consider the railroad industry, for instance. Traffic managers are crying because the busses and trucks are seriously curtailing their business. Motor transportation companies are beginning to cry because the airplanes are encroaching upon their preserves. And all three of these agencies are inclined to be peevish because, especially during the summer months, the season of best travel, one citizen out of every seven owns his own motor car and sallies forth therein with his family to enjoy at will the scenery of these good old United States.

Thus it is that the railroads, the bus and truck companies, the airplane lines have to share abridged prpfits not so long ago monopolized by the railroads—for neither the bicycle nor the horse ever provided real competition. Of course the railroads, and all dependent upon them, are "depressed." But who should of course be permitted to stand in the way of progress? Advent of the sewing machine threw thousands of worthy and needy seamstresses out of employment, but the sewing machine had to come. Mechanical refrigeration its hard on the ice-man. Installation of slot-machines in New York's subway stations made thousands of "ticket-choppers" look for new jobs Dial telephones reduce the number of operatives at central stations. Progress leaves scars, but we must progress—grow up, if you please—and inevitably comes forth the cry from the parent it has to pass on. What is one mans meat is another man's poison.

Taking the building trades, for example. Urbanites, to a large extent, are moving into smaller cooperative quarters. The same roof may cover 300 or more apartments or homes. Occupants have come to realise that in this system of living less time, energy and money need be spent for upkeep, with result that less materials are bought, less land required, and less labor hired—but there is more time for thinking, and brooding. It is progress—anything that saves time, energy and money is progress—but the talk is of depression. If the tenants were busy hoeing their gardens, they wouldn't talk. They say that real estate is at its lowest. Why wouldn't it be? Two to five hundred apartments built on the space once occupied by a single home. As a little girl once said, pointing to an ordinary apartment building, "My goodness! Just think! Every person in our town could live in that."

Is money scarce? That is to laugh. The Federal Treasury received subscriptions of over $6,000' 000,000 for a bond issue of $800,000, 000 with out a ripple on Wall Street. Uncle Sam asked for a mighty large loan and at a new low rate of interest but his nephews and nieces had been so well fed with the depression idea and the resultant fear for safety of their money-note that they had the money—that the bonds were as a balm to their frenzied thoughts.

Another thing: You will observe that the women, bless them, are not talking depression. Believe it or not, they spend most of the money men make. The beauty parlors are crowded—in many oases appointments must be made days in advance. The same is true with all other shops that cater to the better things for women, essentials and non-essentials. Doubtless that is just as the men would have it, so they give their better halves more money to spend and talk depression to their male associates. No confectioner, so far as advised has gone out of business, and new filling stations are going up over night.

So, when anyone begins to talk depression, just remember that all real progress must be made at the expense of a parent industry. Naturally the horse dealers howled about depression when the automobile was born. Oh! We're sick, all right, but the diagnosis was wrong. We are not suffering from depression. Readjustment is what's the matter with us—and readjustment spells progress.

MILK FOR EVERY MEAL

It is a good plan to use milk in the preparation or serving of some foods for every meal. For breakfast, cereals may be cooked with milk in a double boiler, eggs may be poached or baked in milk, or the cocoa may be prepared with milk.

There are numerous ways of using milg in the preperation of lunch and dinner such as creamed soups, creamed or scalloped vegetables and meats, souffles, puddings and ice creams. Miss Florence Imlay of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, offers the following recipes.

Scalloped Cabbage

2 cups cooked cabbage
1 cup medium white sauce
½ cup buttered crumbs

Cut the cabbage in small pieces and cook in boiling salted water 8 to 10 minutes. Drain and add the white sauce. Pour into baking dish and cover with buttered crumbs. Place in hot oven until crumbs are browned

White Sauce

2 tbsp. butter
3 tbsp. flour
⅛ tsp. salt
1 cup hot milk or milk and vegetable stock.

Melt the butter in the saucepan and add flour. Mix thoroly. Add the hot milk slowly. Cook until thick. Add the salt.

Baked Custard with Berries

2 cups hot milk
2 large or 3 small eggs.
⅛ tsp. salt
¼ cup sugar
½ tsp. vanilla or other flavoring
2 cups berries

Beat the slightly, add sugar, salt and hot milk. Pour into individual molds or into a large enough baking dish so that the custard will not be more than two inches thick. Set molds or baking dish into a pan of hot water and bake in a moderate oven until firm. Chill and serve with berries.

Barry Arnold, of Crittenden, was a visitor in Burlington Thursdy of last week.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Seven thousand bushels of soybean seed were raised in Knox county, the largest amount in the history of the county, it is believed.

The first cutting of alfalfa in Powell county averaged more than a ton to the acre. Many farmers cut their first crop, and are well pleased with the results.

Casey county orchards that were sprayed are almost free of blight, while unsprayed trees are severely affected.

Lee county 4-H club members have placed markers on many of the side roads, as a guide to strangers driving in the county.

Many Elliott county farmers are planning to raise good poultry as a permanant part of their farming. Several new modern poultry houses have been built new flocks of good birds stablished, and more culling done generally.

Seventy-one Estell county farmers have sowed from one to five acres of Korean lespedeza each. All kinds of land have been used to test this hay and pasture crop.

The Sandy Valley Grocery Company of Paintsville furnished trucks to take 70 juior club members to Junior Week from Johnson, Lawrence, Magoffin, Floyd, Pike and Boyd counties.

W. W. Thornsbury, a Boyd county farmer who spent $700 for dairy cattle feed last year, now has enough clover and soybeans growing to feed his herd next winter.

McCracken county strawberry growers reported increased yields and improved quality where fertilizers were used. One reported 100 percent increase in production.

MORE INTEREST IN POULTRY

In creased interest in poultry raising is reflected in the large prospective attendance at the annual poultry short course to be given at the University of Kentucky June 29—July 3. This is an intensive course dealing with the problems of practical poultry raising on the farm. It is open to all men and women interested in chickens. Prof. L. F. Payne of Kansas, one of the outstanding poultry authorities in the country, will be among the speakers. County Agent H. F. Patterson will tell about the development of poultry raising in Grayson county. The visitors will see the poultry plant at the Experiment Station, including the 30,000-egg electric incubator, and other modern equipment.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Kentucky's four colored agricultural extension agents will attend a special summer school for Negro extension workers at Petersburg Va. in August. They are A. C. Burnette, Lexington, who is in charge of Negro extension work in the state; J. H. Finch, colored farm agent in Warren county; H. A. Lane, agent in Madison county, and Runyon Story, agent in Christian county. The Department of Agriculture announces that the work done for Kentucky's colored farmers ranks among the best in the United States

R. O. Duncan and Son, Oldham county farmers, cut 30 Tons of alfalfa from 22 acres, at the first cutting. The field was sowed to alfalfa in the spring of 1930, following preparation in the previous fall when 225 tons of marl were applied to the land. Four hundred pounds of superphoshate were used at the seeding. This alfalfa withstood the drouth of last year, when 65 acres of orchard grass and clover perished

Tile drainage made it possible for Walter Badgett, a Washington county farmer to grow 45 bushels of corn to the acre. In 1927 land adjoining the wet land made 75 bushels to the acre, while undrained land produced about 5 bushels. It cost $400 to tile drain the 10 acres. A dralnage engineer was employed to establish grades for the ditches so they will not fill with sediment.

SCORE ONLY ONE RUN FOR BELLEVIEW IN HEBRON GAME —HINGES KNOCKS HOME ALL OF VISITORS TALLIES—

While losing a very important and closely contested battle on their home grounds by the score of 3-1 last Saturday the Belleview team came close to establishing a record in Boone county, it is believed. The "record" consisted of scoring but one run in nine innings on fifteen hits, the lone marker being made in the ninth after two men were out. And, oddly enough, the fifteenth bingle sent over the run.

Hebron opened on Ben Black in this one with determination and won the game in the first stanza when they counted twice. Garnett was safe on an error and Joe Aylor singled, sending the Hebron lead-off man to second. Hafer followed with another, but the two runners were held to one sack and the bases were filled with no one out. Reibling then forced Garnett at home and Hinges stalked to the plate. He unleashed a single from his big bat sending home Aylor and Hafer. Black then settled and fanned the next two batters, but the damage was done.

The visitors sent over the third and final tally in the third and then rested on their laurels, confident that Braun would hold their opponents, which he did, although hit hard and often. The third run was manufactured when Black slapped Reibling in the ribs with a pitched ball and Hinges, tthe author of all three of the Hebron runs, spanked a double sending him across.

Belleview, as said before, did not count until the ninth. Harley Sprague was sent up as a pinch hitter and he delivered to open the final stanza. He was forced by Miller [illegible] Hoss the trusty clubs of Whitey and Mutt Rogers. Mutt went down to second on the throw-in and Whitey took third. With the tying runs on base Black had a chance to achieve distinction with the stick, as well as in the box, but Braun was not to be denied and set Big Ben back on strikes.

Petersburg came to Burlington last Saturday afternoon and took the final game of the season from Manager Blythe's patched up team by a score of 10-4. Boehler started the game in the box and toyed with the home boys for the first six innings, after which he retired in favor of Howard Huey. Akin went the route for the home team and was the victim of several miscues behind him and a sortie of consective hitting in the second inning when the visitors chalked up five runs.

After the second it was a cake-walk and Burlington came up for air in the last half of the ninth facing a 10-0 whitewashing. Whether thru sheer generosity on Huey's part or by dint of legitimate hitting the home boys managed to knock home four large tallies, though they were of no real value except to eliminate another horse collar for the box score. Ryle, who hits any of them frequently, opened with a double and Finn, who hit Boehler for two of the four hits made off him, followed with a single. Both runners appeared to be in a good way to be left stranded on the sacks when Williamson and R. Maurer filed out. But F. Maurer came through with his second hit of the day and E. Hickman followed suit. Kelly then doubled and Ray Hickman singled to finish the offensive outburst, Akin closed the game with a grounder to second base.

SUDAN GRASS

A number of Sudan Grass demonstrations are being checked on by the county agent this year. These demonstrations are scattered in various sections of the county.

Sudan Grass a new crop with farmers is recommended for a one year pasture and for a catch hay crop when a shortage is apparent It is a member of the sorghum family and is a rank grower. Farmers who are growing this crop this year report that where it was seeded two weeks ago is up and making wonderful growth.

The crop should not be allowed to get too tall before cutting as usually two, three of four cuttings should be made in a good year. It may be grazed and pastured at will. Farmers who are not familar with the crop are urged to study it during the year.

Deaths

THOMAS T. BIRD

Thomas T. Bird, aged 70 years, passed away at the Booth Hospital, Covington, Ky., Wednesday night following an automobile accident a fews days previous.

Mr. Bird has been a resident of Erlanger for many years, having served the town as Councilman for 15 years. He was a charter member of Fiskburg Jr. O. U. A. M., and was also a member of Erlanger D. of A., as well as the Erlanger Christian Church. He was a veteran employe of the Southern Railroad, having been in their service 25 years.

Campbell, pastor of the Bullittsburg Baptist church, and a neighbor of the Molloy family for many years, will conduct the services. Interment in Highland cemetery.

WOOL GROWERS

OF BOONE TO MEET AT COURT HOUSE MONDAY, JULY 6TH. WHEN REPRESENTATIVES OF STATE WOOL POOL WILL BE HEARD—

Boone county wool growers will hear representatives from the State Wool Pool at a county meeting to be held at Burlington courthouse, court day, Monday July 6 at 1:30 P. M. A wool grading demonstration will be given by the State Wool Pool grader and a price valuation on each grade of wool determined.

Boone county growers have between 35,000 and 40,000 pounds of wool to be sold through the local organization. The State Pool has agreed to take the wool at Walton or other local point can be arranged and will pay off as soon as the wool is delivered to the local station.

The meeting Monday afternoon promises to be one of interest in sheep production. All who are interested are invited to attend and all directors and growers are urged to be present. This is the regular meeting set by the county organization for the discussion of the wool problems.

Mr. Julian Adair advised the county arganization the first part of this week that Monday would be the latest date Boone county growers could sell their wool to the State Pool as the official grader was leaving immediately if the wool was not pooled at that time. He said that the State Pool has received 265,000 pounds of wool from 38 counties in the state and that the first advanced 80% of the Boston Market had averaged $16.78 per hundred. Boone county wool is considered one of the best clips in the state and should grade considerably above the average.

OPENING

OF NEW RIDDELL SERVICE STATION JULY 4TH—PEPPER GASOLINE TO BE INTRODUCED TO LOCAL CAR OWNERS—ALSO WILL HANDLE FISK TIRES—

The official opening of the new Riddell Service Station will take place here next Saturday, July 4th., when owners of the station will offer a special on gasoline and oil in an effort to get the famous Pepper products before the public.

On next Saturday one quart of oil will be given free to each purchaser of five gallons of gas. A coupon will be given each purchaser and each purchaser will be limited to four coupons.

An appeal is being made by Kentuckians for Kentucky in the use of these products as they are made wholly from Kentucky crude oil by the Ashland Refining Company, which takes the products of nearly two thousand oil wells. They urge the patronage of your home station if it uses Pepper gasoline. They offer Red Pepper, White Pepper and Green Pepper.

The new Riddell station is the last word in modern stations and is a tribute to the enterprising spirit of the proprietors and an ornament to the town in which it is located. It is situated on Washington street and on the south side about two squares from the center of town as one drives toward Florence.

It has been very appropriately named the Riddell station, the attendants being Maurice Riddell and Edson Riddell Maurer, the latter being a namesake of the county judge of Boone county.

The new station also offers Fisk auto tires and prices may be obtained from their advertisement on another page of this issue.

Mr. J. W. Goodridge of near Burlington and Sterling Rouse of near Limaburg both local fruitmen working independently of each other carried some of their fruit work over to crops work and have some interesting experiments this year on use of ammonium sulphate fertilizer on hay and grain crops.

Mr. J. W. Goodridge thru use of 100 lbs., of ammonium sulphate per acre on his rye and oats crop this spring has rye over six feet tall and oats over five feet tall and still growing on what he terms relatively thin soil.

Mr. Sterlig Rouse has timothy seed early this fall that is four feet three inches tall and still growing. He top dressed his meadow with 300 plunds of ammounium sulphate that he has been using in his orchard work.

The above is not given for general standout for themselves. Those who are skeptical or interested are invited to see for themselves.

M. W. A .NOTES

The M. W. A. of Big Bone met and held their regular meeting Thursday June 11 with Mrs. Nell Butler about 60 being present 20 of them members all enjoyed the day very much. At the noon hour tables were spread on the beautiful lawn in fron of the house and in the afternoon while the ladies held their meeting themen with other visitors played ball pitched horse shoes and did everything for pleasure.

There were about 15 of our members from Big Bone society had a wonderful trip on Wednesdy June 17 having attended the General assembly of the W. M. U. at Georgetown, after the meeting adjourned they motored on to Frankfort where went through the penitentary which was a place where some of our ladies had never been.

The regular meeting closed hoping to meet with Mrs. Mary Hamilton July 9.

POINT PLEASANT CHURCH

The Young Peoples Bible Class under Bro. McCord of the Pt. Pleasant Christian church will give an ice cream and cake party on the church lawn Saturday night July 11 for the benefit of the church. Everybody is cordially invited.

Bro. McCord will preach at Pt. Pleasant Church July 26 in the afternoon.

Saturday is Independence Day and all banks in the county will be closed.

FRUIT CROP

IN BOONE COUNTY PROMISES TO REACH RECORD PROPORTIONS THIS YEAR, ACCORDING TO BEST INFORMATION— SOME THINNING HAS BEEN DONE—

Boone county orchardmen have one of the largest fruit crops of all descriptions that has been grown in recent years. Apples and peaches in most orchards of the county set such a heavy crop of fruit that considerable thinning has been done in a number of orchards.

Mr. J. W. Goodridge of near Burlington has been spending the past two weeks thinning early varities of apples to one ped cluster bud. Many cluster bud are found this year with five to six apples per set. This is 100% set for the cluster bud and in most cases more than nature intended for the tree to carry.

Mr. Sterling Rouse of near Burlington reports the largest fruit crop he has ever had.

Mr. J. C. Aylor and E. J. Aylor of near Hebron each have good size young peach orchards that have been well taken care of and this year have the first full crop of peaches.

Mr. Emmett of Ludlow, R2 has a ten year old apple orchard that has a heavy crop of fruit for the first time.

Mr. Dale Hudson of near Verona has eight acres of six year old apple trees that have a full crop of fruit.

Mr. Frank Rouse of near Burlington who follows a complete spray schedule every year reports that he had already put on five to six sprays on all apples in his orchard, which is over twenty acres in size.

Mr. Litson Hemfling of near Taylorsport who has one of the largest orchards of the county also just on a complete spray schedule every year. He is reported to have a full [illegible] and has [illegible]

There Are a number of good orchardmen in various sections of the county that are reported to have a good crop of fruit and are following up a complete spray schedule to control insects, sca, rots and other diseases to produce a clean high quality market fruit. The experienced fruit growers on the county report that every big fruit year there is an abundance of wormy, scabby fruit on the market that always sells at a very low price but that good, sound clean fruit is always in demand and sells quickly at a premium.

Control of disease and insects on fruit thru a complete spray schedule is of most importance in producing good fruit. Those growers who are not familar with the College of Agriculture spray schedule may secure same on request at the county agent's office.

ARMY WORM

CAUSES DAMAGE TO BOONE COUNTY CORN CROP—COUNTY AGENT LOCATES PEST IN FIELD OF H. M. HOLLIDAY NEAR IDLEWILD—

Army worms were found in the corn field of Mr. H. M. Holladay of near Idlewild on last Friday morning according to county agent H. R. Forkner.

The worms were in large numbers and were eating the leaves or blades off the stalks of corn. Mr. Holladay began immediately to dust the corn in the infected area with Paris Green and Arsenate of Lead to kill the worms before they destroyed the entire field.

While reports of insect destruction similar to that of the army worm have been reported in the county on several different occasions this year this is the first time the county agent has actually found the pest that has caused so much damage in other parts of the state. The reason that the pests are found so numerous in one place is due to the fact that the moths laying the eggs fly in swarms and each moth may lay 500 or more eggs in one stop.

Prof Marshall E. Hearin and wife [illegible]

Mr. and Mrs. Hearin, who reside their home in Clay, Kentucky, are attending summer school at the University of Kentucky, Lexington.

The fish fry given at Burlington last Saturday evening by the M. W. A. was attended by a large and enthusiastic crowd. The Junior Order Band, of Erlanger, supplied music throughout the evening, while addresses were made by Chas. E. Renner, National Elector of the order, and I. M. Clifford, of Louisville.

An auto crowded Edson Maurer from the road while driving on the Petersburg pike last Sunday. Mr. Maurer, who was driving a new Chevrolet, was forced to take the ditch to keep from hitting the passing car and in so doing side swiped a short post, crushing his fender and running board. No other damage was done to the car.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Stephenson, of near Limaburg, entertained the following guests Sunday; Mr. and Mrs. Darnell, and two daughters, of Ft. Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Considerable excitement took place at Gulley and Pettit's store early last Monday morning when a one ton Dodge truck caught on fire as the result of a gas explosion, which occurred which occurred when the gas tank was being filled by Rue Wingate, driver of the truck. A small quantity of gas spilled on the exhaust, which was very hot, causing the explosion. The fire was extinguished before any serious age resulted.

Newton Sullivan, Jr., has been absent from his post as clerk in Gulley and Pettit's store for the past week on account of illness. "Sully" is suffering from a very painful infection in his left jaw caused from a broken tooth and, while he has had the damaged molar removed, he still is unable to return to his post at this writing. While recuperating he "parks" in his famous holly hock garden and listens expectantly for the scores from the Giants. However, if the Cardinals continue as they have in the first two games of their series in New York Mrs. Sullivan says that she is going to have Dr. Yelton order the radio removed.

UNSETTLED

AS RESULT OF HEBRON VICTORY OVER BELLEVIEW IS SITUATION AT COUNTY LEAGUE RACE FINISH—PROPOSED CHANGE OF PLAN IN SECOND HALF MAY BE ANNOUNCED—

The regular schedule of games in the second half of Boone county's split season will start off one week from Saturday with each team opening exactly as it did in the first half.

The close of the second half finds the pennant winner undecided, although Walton has a two game advantage on the face of the standing as shown in the Recorder this week.

Had Belleview defeated Hebron last Saturday afternoon all would have been over, as far as the decision as to the winner was concerned. But Hebron thought otherwise and sailed in to cop a fine 3-1 victory. As a result Walton and Hebron will be compelled to play off an unfinished game, which has been resting at a 2-2 tie since opening game, when rain and darkness prevented decision. Should Hebron win that contest then a protest on Walton's victory at Hebron a few weeks ago will come up for decision. By fair this protest must be decided at all events, as, if Hebron loses at Walton, they might finish in a tie with Petersburg for second on a decision of the protest.

A percentage of 100 may mean a fine grade in reading, writing and rithmetic, but it is almost nil in a base ball standing. The Burlington team, after a good start (a victory at Petersburg) faded out of the picture as far as registering games under the left column was concerned and finished with the measly ratio of 1 to 9. Manager Blythe suffered some very hard luck in [illegible] starting [illegible]

At a meeting of the [illegible] at Burlington the matter of a change in plans for the second half was discussed and any decision arrived at in regard to same will be announced in the next issue of this paper. If the contemplated change is made the Hebron-Walton postponed game will be played at Walton in July 11th. Otherwise some other agreeable arrangement will have to be made.

No league game will be played on July 4th., and the teams will play exhibition games on that date. The outstanding feature will be a duel clash between the Walton and the Belleview clubs at Belleview. Both teams will be reinforced with some strong outside talent for those games and fans who love good, hard fought games "could go farther and do worse" than see them.

BEAN BEETLES

There seem to be plenty of them this year. Gardners and truck growers are reporting bean beetles as beginning to do damage the past week.

The old Alabama formula for bean beetle control dust has been recommended for the past six years and still give good results. This statement is vouched for by numerous Boone county growers of market beans for home use. The reason it did not work for some people is because they did not believe in it from the start and did not give it a chance to prove its worth. The Alabama dust is composed of the following ingredients;

Lb. Calcium Arsenate
Lb. Dusting Sulfur
4 Lbs. Lime. Cost from 5 to 7 cents per pound mixed.

Where a spray is desired;

1 Tablespoon Calcium of Lead Arsenate
4 Tblespoonfulls of Lime
1 Gallon of Water

Start when the young larvae or worms have just hatched. There is little or no use trying to poison the larvae that has matured and quit eating. Don't feed beetles poison unless you want them to die.

An added suggesion is to get a good bean beetle duster and dust like sixty.

AN HONOR DESERVED

In awarding the Capper Gold Medal and its accompanying honorarium $5,000 to Dr. L. O. Howard for distinguished service to agriculture, honor is given where honor is due. Dr. Howard, in his long service as chief entomologist of the United States Department of Agriha has done more than any other living person, not oly to awaken the farmers of the nation to the necessity of combating insect pests, but to develop methods of overcoming the ravages of insects and to from abroad.

As Dr. Howard has truithfully said so often that it is an old story, the great war for the possession of the earth is the war between man and insects. Unchecked, insect life would destroy all other life. Great progress has been made in the war on insects in the past forty years, but an enormous amount still remains to be done and the only unceasing deligence and unremitting warfare will give the final victory to man.

It is not only the agricultural products that insects threaten; it is human life itself. When Dr. Howard began his research the grasshopper and the Colorado beetle of potato bug were supposed to be the farmer's worst enemies. Neither of them has been completely subdued, and the pink boll weevil still menaces the cotton crop of the South, to say nothing of the Gypsy moth and the San Jose scale, and the hundreds of other familiar rgriculmosquito is the sole carrier of malarial and yellow fever, that typhus fever and the bubonic plague are carried by fleas and the common house fly spreads typhoid germs on our food.

In unearthing the facts about insect pests and particularly in developing means of combating them, Dr. Howard has devoted a long and poorly paid career of public service. He is entitled to all the honor that can be paid him.

DRIFT TOWARD THE COUNTRY

The present depression with its attendant hardship on the small business man as well as on the man on a salary is going to bring about some changes in the mode of living of many people. Chief among these is a drift back to the land. This draft will not be in the nature of a back to the farm movement which receives attention of writers and economists from time to time, The tendency is already in evidence for men in business and on a salary to own small tracts of land along the highways and produce a share of the familys living on the land. It is possible nowadays to secure desirable small tracts within easy driving distance of one's work. On these a good garden can be produced, chickens and a cow kept and in this way much of the family living produced on the place. The exercise afforded in connection with the upkeep of a project of this kind, proves beneficial in most instances to the owner. Many are coming to realize that the city life permits one to shuttle back and forth between the office and the tiny apartment has not much future or freedom to it, hence the turning toward the country.

The situation is a wholesome one. Life under these conditions is more healthful and desirable than in the crowded city.

On these small tracts it is possible to have practically all of the modern conveniences that the home in the city affords. The ready access to entertainment and society of the city removes from such a rural home the feature of isolation that marked rural life a few years ago.

With such a resource under his feet the average worker does not need to live in constant fear that when the pay check stops the landlord will be appearing with an ejection notice in a few days for non payment of rent.

A BAD SITUATION

We are told that many of the large city banks are filled with money which they can not loan for the reason that the people who need and could use the money, do not have the type of securities necessary to secure the money. On the other hand small town banks that are the farmers banks are going broke or are struggling along with insufficient funds to carry on. we note that the large banks in the east are loaning call money at one per cent and one-half per cent.

While this is going on the former is suffering from the want of capital with which to operate and farm mortgages are being foreclosed and livestock and grain dumped on an already glutted market.

The situation is not healthy for the agricultural industry, and the agricultural industry is the mainstay of this nation. When agriculture suffers the entire nation suffers.

MANY SUCCESSES BUILT ON ADVERTISING

No merchant ever failed because of money he spent for advertising, but the business history of this country is filled with instances of men who have made brilliant successes in business by means of advertising.

A well writen advertisement in the columns of a local newspaper is an invitation to every reader of the paper to visit the store and see the merchandise displayed there.

A well written advertisement attracts attention, interests and creates desire. Desire once created, it is but a step until the purchase is made.

A well written advertisement is the best employe any merchant can put on his payroll.

An advertisement to be effective must be backed by good merchandise, an attractive store, the right price and modern merchandising methods.

This combination will build business for any merchant who undertakes it seriously and gives it intelligent thought and effort.

The Family Garden

"SECOND-CROP" POTATOES

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

In Kentucky, the distinction is made between late crop potatoes raised from seed that does not need cold storage to keep it in good condition, and the socalled "second crop" of short season varieties, the seed of which must be held in cold storage. The variety is usually Russet Rural may be used. Plant-Irish Cobbler, though Carman and ing time for the Bluegrass, the mountains, and the territory opposite Cincinnati, July 20; for the Louisville district, July 25; for the Purchase, August 1.

Concerning seed, this warning is in order. "Second-crop" seed is almost always small, but not all small seed is second-crop. Supplies of genuine Kentucky-grown seed are short, and the result may be that No. 2 potatoes screened from the southern crop of this spring will be offered. Such seed is small, too small in fact, to determine its variety. Such seed will come up late if at all, and the chances of its resulting in a satisfactory crop are small. Dealers will do well to inquire closely into the orgin of "second-crop" seed they handle this year, and growers who have in mind the production of a satisfactory crop of potatoes should not venture to use any seed whose origin cannot be assured.

LAND PREPARATION

Because this crop must contend with heat and dry weather even in normal years, and more so in this, a deep moisture-retentive seedbed is necessary. That is, deep plowing should have been done, and humus turned under. Moreover, plowing should have been done in time to catch the early-summer rains, and frequent disking and dragging, to hold the moisture and to remove competition with weeds.

FERTILIZING AND PLANTING

No matter what was the nature of the vegetation or humus-making material, some fertilizer is needed. If a clover sod or coat of manure were turned under about (let us say) May 1, or only superphosphate need be used, but if there was little or no nitrogen,a complete fertilizer such as 4-10-4 is suggested

All fertilizers for potatoes should be put in the bottom of the furrow, and mixed with the soil. The rate is one pound to 30 feet of furrow.

Planting should be deep, 4 inches, for example, so that there will be no need of ridging the row to keep the potatoes from becoming uncovered. Cultivation, throughout, should be shallow, and the ground surface should be maintained level.

SPRAYING

Late potatoes must contend with at least on important insect, the leaf hopper, and sometimes the fleabeetles and Colorado beetles are troublesome. In addition, the blight disease attacks them severly enough to cut down the yield.

The control for all these pests is Bordeaux Mixture, described in these columns several weeks ago. Those persons who missed the article may get the information by addressing a request to the writer. Three sprayings should be giveri, the first when the potatoes are 4 inches high; the second, 2 weeks after; and the third, in 2 weeks more.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

I went to see Frank Cravens play "Thats Gratitude.,, After the show Mrs. Craven and Grantland Rice took me up to Frank's apartment. Other friends dropped in, and presently Frank himself arrived genuine, whimsicial, modest, totally unspoiled.

Seeing him in his own home made it easier to understand his success. Everything was simple and old-fashioned and sincere. When he writes a play he just picks a situation out of an ordinary American home, and the he walks on the stage and is himself.

On the way home another thought struck me.

He is the author of the play, and his name is printed on the program and written in front of the theater in electic lights.

Yet it is a play without a star.

At least five other characters are just as important as he is. He is on the stage no more than they are, and they are given just as many good lines.

He might have written the piece so as to monopilze the spot light and it might have been a success or it might have been a flop. But being the sort of chap he is, he is content to be in the background a good share of the time. His royalties will reward his good sense.

Years ago Carmon McKensie wrote a short story entitled, "The Man Who Was It." The story told about a business that had been making good profits for many years. The president took life very easy. He played golf, travelled in Europe, and let the boys assume responsibility.

After his death a young and very efficient executive was brought in, who decided that everything needed tightening up. When the purchasing agent was about to sign a big contract, the new Boss pumped into the negotiations himself. When the sales manager had a large order to close, the Boss said: "I'll pack my bag and go with you." When the production manager made plans for rearranging the plan, the Boss revised his plans. He worked about twenty hours a day, and was always criticising his predecessor who had seemed to work so little.

The result was that his associates, being robbed of both responsibility and credit, lay back and let him do it. He worked himself into a nervous breakdown, and the business went on rocks.

I am told that the Jesuits had this motto: "A great deal of good can be done in the world if one is not too careful who gets the credit.

Wise leaders recognize this golden principle and profit by it. The foolish hog the spotlight, and frequently go to smash.

Sunday School Lesson

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON—
THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT
Acts 1: 8-9; 2:;—8.
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

During the next six months the lessons will be in the Acts and the Epistles. Jesus set fourth principles pertaining to the kind of a life that He said should be lived. The Acts of the Apostles demonstrate that such a life is possible. In His ascension to Heaven there was a concious loss to His followers, but He had promised them that a wonderful experience would come to them, and in preparation for this event directed that they should abide ten days in prayer.

The place yas probably the room where the Passover had been observed and the Lords Supper instituted. Many think that this was that of Mary, the mother of John Mark. All the apostles were present during those days and in addition who were aggressive followers of Jesus. All did not understand the fullness of teaching which the Master had presented. Some were still looking for the erection of a visible kingdom that would overthrow the power of hated Rome.

On the day called Pentecost the dispensation of the Holy Spirit began. There were spiritual and visible signs, described in the lesson text. These manifestations are mere incidents compared with the divine power evidenced in the preaching of Peter, who explained how in their midst. The sublime truth of the Trinity of the Godhead is evidenced. Christ was declared in the Old Testament and His life was known in the Gospels. Even so, the Holy Spirit, though always present, came into special relationship with men on that day of Pentecost. His ministry is to make the work of the sons of God effective.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

A Holstein cow that produced 84 pounds or more than nine and a half gallons of milk in a day is owned by John J. Dawson, a Fayette county farmer, according to the official testing report of the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky. The 84 pounds of butterfat. Sixty-six cows, owned by 18 farmers, made the honor roll by producing a pound and a half or more butterfat in a day.

The Dutch elm disease has been found at several places in this country, and fears are being entertained for this famous shade tree. The disease shows it self in the form of wilting twigs and brown spots in the sapwood. Persons noting wilting on elm trees should send freshly wilted twigs 8 to 10 inches long to Dr. W. D. Valleau, Experiment Station, Lexington.

For the fourth consecutive year the Cooperative Pure Milk Association of Cincinnati will award a purebred dairy heifer to the highest scoring 4-H club dairy boy or girl in Boone, Campbell and Kenton counties. County champions will meet at the Alexandria fair in September, where the award will be made. Winners have been Beach Craigmyle, Kenton county; Ollie Mae Boyers, Campbell county, and Zeno Nordwick, Campbell county.

Knox county's cash crops of potatoes and tobacco are lookin well. It is estimated that 4,000 acres of potatoes will be grown in the county. The tobacco acreage is placed at 800. Approximately two-thirds of this acreage was set in May. Fertilizers are being used to stimulate the yield and quality of both crops.

The Paducah Board of Trade is sponsoring the growing of high quality tobacco by 40 junior agriculture club boys.

Starks Bros., Gainesville, Ky., have 50 acres in alfalfa, and have used 500 tons of limestone for red clover, alfalfa, sweet clover and korean lespedeza.

LITTLE JULIUS SNEEZER — BY BAKER

Hoover's Effort Is Termed "Statesmanlike" By Writer

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Reimes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Artimus Ward, who in private life was Charles Farrar Browne, enjoyed the reputation of being the outstanding humorist of his time.

Possibly it is unfortunate that once a writer, or a lecturer, or an artist, acquires a reputation as a provoker of mirth and risibility, nothing that he writes, says or depicts is ever taken seriously. Artimus ward, Josh Billings, Bill Nye, Thomas Nast, and even our own George Ade and Will Rogers, were and are skilled doctors specializing in the cure of doldrums. Wherefore, while we had been told that many a truth is spoken in jest, we have been and are inclined to belittle any humorist's capacity for sedate thought and expression.

However, is may have upon many of us who have listened to Pagliccia, and looked at "He Who Gets Slapped" and "Laugh, Clown, Laugh," that the funniest of professional funny-men have their serious moments. Artimus Ward had one when he wrote "Things in New York," supposedly in satirical vein. In that article he remarked; "Why don't you show us a statesman who can rise up to the emergency, and cave in the emergency's head?"

Well, emergency's head has been "caved in" again. Abraham Lincoln started it when he said: "I believe this government cannot endure permanently half slave and half free.

Stephen Grover Cleveland followed with a whack at emergency's head when he told Great Britain to "go to hell," after her attempt to dictate her alleged rights with respect to the boundary line between British Guiana and Venezuela.

Woodrow Wilson put another dent in emergency's cranium when the proclamation of a war zone about the British Isles, in which German submarines threatened to destroy enemy vessels with consequent danger to the lives and property of neutrals, was met by a note of February 10, 1915, which warned Germany that she would be held to "strict accountability" for the lawless acts of submarine commanders.

When Abraham Lincoln decreed that traffic in live human bodies was not to be further tolerated in this Republic, his political opponents screamed "Politics." When Cleveland saw fit to tell Britania "where she got off," envious neighbors hollered "Politics." When Woodrow Wilson laid down the law toGermany, he did so—even to the extent of flabbergasting his ultra-pacific Secretary of State—over the yelps of "Politics" by a pack of obstreperous anti-administration lap dogs.

Just so when one H. Hoover, being for the time being neither Republican nor Democrat, wet nor dry, militarist nor pacifist, but merely chief executive of a floundering democracy, observing a prosperity-fed octopus on the surface of the waters of depression, aimed and cast a harpoon at the head of the gruesome blood-sucker, the twin brother of the gink who yells "Fire" in a crowded theater bellows "Politics."

Maby so. Patrick Henry told his colleagues in the virginia convention of 1765, "If this be treason make the most of it." The whole civilized world is saying to the President of the United States, "If what you have done is politics, let's have a lot more of it."

Two nations will bear the financial burden if President Hoover's proposal for a war-debt and reparations moratorium is accepted. They are the United States and France. It will cost the United States about $235,000,000, one-fourth of which would go into the public debt sinking fund and the remainder to current expenses. This amount will have to be made up in other ways.

London, perhaps partly to bring pressure on France and Italy, announces a sacrifice of $53,000,000, by suspending for a year payments on debts owed to the United Kingdom by the Dominions and India. England is experienced enough and wise enough to appreciate that this is a worth-while investment, and England has no ax to grind.

Or the reparations which France would receive, the larger portion would be for war debt payments to the United States and Great Britain. But France would also collect about $90,000,000 over and above these sums, and this $90,000,000 is earmarked for the carrying charges on the money spent for regions. It wood be necessary for charges in other ways.

But France has a memory unimpaired by the passing of generations. In the present instance, it dates back to 1871 when, marck and von Moltke sat at a table in the Louvre, in Paris, and told France that the cost of peace was—among other things—the surrender of Alsace and Loraine and the payment of an indemnity of five billions of francs. A billion dollars is a staggering sum to day—let alone sixty years ago. But France, up against Hobson's choice, paid her billion dollars and gave up Alsace and Loraine. And from the treaty of 1871 to the day of the signing of the armistice in 1919, nearly half a century, the statue to the memory of Lille and Strasbourg on the Place de la Concord in Paris eral wreath.

Not a doubt is expressed here that France, in the long run, will consider discretion the better part of valor and join with other nations in giving Germany another chance. But no one can blame her for crying "ouch" when she is asked to forego a come-back on the ultimatum of the Iron Chancellor after sixty years of waiting.

Despite the fact that President Hoover and the principal Republican and Democratic leaders in the Congress have called for an adjournment of politics in so far as the President's proposal for a suspension of all inter-governmental debts growing out of the World War, there are those who cannot let this alone. Wm. Randolph Hearst, for example, has grabbed the proposal as an issue on which to declare himself and his newspapers in favor of the nomination and election of former Presiden Calvin Coolidge to the presidency next year. He also mentions the need of "another Roosevelt" in the White House, in case Mr. Coolidge should not be available, using consciously or unconsciously the language of Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, when the Nebraska Sentor was presiding over the "Progressive" Conference held here last March. And, as in the case of Senator Norris' speech, it is now interpreted that "another Roosevelt," as used by Mr. Hearst, means Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York. Hearst agrees with Roosevelt, more or less, on the water-power issue, as does Senator Norris. He also favors the election of a President opposed to the eighteenth amendment, and Roosevelt fills that bill. Mr. Hearst has allied himself, except on occasion, with the Democrat party, and what he says now may be interpreted as favoring the nomination of Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt by the Democrats next year, and the nomination of Calvin Coolidge by the Republicans.

Senator Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democrat member of the Finance Committee, saw President Hoover in connection with the proposd postponement of inter-governmental debts for one year. Senator Harrison, who heartily indorses the plan, said he suggested to the President that in order to make sure that the approval of Congress be given before the debts fell due on December 15 it would be advisable for him to call a special session thirty days or so before the date set by law for the meeting of the regular session. It would not take Congress long to pass the necessary resolution, Senator Harrison thought, but nevertheless a special session would be desirable. What response the President made to the advice was not reported by Senator Harrison.

The sudden, almost overwhelming response from abroad to President Hoover's moratorium proposal leaves no doubt that it was so timed as to achieve the maximum psycological effect. Nearly every one of the world's great trading exchanges has rebounded upward. In Germany every official and unofficial organ of opinion has expressed the sense of gratitude and enormous relief; in England the Cabinet has already expressed the proposal amid a chorous of public enthusiasm which assures its speedy ratification, and in France, though commentators are quick to make some natural reservations, discussion is instinct with the idea that there has been a new departure in the tangled and distressing business of world affairs. Something has happened. Great populations which had been sinking into the hopeless view that every attempted remedy was bound to defeat itself have been abruptly touched with the sense that something can happen, something can be done. The defeatist thought patterns have been broken up, and that, after all, is the first aim of Mr. Hoover's action.

Senator Harrison, notorious gabfly for his party, hopes that "a political truce" will be observed for Congressional action on Mr. Hoover's proposal to postpone the war-debt payments. That course would be both wise and patriotic. Thus far no representative Democrat has said anything save in praise of the President, or failed to offer assistance. If this record is not marred in the future, the political effect will be good for the Democrats as the economic effect will be for the world. In urging doubtful or refractory members of his party to go along, Senator Harrison and those support his idea of the truce may properly rephrase the Yankee adage: Cooperation is undoubtedly the best politics.

The course of the stock market, where the "averages" of typical selected stocks rose 15½ points, or 11⅜ per cent, in the two days after Mr. Hoover's debt proposal was announced, caused no surprise. The cates sudden change of sentiment regarding aspects of the financial situation which had been watched apprehensively. But the reader of the news mus have been preplexed by the fact that the markets for grain, cotton, the metals, and notably silver bullion, rose almost as impressively as stocks. In the news accounts the movement appeared to be unanimously ascribed to the President's declaration; but the general public wondered what the commodity had to do with a moratorium on inter-governmental debts.

The third resignation from the Federal Farm Board in three months was officially recorded when the White House made public a letter from Samuel R. McKelvie, of Nebraska, expressing his wish to retire to private life. In a note of reply President Hoover accepted Mr. McKelvie's resignation with regret.

Somebody has started a fantastic story to the effect that the use of the fasces and the Roman god of commerce, Mercury, on Uncle Sam's 10-cent piece means that the Italian Fascist movement is gaining headway in the United States. Scores of letters on the subject are being received by the director of the mint from all parts of the country. Officials of the Treasury Department explained that the design of the 10-cent piece was adopted 15 years ago, before anybody in America had ever heard of Fascism or suspected that the fasces appearing on the reverse side of the dime would be the emblem of the controlling force in Italy.

Senator Jim Davis is to the front with a brand new story. A middle-aged woman (who turned out to be hard of hearing) stood up in a public meeting, when the speaker asked any woman in the audience to rise who agreeded with the theory that it was a wife's duty to "mother her husband." She said she'd misunderstood the proposition. She thought the speaker had said "smother your husband."

The Wickersham commission, approaching the end of its labors announced that it will have nothing more to say on prohibition. It will submit eight more reports on as many phases of the crime situation, but will make no attempt to supplement or clarify the extremely confusing and most unsatisfactory report which it presented last January on the subject of foremost interest to the American people.

Dwight F. Davis has notified the Administration here of his wish to resign as Governor General of the Philippine Islands. He already has offered his resignation effective as soon as President Hoover conveniently can fill his post. Governor Davis plans his resignation simply to be able to take up his residence again in the United States and to resume more active command of his private affairs in this country. So far as is known here, he has enjoyed the full support of Washington in his post and will leave in continued harmony not only with President Hoover's administration, but with the majority factions among the Filipinos.

Turtle's Schedule

The exactness of Nature's laws is illustrated by a certain famous sea turtle on the coast of Florida, whom naturalists have learned to knew and look for. Once a year, on exactly the same day of the same month, between evening and daylight, she comes in to the same beach from her Atlantic wanderings. At a certain spot she lays her numerous deposits of eggs and departs, not to return for another 365 days.

Reading the Compass

To find the compass course in nautical language, to route in comparative order the points of the mariner's compass. The points from north to east are as follows: North, north one-half east, north by east, north by east one-half east, north north east, north north one-half east, north east by north, north east one-half north, north east, north east by east, north east by east one-half east, east north east one-half east, east by north, east east one-half north, east.

Phrase Long in Use

The phrase "bite the dust" appears to a casual reader to be strictly American, it being familiar to those who have read in the old dime novels of how "another redskin bit the dust." But it is in fact rooted in antiquity. Among the earliest recorded uses of the expression are in Homer's "Illiad," book two, and Ovid's "Metamorphoses," book nine. The words translated became popular the world over.—Kansas City Times.

PARAGRAPHS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KETUCKY

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

BLOOD IMBALANCED

Nothing should be appreciated more than perfect circulation if the blood in the body, and normal, very many times we physicians, meet with variations from normal, which may be called "imbalanced," or engorgments here and there, which may very from congestions to actual dilatations of the vessels—organic disease.

People with big abdomens are sufferers in varying degree, from blood imbalance. There are great many veins that traverse the abdominal wall and visceral content content there situated. Anything that may cause "rush of blood" to these to these blood-vessels, produces immediate and very evident effect on structures elsewhere. A big meal is an example—overeating; intense determination of blood to the stomach and bowel, depleting the brain for the time being, causing dizziness, cloudy vision, staggering gait, stupor, with heavy feeling throughout the already overfleshed abdomen. The symptoms may amount to a temporary helplessness, a not very enjoyable feeling in elderly persons.

I believe without accurate figures, that one-fourth of the blood volume may flow in a great tidal-wave into ponderous abdomen, from overexertion, overeating, etc.; and that this condition reacts heavily upon the heart and brain; of course the veins of such on abdomen become much dilated from the constant sagging, making possible, if I may use the term, "abdominal apoplexy." And here it is that the "tubby" abdomen is a very troublesome luxury.

Methods of correction are slow, discouraging, and are seldom persisted in to get the relief possible. Carefully practiced exercises are productive of results. Of course free daily evacuation of the bowel must be maintained. Here it is that starches in the diet must be cut down to a minimum. Indeed, the diet must be just what is needed and no more. In chronic cases patients who are short of breath and puff with slight muscular exertion, may wear a well fitted bandage to support the sagging, indolent organism. I personall knew a man who declares he couldn't "navigate" without his abdominal support, which holds the dilated veins within bounds.

HIGH PRODUCING COWS IN HERD ASSOCIATIONS

Two hundred and five cows on dary herd improvement associations in Kentucky last month produced 50 pounds or more of butterfat each, according to the report of the dairy division of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Four hundred and eighty-two cows produced 40 to 50 pounds or fat each. A total of 3,098 cows, owned in 156 herds, were on test last month.

A herd of six purebred Jerseys owned by Tom Bagwell, a Marion county farmer, averaged 49 pounds of butterfoat each, while 30 Jerseys owned by P. B. Gaines at Carrollton averaged 47½ pounds. The feed cost per pound of butterfat in the Gaines herd was 10½ cents a pound. The herd was fed a home-mixed grain ration, which cost $1.40 per hudred, and silage.

Ballard Thompson has installed the first milking machine to be used in Marion county. It is enabling him to milk 18 cows without the use of a man that was paid $40 a manth

MEAT PRICES HURT STOCK PRODUCTION

High rental prices are factors in the reduced demand for meat, which in turn is resulting in lower prices for livestock, says the department of markets and rural finance of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky in its monthly review of farm prices. Pork and pork products representing 900,000 hogs ar in storage, the supply being 22 per cent larger than at this time a year ago.

Cattle prices continue a downward trend, the average for steers being the lowest since 1911. The price range between the better and poorer grades is usually narrow as a re sult of small premium for choice steers. Veal calves represent the one class of livestock selling above April prices.

While prices of spring lambs were considerably lower than a year ago, still the late crop of fed lambs are selling more in line with prices of 1930. May prices averaged about a cent a pound under last year.

Butter prices have shown improvement, after a May average of 11 cents a pound under the same month a year ago. The seasonal increase in production was under normal this year, receipts were lighter, and consumption was stimulated by low prices. Storage stocks on June 1 were lower than a year ago, but above the five-year average.

ASSOCIATION INSPECTS WHEAT, ORCHARD GRASS

The Kentucky Seed Improvement Association announces the inspection by its secretary, Ralph Kenney of the College of Agriculture, of wheat fields in Jefferson, Oldham and Todd counties. Varieties inspected were Currel's Prolific and Posey's Bluestem Fultz. One crop of the latter was picked one head at a time before thrashing last year and now is considered the purest wheat in the state. Six crops of orchard grass were inspected in Shelby and Oldham counties. Only one field contained daisies, and only three weeds in 15 acres. Most of the growers had removed sourdock by burning, hoeing of the scythe.

MARE SUPPLIES MILK INTO COTTAGE CHEESE

Cottage cheese is a good way to make use of surplus milk, says Miss Florence Imlay of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Even small children, at least two years old, can eat well made cottage cheese without difficulty. The following receipt is a good way of preparing it for young children.

1 C. cottage chees 1-16 tps salt
3-4 tbsp. cream 1 tsp jelly

Mix together cottage cheese, cream and salt. Form into balls, put a few dots of jelly on top and serve.

The older children and adult members of the family may enjoy cottage cheese dishes prepared in the following ways:

6 well ripened tomatoes
1 cup cottage cheese
1-3 cup diced celery
1 tbsp. chopped onion
mayonnaise dressing
lettuce.

Cut a slice off the tomatoes. Take out the center of tomatoes with a spoon,, being careful not to break the shell. Mix together cottage cheese, celery and onion. Add sufficient mayonnaise to soften cottage cheese mixture. Fill center of tomatoes, put two teaspoon mayonnaise on top and serve on a lettuce leaf.

Cottage cheese Sandwich

6 slices whole wheat bread
Butter
1 cup cottage cheese
1-3 cup grated carrot
1 tbsp. celery
1 tsp. onion
Mayonnaise

Cut 6 thin slices of whole wheat bread and spread well with butter. Mix cottage cheese, carrot, celery and onion with enough mayonnaise to make a good spreading mixture. Spread filling on one side of bread, add leaf of lettuce and second slice of bread.

LIGHTNING ROD USE GROWS

The New Modern Approved pure copper-cable lightning rod is a real protection to valuable property and human life. All fire insurance Companies recommend and endorse this new equipment.

The National Board of Fire Underwriters of New York place their approval on it and say that the lightning rod is coming back and coming to stay, because its value in eliminating lightning losses has been amply demonstrated.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington, D. C. in a further effort to reduce the vast lightning fire waste of our country have published a very valuable booklet on copper lightning rods.

Our National Fire Prevention Association at Boston, says; There are few fire causes against which so reliable a defense is available.

The Executive Committee of the Farmers Mutual Fire Insurance Company of Boone and Kenton Counties give their approval of its with a 20 year guarantee from a responsible Company who manufacture and install this new improved rod are your guaranttee of protection.

SOIL PREPARATION RETURNS PROFITS

Good soil preparation for burley and one sucker tobacco, to be followed with alfalfa, has made double and triple dividends for two Allen county farmers, says J. H. Atkerson, county agent. L. W. Harrell limed and phosphated an acre of land and sowed it to sweet clover. The clover was turned under and one-sucker tobacco set. The acre produced 1,930 pounds of tobacco in 1929, selling for $236. The land then was sowed to barley, which produced 40 bushels. Alfalfa was sowed in the barley in the spring of 1930, and cut a ton of hay late last summer, and nearly two tons at the first cutting this year.

J. L. Celsor grew 1,078 pounds of burley tobacco on two-sevenths of an acre, selling it for $258 last year. This tobacco was limed, manured and phosphated. Alfalfa was sowed on the plot last August, and yielded at the rate of two tons to the acre the first cutting this spring.

HOODOO

STILL GRIPS BELLEVIEW WHEN PLAYING WALTON—GO DOWN TWICE IN HOLIDAY GAMES—ROGERS HURLS WELL BUT LOSES, AND SO DOES BRADY—GLENN GOOD IN PINCHES

On the wave of a jinx that has been riding the Belleview club for the past three years the Walton club downed the former twice in a row on July 4th., at Belleview. The games, which were exhibition affairs, resulted in scores of 3-1 and 4-3 and both were spirited battles all the way. But Belleview, fight hard though they may, just can't seem to win against Walton.

Morning Game 3-1

Bill Rogers twirled a masterly game in the morning tilt and deserved a better fate, but misplays behind him put him "in Dutch." He allowed the hard hitting Waltonians seven scattered bingles and struck out five men. Benson and Norman did the flinging for Walton and allowed the same number of hits between them, Benson permitting 4 in the five innings he worked, Norman allowing 3 in four innings.

Walton scored one run in the first inning that was cleanly earned. Robinson doubled and was sent across on a single by Glenn. In the third, however, Walton scored twice on three errors and one hit, a double by Norman. Robinson was safe on an error and Norman hit his double, after which two consecutive errors on Glenn and Dudgeon allowed Robinson and Norman to trickle over with the runs that meant victory.

Belleview's one run came in the fifth when J. Walton walked and was followed by a single by Stephens. Cook batted for Clore and singled, sending Walton in with Belleview's lone tally.

Belleview Rallies Late

[illegible] was leading by a score of 3 to 0 when Belleview came up for their half of the eighth. Pope batted for "Shiner" Ryle and singled to right and J. Walton ran for him. Cook also singled sending Walton to second. Mutt Rogers grounded to theinfield and both runners advanced to second and third from whence they ran home when Miller hit a long fly to left and Johnson's throw in bounced into the crowd along the third base line.

Walton, however, pushed one over in their half of the ninth, which Johnson started with a single and stole second. He ambled home on Hartman's hot single to left center.

In the Belleview half of the final frame they made a valiant effort, but went down for the last out with the bases clogged. Black opened the session with a vicious drive thru the box for a single and was replaced on the paths by Clore. Harley Sprague batted for Hensley and fanned and Brady filed out. Stephens then singled to left sending Clore to third. Mutt Rogers' effort was a grounder to short, which Ross shot to second for a forceout of Stephens, but the play failed by inches and Clore was over with the third run for Belleview.

With Cook and Miller coming up in succession Belleview looked good for at least a tied score and very probably the two runs necessary to win. But Glenn was foxy and pitched very carefully to Cook, finally walking him and the bases were full. Miller's best was a high fly to Dudgeon at second and the game was over.

Walton's first three runs were scored in the third and seventh, two coming in the third frame. In the third Ross singled and stole and was sent home by Robinson's single to center and Robinson later came across on Glenn's drive to right. In the seventh Johnson was hit by a pitched ball and was forced at second on Hartman's grounder. Hartman then stole and rode home on Hudson's single to left center.

Joe Brady was in the box for Belleview for the first time this season and pitched a very clever game. Glenn for Walton also was effective in the pinches, each allowing nine hits.

Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Stephens and son, Wilford and Mrs. W. C. Hughes spent from Wednesday until Sunday at Mayfield, Graves county, where they attended the annual meeting of the Rural Letter Carriers Association.

Deaths

JOHN P. GRAHAM

John P. Graham, aged 43 years, after an illness of a few hours, Coroner H. F. Donnelly of Kenton County pronounced death due to cerebral hemorrhage. Funeral services were from the late residence, Shaw Ave., Elsmere, Ky., with requiem high mass at St. Henry's church at 9 o'clock Thursday morning by the Rev. Geo. C. Bealer, after which the remains were taken to Cincinnati, for interment.

Mr. Graham was formerly City Councilman of Elsmere and was employed by the American Express Co., Cincinnati. He is survived by his widow, one son and three daughters, besides many other relatives and friends to morn his untimely demise.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

MISS MARY ALDIE CARPENTER

Miss Mary Aldie Carpenter, passed away early Saturday morning at the home of her sister, Mrs. Eli Carpenter, in the Devon neighborhood, after a long illness.

Funeral services were held at the Mt. Zion Methodist church, Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, by the Rev. Simmerman, assisted by Rev., Bedinger, after which the remains were laid to rest in the Carpenter Cemetery, near Richwood, Ky.

She is survived by three brothers and two sisters, besides a host of other relatives and friends.

The pall bearers were Henry Carpenter, Omer Easton, Wood and Lather Carpenter, Frank Afterkirk and Dan Carpenter.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

In loving remembrance of my dearly beloved cousin Charles [illegible]

One year ago to day
A certain loved one passed away
His smiling way and pleasant face
Are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word far each
And died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him
Some day, we know not when
To clasp his hand in the bette land
Never to part again.

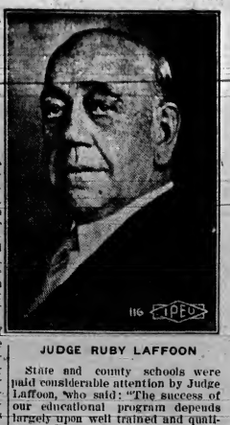
NEW LIBRARY

AT UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY READY FOR USE BY STUDENTS —ULTRA-MODERN IN EVERY DETAIL—

Just completed at cost of $400,000 with equipment costing $30,000 more the new University of Kentucky library represents the last word in library construction as regards utility and efficiency. The building is fireproof of Georgian architecture and consists of four floors and basement. The stack section is in a separate portion of the building and has eight levels. In the various reading, browsing and seminary rooms, seats are provided for more than 500 persons. A total of 200,000 books can be contained within the structure with ease. A staff of 15 full time and 20 student employees is necessary to properly man the building.

The basement of the structure consists of various service rooms including work rooms, rooms for preparing books for the bindary, janitors rooms, and a fireproof vault for rare and autographed publications as well as first editions.

The first floor contains a large main lobby which will be used as a museum for rare books, coins, etc. Glass wall cases will house poster displays and announcements of new books. A check room off of this lobby be maintained for the convenience of visitors. To the west of the main lobby is the reserve reading room to the east is the periodical reading room. At the present time about 750 periodicals are regulary received by the University of Kentucky library.



On the second floor is another fair sized lobby containing the loan desk and the general card index files. Back of the loan desk and the general card index files. To the north of this lobby, a long room

Democratic Nominee For Governor Plans Relief For Tax Burdened State

Laffoon Flays Republican Misrule in Speech of Acceptance

Promises Rigid Economy in Business Administration

JUDGE RUBY LAFFOON

MADISONVILLE, Ky. — Judge Ruby Laffoon, in a speech formally accepting the democratic nomination for governor of Kentucky, sounded a note of high idealism in government reform that inspired the thousands who attended the notification ceremonies here with full confidence in the party platform, and implanted a firm belief that the entire state ticket will be elected in November by one of the greatest majorities ever recorded by any party in Kentucky politics.

After saying that realization of the responsibilities that fall to the standard bearer had somewhat sobered his elation over being unanimously nominated by the state convention, and after paying high tribute to the character and qualifications of each of his opponents before the convention, Judge Laffoon treated specifically many of the changes in administration policy he proposes to seek.

Economy Program

Pledging rigid economy in all departments of state government the nominee declared his first step would be a complete audit to show the financial status of the common wealth at the time he becomes governor. He described a system of accounting, he proposes to inaugurate, that will tabulate the state's business complete each twenty-four hours. "By this means we can know at the close of business each day how much the state owes, to whom, for what, when the obligation was incurred and when it will mature.

"We promise a thorough investigation of every state department for the purpose of discovering and correcting abuses and eliminating waste and extravagance wherever it [illegible] of assessment, saying: "Our overburdened taxpayers are entitled to relief, and I find the bulk of complaints have to do with the blanket assessment clause in the state law. Our platform promises legislation that will prevent unfair taxation through the dodge of blanket assessment.

Banking Situation

"Under the benevolent guidance of 'Miracle Man' Hoover our country has been weakened and our people distressed by a series of appalling bank failures. Countless depositors have lost their life savings through collapse of certain faulty phases of our banking structure. Our platform emphasizes the crying need for more stringent laws and more rigid enforcement, and we stand pledged to the appointment of competent officials who will be named after a competitive examination to determine their fitness.

"I realize that banking is a hazardous business, devolving risk upon stockholders who, even as depositors, require protection in the legitimate conduct of their business. One of the first acts to be requested of the general assembly will be legislation looking toward further protection of depositors and bankers alike," said the nominee.

Farm-to-Market Roads

Praising the present highway commission for its efficiency and fair distribution of road construction, Judge Laffoon pledged his administration to early completion of trunk lines through the state. After these have been built, vast sums of money will become available for building lateral, or farm-to-market roads, he said. "Our farmers must be provided with means for transporting, at a minimum cost, their products to markets at all seasons," he declared.

[illegible] machinery, and, in fact, for every implement of husbandry that you have to buy.

Starving Amid Plenty

"Starvation on every hand in a land of plenty. Every granary bursting with wheat and every packing house filled with meat while hunger stalks in thousands of homes, is a strange commentary on the effectiveness of paternal administration as hailed out by our republican friends.

"Ten billions unemployed, five thousand bank failures, twenty-five thousand commercial failures a year, thousands of abandoned farms, wild speculation in stocks, declining export totals, decreased production and a rapidly mounting crime wave are the net result's of republican normalcy since the good year 1920.

"Now, they tell us that no political party can be held responsible for economic conditions. Four years ago they were telling us that if we wanted indefinite continuation of the general prosperity then being enjoyed, the only way to get it would be to vote for the republican ticket. My friends, if they take the credit for prosperity, they likewise must accept responsibility for their so-called 'depression.'

"Whenever the American people have become depressed beyond endurance, whenever they have felt the crushing force of privilege, whenever they have seen government threatened by centralization, whenever they have been sickened by corruption in high places, whenever they have looked for progress and reform—they have called the democratic party into power.

"They did it in 1800. They did it again in 1884, and again in 1912. They are starting to do the same thing now, and will complete the task in 1932," concluded Judge Laffoon.

LIGHTNING LOSSES PAID

Electrical storms during the past thirty days have caused considerable damage in Boone county, according to the records of the Farmars' Mutual Insurance Company, which has paid losses during that period amounting to more than two thousand dollars.

The losses include C.S. Finnell, Verona, $6.00; Martha Conner, East Bend, $17.85; Horace Simpson, Walton, $8.66; John J. Criswell, Union $10.00; Jess Wilson, Verona, $15.00; John J. Myers, Verona, $5.00; W. R. Morris, $50.00; and F. M. Voshell, Belleview precinct, $2,055.00, making a grand total of $2,167.51.

J. B. Arvin, local expressman, is having a new five room residence erected on his lot in Maple Grove sub-division. J. M. Botts, Lloyd Kelly and W. W. Green are the work men.

TRUCK GROWERS CERTIFICATES

A total of 46 Boone county truck crop growers have received Market Growers applications from the county agent's office the past few weeks. The above growers must secure bona fide truck growers applications signed by the county agent of affidavit filled out by a notary public before license will be issued by the city of Cincinnati to sell truck crops on 12th., Street Market.

A survey of the truck crops produced in Boone county will reveal that the return from market truck crops is much greater than many have probably anticipated.

Last Friday night while the electrical shafts were playing around Burlington a bolt struck a chimney on the residence of J. W. Grant. No serious damage resulted, except that a kitten was found dead on the back porch the next morning. It was reported that the Grant residence recently had been equipped with lightning rods, but that report proved to be erroneous.

A number of Burlington church team base ball fans attended the game at Warsaw on the Fourth between the Burlington Baptist and the Warsaw Christian teams. The local team won out over the Warsaw boys when they staged a three run rally in the ninth. Going in to the ninth they were trailing 3 to 1, but with two on Aubrey Finn doubled against the school house and Ray Hickman sent him home with another hit of like porportion.

While returning from Scottsburg, Indiana last Friday morning Raymond Holbrook was very painfully injured when a companion, with whom he was riding, tried to make a turn at a high rate of speed, crashing his car into an embankment. Holbrook, who was riding in the rumble seat, was pitched thru the rear window of the car, cutting his face in several places. With two other companions, who were slightly injured, he was rushed to a doctor in Scottsburg, where his wounds were treated. It was necessary to take several stitches in Holbrook's wounds. He now is said to be recovering nicely under the care of Dr. M. A. Yelton.

FOUR TEAMS

WILL SCRAP FOR LEADERSHIP IN SECOND HALF OF SEASON IN COUNTY LEAGUE—BURLINGTON AND RABBIT HASH WITHDRAW—

Due to the withdrawal of the Burlington and Rabbit Hash teams from the Boone county league there will be but four tams in the final half, namely, Walton, Petersburg, Hebron and Belleview.

The Burlington team made a very poor showing in the first half and Rabbit Hash was also pretty much out of the running. The Rabbit Hash team also has lost Brady as a pitcher due to his transfer to Ashland Kk., where he will do diving work for Uncle Sam. With the report that one or two other players were to leave the team, Managers Wingate and Craig, of Rabbit Hash, rather than stay in the league with an odd number of teams, also decided to follow Manager Blythe, of Burlington, out of the organization during the final half.

With the four teams that remain almost on an equality the quartet should put up a spirited race. Next Saturday afternoon Hebron will play Walton a game at Walton to decide a tie which has existed since the opening day of the season, while Petersburg will play an exhibition tilt at Belleview. Boehler will be in the box for Petersburg and will try to avenge his 6-5 defeat when these two team last met. The game at Walton will have an important bearing on the result of the first half as Walton cannot cinch the pennant without defeating Hebron.

On Saturday July 18th., the second half will open with Hebron playing at Petersburg and walton going to Belleview. These dates were decided by drawing at Burlington last Monday night. The remainder of the schedule will be announced in [illegible] half will end August 22.

CAPITAL STOCK

OF NORTHERN DISTRICT WAREHOUSING CORPORATION TO BE REDUCED—$40,000.00 TO BE DISTRIBUTED TO STOCK HOLDERS—

The Directors of the Northern District Warehousing Corporation have asked the stockholders to sign a paper consenting to the reduction of the outstanding Capital Stock of the Corporation from $641,000.00 to $160,000.00.

The present Capital stock of the Corporation is entirely too large, and it should be reduced to the amount proposed by the Board. If all the property of the Corporation were sold to-day we seriously doubt if it would bring $160,000.00. But as the Board proposes to reduce the holdings of each stockholder in equal proportion, the new certificates of stock will be given each stockholder exactly the same interest in all the properties of the Corporation which he now has, and this is true regardless of the actual value of the property.

The Board had more than $40,000 in cash to be distributed among the stockholders but it is advised that it cannot make this distribution until two-thirds of the stockholders sign the waiver consenting to the reduction of Capital Stock.

As many of the stockholders seem to be in doubt about signing and returning these notices to the secretary of the Board at Carrollton, we take pleasure in making this brief statement of the case and advise all stockholders to sign these consent notices at once and mail them to the Carrollton office.

If a sufficient amount of the stock is so voted by August 11th., a dividend check will at once be mailed to each stockholder. As we understand it this money cannot be disholders consent to a Capital reductributed until and unless the stockion of the Corporation.

If the stock is reduced to one-fourth, each stockholder will get the same amount of money he would get if no reduction was made.

Boone County Wool Growers Association will receive sealed bids on its pooled wool at Walton Ky., Monday July 13 at 1:00 o'clock.

A STATESMANLIKE MOVE

In calling in the leaders of both the major political parties and getting their approval beforehand, President Hoover acted in a statesmanlike way in putting forward his proposal for a one year suspension of payment of principal and interest on war debts.

It seems to be the belief of the men who know best about such things that this will bring about an immediate improvement in business conditions all over the world. President Hoover's justification is, of course, that it will benefit the United States of America. We are not in the business of doing thigs because they will benefit some other country unless we get a corresponding benefit. But when men like Owen D. Young, the famous reparations, such men of big affairs as Charles G. Dawes and Andrew Mellon on the Republican side, and statesmen on the order of Newton Baker and Carter Glass on the Democratic side, all agree that to ease up the economic pressure on Germany will result in improved business in America, we, naturally, have to agree with them. They know a great deal more about it than we do.

We do not understand that any one expects an instantaneous return, or a return in a single year, to the high point of prosperity which we reached in 1928. But already the financial and business world is demonstrating its confidence that the upswing has begun, and the outlook for the coming year seems distinctly brighter than it did a month ago.

After all it is only good business to give a debtor easy terms if he cannot meet the terms agreed on. Everybody who owes more money than he can immediately pay, has found his creditors generally willing to take what he could give them, rather than to apply undue pressure. It is only fair to Germany to give that republic the same kind of a chance to catch up that, private business interests grant to their customers who may be in difficulties.

"How Old Is Anne?"

Under date of October 12, 1903, John Mahon of Brooklyn wrote a letter to a columnist of the New York Press which started the commotion over a problem which he stated as follows: "Mary is twenty-four years old. She is twice as old as Anne was when she was as old as Anne is now. How old is Anne now? A says the answer is sixteen; B says twelve. Which is correct?"

Old London's Wooden Houses

Timber was employed as a building material for most of London's houses before the great fire of 1666, stone and brick being employed only for churches, public buildings and the homes of the nobility.

Paper for Postage Stamps

The paper used in the manufacture of postage stamps is made of bleached chemical wood fiber derived at the present time, from North Carolina pine trees.

Early Life Insurance

The earliest life insurance policy of which anything definite is known was issued in 1583 in London, insuring the life of William Gybbons for a twelvemonth. This policy was underwritten by 13 persons acting individually and the premium was $80 a thousand.

Bloody Conflict

The most sanguinary battle ever recorded in history, according to ancient records, was the battle of Chalons, where Attila, the Hun, was met by the Gothic prince Thorismund, commanding the Visigoths and Roman forces. The dead left upon the field is estimated as between 250,000 and 300,000 men.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" — By B. Link

SAYS CHICKENPOX MAY BE PREVENTED

Chickenpox, a troublesome disease on many farms, may to a large degree be prevented, says the department of animal pathology of the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky.

Poultry should be fed a balanced ration. The importance of green feed and clean water should not be forgotten. The houses should be dry, properly ventilated, and well lighted. Crowding the birds should be avoided. Ample roosting space should be provided. Houses should be cleaned at least once a week. Drinking utensils should be scalded with boiling water. The fowls should be kept free of lice and mites. The addition of medical agents to the drinking water as a routine procedure is not to be recommended. Frequent use of epsom salts is to be discouraged. New birds and returned show stock should be quarantined for two weeks before being placed with the flock. Shipping crates should not be used for fowls unless they have been cleaned and disinfected.

Dampness, drafts, insanitary surroundings and parasites favor the and severity of chickenpox but are not the cause of the disease. Healthy vigorous birds kept in clean, dry, well-ventilated houses are quite as apt to contract chickenpox as are birds in poor condition of infested with parasites. However, once the disease is introduced into an unthrifty flock the infection will spread more rapidly, the disease will appear in a more severe form, the mortality will be higher, and, if the firds are vaccinated, the results will be less favorable. It is generally believed that biting insects, such as mites, lice and mosquitoes may help to spread the infection.

In Many of Life — BRUCE BARTON

As we drove along beside the Hudson River we noticed a crowd at one of the piers. A discouraged gentleman had attempted to drown himself.

Dripping and dejected, he sat on an empty barrel, while the cop who had pulled him out of the water talked to him like a big brother. Presently the patrol wagon arrived to take him away, the cop still uttering words of friendly encouragement.

At a busy corner stood a woman with a baby in her arms and a youngster tugging at her skirt, anxiously viewing the torernt of traffic, afraid to plunge in.

The cop in the middle of the street sighted her, and raising his arm with a knightly gesture. The city stopped while the timid little mother crossed over.

It was late at night. On the steps of a residence, the windows of which were shuttered, a man was slouched in an obvious state of intoxication.

A cop touched him on the shoulder. They had a brief conversation. Presently the cop hailed a taxi driver, loaded the inebriated citizen in it, gave instructions to the driver, and the taxi drove away.

These incidents, occurring within my own sight and close together, reminded me that I have long intended to write a little somethig about Cops.

I have been a respectful admirer of them for years. They are so good looking physically, so even tempered, so courteous and so sensible.

Doubtless there is an occasional grafter among them; no large group of men in any profession is free from black sheep.

I admire most of all their self-possession and the sound commonsense way in which they go about their work. Adlai E. Stephenson, once vice-president of the United States, used to quote a friend's remark that "the Constitution of Illinois is an almost perfect document, but it shoud have one additional paragraph. It should provide for an appeal from the Supreme Court to any two justices of the peace."

The idea was that when all the high-priced lawyers and judges had finished their legal wrangling, then a couple of country chaps should render a final decision on the basis of simple common sense.

I recall that remark whenever I see a cop calmly taking testimony and despensing justice in a traffic case. I feel then like adding a paragraph to my will to read:

"In case any dispute among my heirs, the whole matter shall be submitted to the nearest traffic policeman, and his decision shall be final."

The Family Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Late Cabbage.—If the late cabbage plants are not set yet, there should be no further delay. A good way to start them off, even in dry weather, is to ring them with nitrate of soda, one-half teaspoon per plant. The cabbage worm campaign should be begun immediately by dusting with calcium arsenate, and lime, one part to six.

Beans.—Gardeners should bear in mind that in order to have a surplantings of beans should be double the length the bean budget calls for. In order to cope with the Mexican bean beetle each planting should receive a thorough dusting when the first adults are seen, and another ten days later, whether the beans seem to be suffering or not.

Tomatoes.—Soon the blackening and falling of the leaves of tomatoes will begin, if, in fact, it has not already begun. This is the blight. It is controlled by spraying with bordeaux mixture, the first spraying given now, and at least one more after two weeks.

Salsify.—At about this time the first sign of salsify of oyster-plant blight appears. Even if this trouble is not yet apparent, it is excellent to spray with bordeaux mixture now, before any of the foliage is lost.

Potatoes.—Potato digging has begun. If the planting is no larger than just to supply the daily needs, there need be no worry about how to save the crop, but if part of these potatoes are to be used well into the winter, the problem of saving them will offer itself. The best way to keep potatoes is by storing them in a cool cellar. Since such facilities may not be at hand, the next best thing to do is to leave the potatoes where they grew, throwing a ridge of soil over them, to close all cracks in the ground, through which air or light might enter. This extra covering also tends to keep sun heat from reaching the tubers. The ridging should be done when the tops have died down, or slightly before. A point against this manner of storing is that there may be white grub and field mouse injury, but this is usually less than will result from attempting to keep dug potatoes in an unsuited storage place.

Beets and Carrots.—The reminder that now is the time to plant the winter beets and carrots, is in order. Because of the dry ground now and the probable absense of rains to come, the seedbed should finely and deeply prepared. Refertilizing should be done, as well. A good complete fertilizer (3-8-9 or 4-10-4) is recommended. It should be sown where the row is to stand, at the rate of one pound to 30 feet, and worked in with a hoe. It is well to do this a few days before seed sowing is to take place, so that the soil will have absorbed the fertilizer.

Cultivation.—Just in case the discussion of cultivation of a few weeks ago escaped your eye, it is well to repeat enough of it here to say that the best way to "work" any crop in the garden is to stir the soil just shallowly enough to keep ahead of the weeds. The surface, moreover, should be left shallow. No crop should ever be ridged. This is drought insurance, besides effecting a considerable saving in hoeing.

KENTUCKY FARM NEWS

Forty boys and girls and parents recently inspected the calves being fed by 4-H club members in Garrard county. Eighty-six purebred Aberdeen-Angus calves are being finished for the annual fat stock show at the Bourbon Stock Yards in Louisville. Headed by R. B. McClure, the club members and their parents looked the calves over and heard the owners discuss their progress and the rations used.

Two hundred people attended the annual show and meeting of raspberry growers at Parksville in Boyle county. Prizes were distributed for the best displays made by adult growers and by 4-H Club members. Forty acres of raspberries were harvested in Boyle county this year. An additional acreage has been set for next year, with a goal of 80 acres for 1933. Plantings are confined largely to Parksville, Junction City, McDonald and Mitchellsburg communities.

Joe Gordon, living near Middlesboro, raised 1,000 chickens to broiler and fryer sizes this year without any losses. He probably is the first Bell county farmer to adopt what is known as the "disease-free" system of poultry raising, according to County Agent R. V. Trosper. He started the chicks in a basement and transferred them to the brooder houses with wire floors, which prevented disease contamination and reduced losses to a minimum.

Eleven Grayson county farmers have entered 14 litters of pigs in the state ton-litter club.

FIRST 4-H CLUB DISTRICT FAIR

The first 4-H club district fair in the United States is scheduled to be held by 26 central counties at the Kentucky Trotting Horse Breeders' Association grounds in Lexington August 24-25. Swine, sheep, beef cattle, dairy cattle, poultry, clothing, food, canning and room improvement exhibits will be made, representing 7,000 junior agricultural club memebers. A total of $2,000, including $600 appropriated by the State, will be distributed in prizes. J. Ed. Parker, county agent in Fayette county, is in charge of arrangements. The fair is being sponsored by the Fayette county 4-H leaders' council and the Lexington Board or Commerce.

AMONG THE COUNTY AGENTS

Newspapers, banks and seed dealers helped to make Pulaski county's soybean acreage the largest in the history of the county.

Cutworms caused losses to strawberry growers in western Kentucky.

Warren county farmers are turning to beef cattle production, because of low prices for milk and other dairy products.

Daviess county farmers who mowed their wheat in the spring report lighter straw and less lodging.

An abundance of clover and grass pastures helped Fulton county farmers to produce the best lambs ever seen in that county.

THE PREACHING OF THE APOSTLES

Acts 4: 1-14

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Faith in any religion is indicated by the way its followers seek to propagate it. Passing the truths of Christianity on to others is one of the basic principles which Jesus Christ proclaimed. Naturally the apostles' teaching aroused the opposition of those who were especially related to the Jewish Sanhedrin. One particular reason for opposing those of the new sect was that they asserted that the body of Jesus had been raised from death. This was a position that the Saducees denied. Itwas with real eagerness that the Saducees saw to it that Peter and John were put under guard for trial the next day. These apostles had wrought a miracle under the power of the Holy Spirit in healing a cripple who had asked for alms from them as they were going into the Temple area. Of course a crowd was attracted and Peter used the opportunity of preaching to the people.

The Sanhedrin was summond and the healed man was present with at least his silent testimony. The question was asked "By what power, or in what name have ye done this?" Again Peter had a lead for further witnessing concerning Jesus of Nazareth and the active work of the Holy Spirit. The climax of the message was in the statement about Jesus Christ: "And in none other is there salvation: for neither is there any other name under heaven, that is given among men, wherein we must be saved."

The Sanhedrin could not deny the fact of the healed man who was in their midst. Their sentence was that this kind of preaching must stop. Peter's bold answer to that injunction is given in the Golden Text: "We must obey God rather than men." Acts 5:29.

Hints for the Home — by Nancy Hart

Spinach Jelly Salad

Mix together a half cup of chopped drained spinach in cup of soup stock. Heat thoroughly and add to it a tablespoon of granulated gelatin that has been dissolved in a quarter cup of cold water. Stir until dissolved, season with pepper and salt and a few drops of onion juice if desired, put into small molds and set away to cool. When they are formed place one mold on each bed of lettuce leaves; add mayonnaise before serving.

Creamed Spinach

Run chopped cooked spinach through the vegetable chopper and reheat in a double-boiler with a little thick cream sauce. The spinach should be drained thoroughly after it is chopped.

Spinach and Lima Bean Salad

To French dressing add chopped parsley and a few drops of onion juice; pour over cold, chopped lima beans, mix thoroughly and let stand in cool place to become chilled and seasoned. Reheat the left-over spinach, drain and, while still very hot chop very fine and pack firmly in a deep bowl, when cold invert bowl over center of salad plate remove bowl, leaving spinach; surround with the prepared lima beans and garnish with hard cooked eggs.

Fried Spinach Balls

Three cups cooked, chopped spinach; 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons grated onion, 2 tablespoons grated cheese, 1 egg, 1-8 teaspoon allspice, 1 cup fine dry bread.

Combine ingredients and let stand ten minutes to swell the bread crumbs. Shape in balls and roll in bread crumbs. The dip the balls in egg which has been slightly beaten with one half cup cold water and roll again in crumbs. Fry in deep fat. Serve at once or reheat in oven when desired.

Hashed Spinach with Hard Boiled Eggs

Wash spinach very carefully. Cook in boiling salted water until tender, about 30 minutes. Lift the spinach out of the water. Chop fine and season with butter. Serve in vegetable dish with a border of hard-cooked eggs cut into quarter sections.

The Georgetown National bank is sponsoring 4-H clubs in Scott county, including the raising of purebred pigs by members of the Long Lick club.

Nomination Of Hoover Sure, Demo's Have Many Possibles

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Naturally there is more or less uneasiness pervading Republican circles with respect to what may happen on November 8, 1932, but no good Republican (and there are "good" Republicans) is suffering from insomnia over what may happen just one year from now when several hundred coatless and fan-equipped delegates will perfunctorily pick a Republican standard bearer and a substitute for the battle of 1932, and raid a second hand lumber yard for 2x12x16's replaned and well seasoned.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, is to continue as Chairman of the Republican National Committee. Unless a miracle comes to pass, it will require but one ballot to nominate Herbert Hoover to succeed himself. If he wants the job, undoubtedly Charles Curtis will be re-named for second place on the ticket, and even if the Kansan declines to run there will be no deadlock over the selection of another vice-presidential candidate. A few gentlemen of moist persuasion may attempt to stall the water-wagon, but efforts in that direction are foredoomed to failure. It will be a gesture, nothing more.

As a matter of fact, no good reason can be seen for going to the expense of holding a National Republican convention next year. Even the lack of political significance in the appearance of that bugaboo we call depression has been threshed out. Everybody knows all about it, and nobody wants to be further bored by explanations, exculpations or promises.

How different conditions in the Democratic camp! Nobody has the slightest idea about what anybody else is going to do—much less about what is going to happen at the 1932 Democratic convention either as to candidate or platform.

Of course, just at the present moment, Governor Franklin D. Roosvelt, of New York, is leading the field. Woodrow Wilson's grand Vizier, Colonel Edward Mandell House, tried to inject a little sugar into the Roosevelt porridge, but if had discovered a fly in the Roosevelt potpourri he did not tell us about it, nor did he suggest how it might be ensnared or decapitated. The fly is there, all right. Its name is Alfred Emanuel Smith.

Observers here are very decidedly of the opinion that Al Smith would like to have another try for the presidency. Having received the largest popular vote ever accorded to a Democratic candidate there is none to conscientiously criticise such an ambition. It is evident that he does not propose to throw his influence to the support of Roosevelt, Young, Davis, or Ritchie so long as there remains the possibility of another chance for Smith and the prospects for Democratic success continue bright.

Just what Smith will do in the long run with respect to the Roosevelt candidacy continues to be one of the most interesting questions in connection with the Democratic situation and in all probability will remain so up until the time of the convention. Granting the political ethics of his desire for another chance, Mr. Smith's purpose still is a puzzle. Doubtless it is true that he does not know himself what he intends to do, but it has become evident that something has taken the edge off the cordial personal relations between Mr, Smith and the Governor, and the politicians closest to Smith are openly hostile to the Roosevelt candidacy.

There is no doubt that conditions prevent Smith from becoming an active candidate for the nomination at this time. His position as a private citizen does not put him forward as did the Governorship. He can do little beyond giving the Democratic party in its convention every chance to draft him and to make the drafting as easy as possible by conniving in it. Who does not know that any body who is drafted for executive office has had to connive in it?

It is said that the candidacy of Owen D. Young hangs upon the decision Smith may make in connection with his entrance into the 1932 race. It has been pointed out that the situation is not unlike that of Charles E. Dawes and ex-Governor Frank O. Lowden in the Republican contest of 1928. Young and Smith are friends, just as Dawes and Lowden were friends. The former largely appeal to the same element in the Democratic party just as Dawes and Lowden appealed to the same element in the Republican party in 1928. Mr. Dawes maintained an attitude of indifference to the nomination, just as Mr. Young appears to do now.

There has been no formal announcement of the candidacy of Governor Roosevelt, but the activities of his friends and of the Governor himself long since made it clear that he is very much in the running. As a matter of fact, his friends confidently assert that he is far in the lead, and an analysis of the present situation would certainly seem to confirm this. Apparently the group of advisers who believe in driving ahead with the Roosevelt boom have received the Governor's approval. Early in the coming year they hope to have him in a position where he cannot be outdistanced in the race. Whether this strategy is wise or unwise one thing may be taken for granted—until former Governor Smith reveals his attitude it will be impossible to say who will be the Democratic nominee.

It is thought that if Smith enters the race without too much delay, he probably will be able to at least deadlock the convention, just as did in 1924. He has just as many friends in the Democratic party as he did in the year of the long convention in Madison Square Garden. If he should succeed in merely deadlocking the convention, presumably his strength would go to Owen D. Young when he got ready to release his delegates, and that would be one way in which Mr. Young would stand a good chance of being nominated.

And then, as if the situation were not already complicated enough, to make "confusion worse dumfounded," comes information which is current here among prominent dry leaders that Wm. G. McAdoo, former Secretary of the Treasury, and co-deadlocker with Smith in the 1924 convention, is a receptive candidate for the Democratic nomination but will make no efforts in that direction.

Mr. McAdoo, according to leading drys, who it is understood have been in touch witth him, does not purpose to make a campaign for the nomination and does not expect to get it. However, in case of a deadlock in the national convention, he would be receptive and his friends would in all probability make an effort to name him. He would be satisfactory to the dry Democrats generally and would have strong support from the labor elements in the party.

The recent aloofness displayed by Mr. McAdoo toward Jouett Shouse when the latter was on the Pacific Coast met the approbation of dry leaders who are hostile to John J. Raskob, National Chairman, and who look upon Mr. Shouse as a Raskob lieutenant.

GRANT R. D.

Miss Thelma and Kathryn Fay Kelly of Elsmere, are the guests of their aunt, Mrs. J. L. Stephens.

Wallace Sutton and Solon Earl Ryle, of Burlington, are spending the week with their aunt, Mrs. J. H. Walton.

Mrs. Ada Wilson spent several days last week visiting Mrs. R. H. Stephens, of Burlington.

Historic Table Preserved

The table upon which the Declaration of Independence was signed is in Independence hall in Philadelphia.

An Able-a Youngster Changed Bible Story

The wit and wisdom of the Orientalic people, one of the many things that take up the Main room in text books in Africa.

Uniformly preverbs Unheeds being the speech of the Orimbundus—and the replies of Ovambonds children, especially in Bible classes taught by missionaries, says the Boston Post, show conclusively that the native African has a potential intellect not to be smeared at, and proves also that children are children the world over.

Results of a recent Bible examination among a group of children threw astounding light upon Biblical history. One small boy finished a dramatic recital of the story of David and Goliath (the native African is a born actor) with the rather startling climax which, translated literally, was:

"And the giant said to David, 'Go away, little boy, I like the looks of your face and I don't want to spoil it.'"

Woman Patriotic Figure in History of Old City

Mainz is one of the first and oldest cities on the Rhine. It has also furnished its share of legends and played its part in making this river one of the most famous in the world. Here is one that holds a bit of charm and philosophy: When the French occupied the city the countess of Stein led the young women to take a vow not to listen to a word of love from any man until the country was rid of the invaders. The French, thinking this might stimulate their foes, tried to humble her by giving her a broom and commanding her to sweep the streets. Instead of being shamed, she swept them and prayed as she swept, "God of my Fatherland, bless my sweeping, and as I sweep the highway, grant that the enemy may be swept from the land." Instead of jeering her, as the French had anticipated, her own people gathered about her and prayed "God bless the sweeping." Fired by the courage of the countess the young men succeeded in sweeping the enemy from their land.

Frankfort Long Great City

Since the great trade routes of the Middle ages, Frankfort-on-the-Main has played one of the most important parts in the commercial activities of all Europe, and for many years was the undisputed mistress of the international money market. However, her simplicity and quiet charm have not been affected by her eminent position in international affairs. She reflects her ancient walls and towers in the clear waters of the Main with a modest dignity becoming a beloved monarch. It is no wonder she beguiled and endeared herself so keenly to the heart of Goethe, her native son, who was inspired to write his famous opera "Faust," in the first part of which old Frankfort breathes in almost every verse.

Proof of Education

William H. Danforth selected the following from "The Marks of an Educated Man"; An educated man cultivates the open mind; never laughs at new ideas; knows the secret of getting along with other people; cultivates the habit of success; knows as a man thinketh, so is he; knows popular notions are always wrong; always listens to the man who knows; links himself with a great cause; builds an ambition picture to fit his abilities; keeps busy at his highest natural level; knows it is never too late to learn; never loses faith in the man he might have been; achieves the masteries that make him a world citizen, and lives a great religious life.

Good Cheer

Good cheer is almost as essential to life as sunshine, air and water—and is quite as plentiful.

Cheerfulness has a dual value in life. First it helps you—then it helps you to help others—and it keeps on spreading out into the great throng of humanity, stirring the hearts of men as the gentle breeze stirs the leaves of the forest—returning again and again to you in its endless course and all the while making the heavy load lighter and the dark road brighter for all.

Good cheer is one of the biggest little things among all the elements of success.

Buddhists Shrine

The great Shwe Dagon pagoda is one of the best known places of worship in the East. It has a particular sanctity to Buddhists because it is credited with containing actual relics not only of Gautama but of the three Buddhas before him. The pagoda stands upon a mound partly natural and partly artificial. It is about 370 feet high and is profusely covered with gilt from base to summit. At the base of the pagoda hill are many monasteries.

Beautiful Stockholm

There are a few cities of the world whose beauty it never seems possible to eclipse, and Stockholm is one. It is a city of great and splendid buildings—the town hall and the royal palace are of the first order in Europe. The spacious streets are lined with gay and palatial hotels and quiet, lovely homes. But perhaps the waterways and the islands on which the city is built are what make Stockholm not just beautiful, but the beautiful.

TO THE VOTERS OF GRANT AND BOONE COUNTY

I have announced as a candidate for Representative in this district. I represented both Grant and Boone in 1930 session, and my record is one of clean, honest and efficient service. I am not afraid to ask you for your vote this term.

I was unable to run two years ago, as it was Boone's term. It has always been customary to give a man a second term if he secured the best interest of his people while in office. I think you will agree with me, that there was not a member in the House that worked any harder for his people than I did.

I will give you a list of the bills that I killed, and some that I voted against: I tabled Mr. Alcock's bill that required farmers driving live stock on the highways to have a light in front and rear of their stock; tabled Harry Myers' bill, in which would have taken the gravel pits from the county and placed them in the hands of the Road Commision; I tabled the bill to take one and a half million dollars from the road funds and place it in the the general expense fund to pay for free text books; I tabled the county budget which if passed would have created one hundred and nineteen new officers at an average salary of $2,100 a year. I voted against the free text book bill and the insurance bill; also the fish and game law, requiring a man to pay one dollar for fishing with a hand pole; I voted against the Ripper Bill, which would have crippled the Public Health Department; I voted for the County Superintendant bill; the bill reducing the tax on live stock to ten cents on the hundred. These are some of the bills I voted for and against.

The farmers are fighting with their backs to the wall, and if there isn't something done by the next Legislature to relieve them of some of their tax burden, I see nothing ahead but disaster. The only way the farmer can get relief is to make a fight for a fair and equal taxation elect men who are in sympathy with them and back them up with petitions and instruct them.

I am asking you for a fair consideration and thanking you for your kindness in the past.

Respectfully,
C. F. THORNTON

The farmers of Boone County are requested to meet at the Court House Saturday, July the 11th., at two o'clock P. M. to join the other 31 counties, who are trying to get public sentiment behind the movement strong enough to force a lower (or no) assessed valuation on farm land. Every county that joins in this demand makes our chances better to win out. I will be present and explain the object of these meetings, in these meetings there are no politics as Democrats and Republicans both attend.

Yours Respectfully,
C. F. THORNTON.

MAIN STREET LOOKS AT BROADWAY

BY OBSERVER

Sharpers

It's a good plan when visiting New York to keep moving right along. A stop is likely to lead to anything, including a chance to spend or give away some of your hardearned money. Nowhere else in this country are there so many people living by their wits as in this city.

These men can be found every where, from the ritziest hotels and most elegantly furnished Wall Street offices to the sidewalk curbs, and they are allafter the same thing—your money. Back in one's home town, practically the only unexpected appeals that come to you for money are from book agents and backdoor solicitors. These men are avowedly after your money and you can slam the door in their faces and end the attack.

Kid Business Men

Even the children here intercept one of the streets in the unending game of trying to separate you from your coin. Most of them are bootblacks of the kind Horatio Alger made famous two generations ago. They are usually worthy little chaps and well deserve the nickel they charge for polishing your shoes.

They are much the same type as Alger drew as a picture of New York life, except that few of them Nowadays are ragged, like his heroes, but instead are well-shod aggressive little chaps with a keen eye to business. Their shines might be a litle more lasting, but that is the penalty one pays for dealing with a sidewalk merchant.

Street Performers

At night most of the sidewalks hide go in for street performances. Their favorite stamping ground is the sidewalk outside a theatre during the intermission of a play.

When the theatre goers come out to smoke a cigaret or get a breath of fresh air, these youngsters go into action. One of them starts playing a mouth organ and the others jig. Some of them turn cartwheels and occasionally one is seen doing a clever little juggling act with a worn derby or an orange. Then the hat is passed and quite a few dimes drop into tthe hat. Their act is often so interesting that the spectators are late in getting back to their seats, causing more than a little annoyance. But it is one of those things one soon gets used to in this city.

Prize for Riflemen

The Wimbledon cup was presented in 1874 by the National Rifle association of Great Britain for annual competition by the riflemen of America. It is open to any citizen of the United States. The course is 20 shots at 1,000 yards. Any rifle sights and ammunition may be used, and the position is prone.

Patent Leather Shoes

To prevent patent leather shoes from cracking, first remove all the dust from the shoes with a damp cloth. As soon as dry, rub two drops of castor oil or vaseline into the tops, then polish with a woolen cloth.

Alaska's Old Capital

Sitka, Alaska, was the old Russian capital of Russian Alaska, and remained the capital of the new territory of Alaska when the Americans took possession on October 18, 1867. There was very little government in Alaska for some time after its acquisition, and it was not until the act of August 24, 1912, that the territory was organized and the capital officially established at Juneau.

NO-HIT GAME

For the first time in many moons, if ever, the proverbial Hall of Fame has been crashed by a Boone county base ball pitcher.

Braun, of Hebron, who is fast becoming one of the best hurlers ever to grace a diamond in this section was the lad who pulled a "one-eyed Conley" on the gate to the Hall in question.

For the aforesaid Mr. Braun let the Hebron Lutheran church team down without a hit in their contest against the Hebron entry in the Boone County League on July 4th. Mr. Braun's game was not a perfect one and simply because he failed to locate the plate properly on two occasions and once beside that one of his mates failed to keep down a throw to first base. Only three men reached first base and the wild throw was responsible for the only run scored off the Hebron pitcher.

Beside holding the Hebron church team hitless Braun performed the creditable feat of fanning twelve men and the additional stunt of knocking out a home run with two on in the first inning. He also later got a single.

Hebron fans had been looking forward to this game for several weeks, as the followers of each team had struck up quite a rivalry. On the church team are to be found some of the best talent that has been developed about that town during the past decade and they were accorded a good chance to win. But Mr. Braun himself attended to that matter with ease and dispatch and won going away by a 9 to 1 score.

TRUCK AND FRUIT GROWERS TOUR

Boone county and northern Kentucky truck crops and fruit growers have been invited to take part in a two day truck and fruit growers tour to be held in the Louisville section Thursday and Friday, July 16th. and 17th. Thursday will be spent on truck crops while Friday will be spent on fruit work.

A number of local growers who are interested in this tour have offered to cooperate in seeing that transportation facilities are arranged They will leave early Thursday morning and return Friday afternoon.

Some of the best examples of truck crop growing, fruit growing, roadside and terminal marketing work in the state is expected to be seen on the trip. All who are interested are urged to get in touch with the county agent in Burlington immediately.

FRUIT SPRAYING

Boone county apple, peach, plum growers with a large crop of fruit are displaying more interest in spraying to produce clean fruit than any time in the past. There seems to be a lack of understanding among the newer men in the business and many older orchard men on what is the best spray schedule for all kinds of fruit. The spray schedule recommended by the College of Agriculture is different for the different classes.

The apple spray is for blotch, rots, codling moths or apple worm and sotty blotch. A 2-4-50 Bordeaux mixture to which 1½ pounds of arsenate of lead is added should be used.

The grape sprays to be used are the same as the above apple spray.

The peach spray schedule is radically different from the apple and grape schedule. The pach leaves are more tender and the same spray as used on apples may defoliate the trees. The next peach spray is to control rot and worms. A soluble sulfur-lime (NOT lime sulfur) mixture is used. To this mixture is added a pound of arsenate of lead to each 50 gallons of water. The soluble sulfur mixture should be secured at some reputable orchard supply dealers and is sold under various trade names including Dri-tomic sulfur, Mulsoid sulfur and others.

Late potatoes and tomatoes should also be given a 4-4-50 Bordeaux spray and beans a 2-4-50 Bordeaux. 1½ pounds of arsenate of lead and lime should be added to this spray to control insects.

Those who are in doubt on their spray schedule should secure the College of Agriculture recomendations in circular form at the county agent's office.

EGGS PRODUCTION IN DEMONSTRATION FLOCKS

Reports on two of the demonstration poultry flocks received the first part of the week showed that high egg production is being maintained according to the county agent. Reports on two other demonstration flocks had not been received at this time.

The 303 hen Rhode Island Red flock of Grant Maddox's averaged 14.86 eggs per hen during the month of June. The 24 hen White Rock flock of Mrs. L. R. Miller averaged 16¼ eggs per hen. Both are high averages for this time of the year. Both flocks showed a good profit for the month.

FARM ACCOUNT SPECIALIST TO VISIT COUNTY

Mr. R. E. Proctor, field agent in farm management work from the College of Agriculture will be in Boone county on Monday and Tuesday, July 13th., and 14th. While in the county he will visit twenty farmers in Burlington, Florence, Union and Verona communities who are keeping complete farm records in cooperation with the county agent.

Farmers in Verona and Union communities will be visited on Tuesday.

ICE CREAM SOCIAL

There will be an ice cream social and bazaar at the Bullittsville Christian church Saturday evening, July 18th. Festivities will begin promptly at 6 o'clock, Eastern Standard Time.

W. H. Davis, of Mockville, North Carolina, sends us a letter this week containing his ideas about the proper curing and handling of tobacco. His father began growing tobacco about 75 years ago. he says, and needless to say Mr. Davis possesses some good ideas about the proper method of preparing the weed for market.

His letter follows:

Dear Mr. Editor:

I have some information about tobacco to offer to tobacco growers. This information came from my fathers store of experience. Father began growing tobacco more than 75 years ago. He found that there are better times than others for harvesting tobacco in order for it to cure nicely and be "waxy," wealthy and heavy.

In explanation let me state that tobacco has an olly substance which is its natural possession. It also has a sap (water) which comes and goes at intervals, during the life of the plant. When the sap rises it runs the oil out through the pores to the surface where it forms a "gum" well known to all tobacco growers. Oil and water do not mix and oil, being the lighter, is forced out and tobacco harvested in this condition will cure badly and be dark and worthless. But, harvest tobacco when fullest of oil it will cure easily and be wealthy and "waxy" when cured. The oil can not evaporate like the sap does and remains to give wealth to the weed.

Of all years this is one in which growers should go in for quality and not quantity. Good tobacco brings a good price any time. I shall be glad to answer any correspondence from tobacco growers provided postage is sent for reply.

Yours truly,
W. H. Davis.

The generally accepted opinion that every young child needs a long afternoon nap is not upheld by a recent investigation, in which the children who took half-hour naps kept up in as those who regularly slept more than two hours.

Great Pyramids' Stone

The Egyptian pyramids were built of a hard, rough-hewn limestone, but large blocks of granite were also used, especially on the outside. The granite was taken from quarries in the cliffs which line the Nile valley in the lower reaches.

When the United States Government balanced up its books for the fiscal year which ended on June 30, it found that Federal expenditures during the year had exceeded receipts by $903,000,000 and that the nation's debt in the twelve month period had grown $614,000,000. This deficit, the largest in peace time in the history of the country, was the first the Federal Government has had since the fiscal year 1919, which includes part of the last year of the World War. Since 1919 the annual surpluses have aggregated $4,561,000,000.

Two widely known leaders in the Democratic party, speaking to large audiences gave their approval to the plan of President Hoover for a suspension of international debts for one year as a means of restoring economic stability in the world. Senator Pat Harrison, ranking Democratic member of the Finance Committee, after describing the conditions in Germany which threatened a collapse of that country financially and governmentally said of the President's proposal: "It was a fine stroke and a gracious and constructive move on the part of President Hoover." Jouett Shouse, the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Democratic National Committee, declared it was gratifying to be able to commend "without hesitancy or reservation" the President's proclamation, and added: His position shows statesmanship, courage and decision."

Under the provisions of the Hawley-Smoot tariff law with relation to the products of convict, forced or indentured labor, the Treasury Department will adopt a policy of excluding a large share of the products of Russia, it was asserted by Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, Chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, who has been in conference with Treasury authorities. Senator Smoot indicated that, while the exclusion would not apply to products of the soil, it would apply to Soviet products which are manufactured, mined or produced by means of forced labor of any kind and which are competitive with products here. He mentioned lumber and pulpwood especially as products which would be shut out.

Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, has announced that he expected to retain his post as chairman of the Republican National Committee until the national convention next June. Senator Fess added that he anticipated no important changes in the leadership of the committee until that time, at least. The statement not only put to rest again rumors that Senator Fess would resign, but indicated also that Robert H. Lucas, who was under fire following the November Congressional elections because of his interest in the Nebraska campaign, would retain his post as executive chairman of the Republican National Committee. Report has been current that Mr. Lucas would retire early this fall.

The information office of the Soviet Union has become the most popular establishment in the capital as far as American aviators are concerned. Because of the desire to span the Pacific, apparent in the aviation world this year, the Soviet office has had to keep up a constant exchange of cables with Moscow to secure permits to fly over Russia and arrange fueling facilities. Three groups of flyers, including Colonel and Mrs. Chas. A. Lindberg, already have received permits, while two other groups are awaiting permission. Wiley Post and Harold Gatty, who recently ended their world flight, also had been given a permit.

Chairman Smoot, of the Senate Finance Committee, gave the impression here, before leaving for his home in Utah, that in some congressional circles there is thought about increasing corporation income about increasing corporation income taxes if an increase is found necessary to meet prospective deficits. Mr. Smoot calculated that restoration of the 12 per cent tax, cut one per cent in the last tix revision, would raise something more than $100,000,000 additional revenue to offset the prospective $350,000,000 loss should foreign-debtt payments be suspended, as is proposed, which would be added to next year's deficit. It is apparent from what the Finance Committee head said, that the question of increasing corporation income taxes is being broached, but only as an alternative to borrowing on short-term loans, which also has been suggested as one way out of governmental financial difficulties.

America has forwarded to France a memorandum that might be described as an appeal to reason. Designed to bring into line the only country that is blocking an agreement on President Hoover's proposal for a one year holiday on war debts, the American memorandum pointed out that France herself would be a heavy loser this year if the Hoover plan fails. The memorandum says it must be assumed that Germany will declare a moratorium on certain of her reparations payments in the event the Hoover plan fails. In this case France would be the loser this year by more than $100,000,000.

With a roar of twenty-one guns from the navy yard batteries on the water front, Old Ironsides, pride of the American Navy was recommissioned at Boston after a lapse of forty-four years. The famous old forty-four-gun frigate, originally built at Constitution Wharf ,1794 to 1797, and restored at the Charleston Navy Yard, 1927 to 1931, has departed on an exhibition tour of American ports.

Old Ironsides, full-rigged and with her big square sheets catching the wind, may sail up the Potomac under own power and with a crew dressed as of old when she comes here next year for exhibition to George Washington Bicentennial visitors. Secretary of the Navy Adams has promised to give the proposal "serious consideration." The sail and regalia plan will be dispensed with during the preliminary tour of Eastern ports, however, due to the necessity of adhering to a rigid schedule.

Led by President Hoover, official Washington hailed the round-the-world flight of Wiley Post and Harold Gatty and took steps to bring them to the capitol for a national welcome. At the White House President Hoover indicated his deep interest in the record flight and let it be known that an invitation would be sent to the flyers to lunch with him. Senator Hiram Bingham, Republican, of Connecticut, sent a telegram to Roosevelt field urging Post and Gatty to come to Washington to be presented to the President and to receive the congratulations of the National Aeronautic Association.

John J. Raskob, Chairman of the Democrattic National Committee, endorsed President Hoover's proposal for the war debt moratorium upon his return aboard the Bremen from a two month's tour thru Europe. "It is a very constructive proposal, and I hope it will be accepted. It would do a great deal to stabilize world conditions," said Mr. Raskob. The plan, he emphasized, should not be considered a political one in any sense, "since it is of such great importance to the people of Europe." He did not believe, he added, that it could have any effect upon the 1932 Presidential campaign.

INVITATIONS SOUGHT FOR NEEDY CHILDREN IN FRESH AIR DRIVE

Residents of rural communities are urged to entertain a boy or girl for a short period during the summer so that all of the 200children who have applied for vacations through the Fresh Air Campaign may obtain relief from the unbearable atmosphere of the city. Transportation and laundry of guests are paid from the Fresh Air Fund.

Invitations to entertain a boy and fifteen boys at camp were received three girls in private homes cevied by the Fresh Air Committee of The Courier-Journal and ducting its eighth annual cam- The Louisville Times, which is conpaign to provide vacations for under privileged Louisville boys and girls.

W. C. Furr, chairman of the Boy Scout Camp Committee in Frankfort, Ky., asked the Fresh Air Committee to arrange to send fifteen boys to camp in Elkhorn. The Franklin Boy Scouts have given a group of under-privileged Louisville boys the use of their camp for two-week periods during the last four years.

Mr. and Mrs. Ould, Hazard, Ky., have offered to entertain two boys in their mountain home for two weeks. A girl received a bid to be the guest of Mrs. Everett Shearer, R. F. D. 2, Crestwood, Ky., for the entire summer. Mr. and Mrs. Lester Wright, Smiths Grove, Ky., in Warren County, asked that a boy between 9 and 11 years old to be their guest for two weeks.

Every child must pass a thorough physical examination before leaving the city. Invitations should be eddressed to this newspaper, or to the Fresh Air Committee, Courier-Journal and Louisville Times, Louisville.

The Woolper school house burnt at an early hour on the 4th. inst. The cause of the fire is not known, but many believe it was incendiary, while others are inclined to the opinion that some persons had been in the house during the night and dropped a match or cigar stub, that caused the fire. The building was nearly entirely consumed by fire before the flames were discovered. It was comparatively new, having been built about eight years ago at a cost of nearly $1,000 to the district. Th erection of the building caused a long litigation, which it is hoped will be avoided when the next one is erected.

Down on the croquet court the other day C. A. Fowler asked John Ryle, the liveryman, for a chew of tobacco, when Ryle with perfect nonchalance, answered: Charlie, you are dead on me. Fowler did not catch on and asked Ryle to explain, which he did by saying: "Why, I have given you a chew since you bought a plug, and you are dead on me until you buy another plug." The explanation "knocked Charlie out," while the crowd roared with laughter. It is now impossible to beg a chew of tobacco in Burlington, unless you can prove yourself alive, and it is said some of the chewers will have to spend a small fortune before they will become alive all around again.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

People are still referring to sciatic neuritis as "sciatic rheumatism." It just seems impossible to educate people to the point where they can discriminate for the man or woman who limps,— to say that he or she may not have rheumatism at all. Remedies good for real rheumatism will not benefit the cases that limp from other causes.

I have seen many patients who had teeth and tonsils out, in an effort to cure neuritis that came from overstrain or injury. I once had a case of sciatic neuritis —a severe one—whose left sciatic nerve became inflamed because of a diseased colon at the sigmoid flexure; he was quite disabled, confined to bed. This man had had his tonsils out and several teeth extracted without benefit, of course! Such diagnoses in this advanced day and time are positively inexcusable. A neuritis is never a rheumatism.

And I have met many patients who had synovitis in the knee-joints that might have been cured in the early stage by simple rest and the proper application of dry heat. Nine out of ten of them had taken medicine for "rheumatism," which of course had failed. The synovial membrane is a soft cushion-like layer, lining the joint, which provides the lubrication for the smooth performance of the hinge. Inflame that membrane by violent pressure, overstrain, or by external injury, and you have synovitis; the joint becomes feverish, dry, painful, and with little swelling. It is not rheumatic, is not necessarily caused by germs,and is not benefited by seruma, vaccines, or drugs taken by mouth for rheumatism.

To me, another terrible misnomer, is to call a complaint "muscular rheumatism"—that is, between joints. One may get muscle-strain, myositis, of the vauge achings and general tire of an exhausted nervous system, but for goodness' sake "muscular rheumatism." I am not infallible, but to me there "is no such animal." The fellow with this complaint needs rest, change of scene, mild warm baths, and possible change of diet and feeding. Rheumatism medicines do not cure it, and time should not be wasted on them. I wish I had more space to elaborate.

TO HOLD SHEEP RAISERS SCHOOL

Practical instruction in all phases of sheep raising will be given in the fourth annual series of sheep schools, to be held in the state beginning the last week in July and continuing through August, the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, announces. The Kentucky Accredited Purebred Sheep Breeders Association will cooperate in the schools.

Sixteen schools will be held in the central counties, with a series for western Kentucky and another for the Louisville territory. Beginning July 29 and ending August 5 with the annual banquet of the association at Lexington, schools be held in Bourbon, Woodford, Anderson, Scott, Boyle, Oldham, Carroll, Owen and Fleming counties. A sale will be held at Lexington August 6.

There will be Judging and selection of sheep, with discussions of breeding, practical management, disease control, feeding and other problems. All persons interested in sheep raising will be invited, according to Richard C. Miller, secretary of the Kentucky Accredited Purebred Sheep Breeders Association.

HYDRAULIC RAM MAKES CHEAP WATER SYSTEM

A hillside spring which flows the year round and is not too far from the house or barns may be made a cheap source of running water for stock by installing a hydraulic ram suggests the agricultural engineering departement of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

A ram may be operated sucessfully with a flow of only one or two gallon a minute and with a fall below the spring of as little as two or three feet. Of course the elevation to which the ram will lift the water is limited by the amount of fall available, and should be not less than six feet nor more than twelve times the fall.

A hydro-pneumatic tank may be used in connection with the hydraulic ram in place of the elevated tank if desired, and by placing the tank in the tank in the basement or a pit the water will be cool in the summer and will not freeze in winter. Such installation can be made at a very reasonable cost, since rams in sizes suitable for the average spring can be obtained for from $15 to $35.

The experiment Station of the University of Kentucky furnished plans for a large modern dairy barn being built at the Kentucky Baptist children's home at Glendale, Hardin county.

Spider's Repulsive Web Woven Afresh Each Night

Master of geometrical precision and skillful artisan, the industrious orthogone orb spider presents a mystery in her method of a certain theatrical moment every evening when with unerring ingenuity she constructs or weaves a new web over the framework of her permanent dwelling, states an article in Better Homes and Gardens.

Although the framework of the simple structure, which consists of three spokes radiating from a single point, is constantly under repair, the finished web is never repaired no matter how damaged it may be. Guy wires are anchored to leaves, blades of grass, with a crow's foot fastening. Then follow the radial lines which retrace the original spokes of the permanent frame. The dainty tatting wheel in the center serves as a feast hall. The last stroke is biting out the floss constituting the hub, which leaves an aperture for the unwary insect to crawl through and be enmeshed. Then follows the fastidiously chosen feast, continues Better Homes and Gardens, after which the web is carefully removed and, if no longer of service, devoured to make more silk and be respun later.

Population of Babylon Has Been Overestimated

There have been various attempts, by comparing its area with the area of modern cities, to estimate the population of ancient Babylon. On the lowest calculation it would be found, supposing it to have borne any considerable resemblance to a European city, to have had a population of 5,000,000. The map of Asiatic Turkey shows that the extent of country around Babylon available for agricultural purposes must have been quite inadequate to supply the necessary demands for anything like such an immense population. Perhaps, on the whole, says a recent writer, one may estimate the population at from 1,000,000 to 1,200,000. This supposition derives support from the fact that Seliucia, with a population of 600,000, is stated by Strabo and Pliny to have been about half the size of Babylon in the days of her greatest glory.

Satisfied With Their Lot

The minister of the flock had been invited to dine with the Jones family, and the four young boys had been told to wait for their repast until the grownups had finished the meal. They were to come in for the "second serving."

One of the lads, however, secreted himself under the table to listen in. Commenting on the four boys, the minister said to the hostess: "Mrs. Jones, it is too bad that at least one of your children couldn't have been a girl."

This was too much for the little stowaway. Out shot a bristling little red head from under the overhanging tablecloth, and a volley of protesting words:

"Well, Tom wouldn't been 'er; Ed wouldn't been 'er; Hal wouldn't been 'er; and I wouldn't been 'er! I'd like to know who'd 'a' been 'er!"

No other answer was needed; the point was settled.

Originated Postal System

Hailed by many as the father of the modern postal system, the one hundredth anniversary of Heinrich von Stephan was modestly celebrated in Germany. He came from very humble origin and rose to be director of the Royal Prussian post. The work for which he is particularly remembered was engineering the world postal union, which became effective on July 1, 1875, after the Berne conference had sat only a week and a half before accepting his scheme without change.

Germans perhaps treasure Von Stephan's memory particularly as the originator of the cheap-rate postcard. Indeed, his name is closely associated with all the postal innovations of his time.

Weight and Health

Recent insurance experience has shown that average weight tables are often misleading. The average weights are by no means the best weights. At ages under thirty, the best conditions apparently exist among those whose weights are from five to ten pounds above the average. After age thirty, the most favorable conditions are found among those whose weights are below the average. The amount below average increases with advancing age, and at the age of fifty, persons seem to be at their best when their weights are as much as 20 or 30 pounds below the average. Insurance experience shows that underweight is definitely an advantage so far as long life is concerned.

Hard to Trace Origin

Dr. Frank H. Vizetelly in his book on "Idioms and Idiomatic Phrases" says "Let her go, Gallagher!" is an Americanism of unknown origin, traced by various persons to different sources. He quotes, however, C. E. Gallagher of Youngstown, Ohio, who wrote in 1921: "Let her go, Gallagher!" was first seen by the writer (Mr. Gallagher) on posters advertising a dance at Salamanca, N. Y., about 25 years ago. My father was postmaster at that place, and working in the post office were a number of very popular young ladies who were always active in the social affairs of the town. These posters referred to the girls who worked for Gallagher."

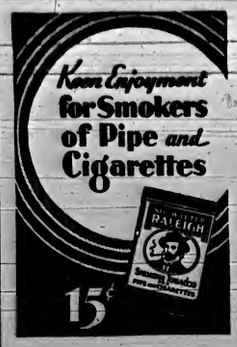
CHARGE YEAR RUN TO MAKE COTTAGE CHEESE

The use of more cottage cheese is urged by the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, because it is a good wholesome food, and in order to consume more milk, of which there is a surplus at this time. The College gives the following directions for making cottage cheese.

Select skimmilk of good flavor, if possible. Set at a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees until it sours, which may be 30 hours. The addition of a half cup of clean flavored sour souring.

When clabbored test to see if it is ready to cut by inserting a finger and crooking the finger when removing. If the curd brakes cleanly it is ready to cut. Cut in pieces about two inches square. Stir gently with a spoon, being careful not to break the curd into small particles.

Place the vessel containing water at about 120 to 130 degrees, and heat the chees to 100 degrees, stirring gently in the meantime. Maintain the temperature at 100 degrees for 30 minutes, stirring gently at intervals. This process hastens the removal of the whey from the curd.



Pour off the excess whey at the end of 30 minutes and wash the curd with about the same amount of cold water. This will remove some of the acid and the cheese will not taste so sour. Pour off the excess water, place the cheese in a cheese cloth or bag to drain. Do not drain all the water off, as this will make the cheese too dry.

When sufficently drained, remove the cheese to a dish and work to an even texture with a spoon. Add salt to suit taste. A little cream will also improve the taste. If it is desired to keep the cheese for a short while, place it in a glass or earthernware yessel and keep it as cool as possible.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realise. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

illuminated with soft indirect lights and upholstered in restful overstuffed furniture is set aside as a browing room, location where students and faculty can relax, help themselves to the books on the shelves at will, and read for the sheer pleasure of it. This browsing room gives a fine view of an expense of campus in front of the building. The east wing on this floor contains the offices of the employees of the library, bibliography room, cataloging department, as well as another storage vault. The office of Mrs. W. T. Lafferty, in charge of womens club work throughout the state, is also in this section. The west wing on this floor is used as the main reading room.

On the third floor a balcony partially encircles the main reading room, the desk lobby, and the browsing room extend up two stories. This floor, however, has a classroom and a study room with individual science .

The fourth floor will be used as a graduate floor. One entire room will house the Cranegie Art library and another room will be given to a medical collection. Numerious seminary room will be available.

Ninety individual study booths or carrels have been constructed in the stacks for members of the faculty and advanced students who must do research with a large number of books at hand. Permits will be issued to those allowed to use these carrels. An automatic elevator and booklift gives service to all floors of this building. Cork floors are used throughout . A special system of stairways behind the stacks are available for employees, and rest rooms are conveniently located thruout the building. It is planned to place the building portraits of the past presidents and faculty members of the University.

The new library will be open to the public from 8:00 A. M. to 10:00 P. M. daily and on Sundays from 2:00 to 5:30 P. M.

COUNTY WOOL POOL TO SELL AS UNIT

The Boone County Wool Growers' Association at a meeting held at Burlington last Monday decided to give up the county pool to sell thru the state pool this year but to sell as a county unit.

Those growers present voted to set next Monday, July the 13th. for the receiving of sealed bids. Wool buyers were notified by L. T. Clore, secretary of the county organization to present their sealed bids by 1:00 P. M. at Walton on the above date.

Judge Riggs, of Erlanger, was a visitor at the Recorder sanctum Tuesday afternoon. He was investigating publicity in regard to his Sunday School class at the Erlanger Christian church, which is recognized thruout this entire section as one of the most progressive organizations of its kind.

Miss Lillie Gaar and son, Harold Gaar, both of Erlanger, Mrs. Lorena Cropper and son, Earl T. Cropper, both of Burlington, and Mrs Chester Grant, of Idlewild, spent last Friday in Winchester, Ky., where they were the guests of Dr. Raymond Cropper and family.

Verona defeated the strong Corinth team by a score of 2 to 1 by far the best game of the season Cliff Afterkirk allowing only 2 hits and fanning 12 men.

Faulkner for the visitors allowing 3 hits and fanning 9 men.

Jimmie Vest doubled in the 6th. and broke up the game.

Double-Thumbed People In Old Spanish Village

A strange village, Paluzuelos, has been discovered in the mountains of Spain, says Capper's Weekly.

The strangeness of this hamlet lies in the fact that most of its people have six-fingered hands, two thumbs on each one. Few of the villagers ever have reached the outside world because the mountain trails are impassable to wheeled vehicles. So the world knew nothing about them until recently. Intermarriage caused by extreme isolation is believed by some anthropologists to be the cause of the double thumbs. Other scientists call attention to the fact that since most of the men work in stone quarries and have done so for generations their labor has tended to broaden their thumbs until finally Mother Nature produced an extra member.

The villagers do not regard their double thumbs as a deformity but consider them a mark of distinction. While a comparatively simple operation would remove the extra thumb of any child and give it a normal hand, the villagers violently object to any such operation.

Cholera Plague Buried in Scotch Churchyard?

The mysterious fog-malady which caused so many deaths in Belgium recalls the experience of the Highlands when struck by cholera in 1832. The dread disease visited Inverness, Nairn, the Black Isle, Easter Ross, and Dingwall, and swept through the country with devastating results, whole families being wiped out. Rows of cottages were put on fire and burned to the ground. Tradition runs that the plague was brought into the Cromarty firth by a vessel, and that it flew slowly along the ground in the shape of a little yellow cloud. When it arrived at Nigg one of the inhabitants with an immense bag of linen approached the cloud cautiously and succeeded in enclosing the whole of it in the bag. He then wrapped it up carefully and secured it with pin after pin, and buried it in the Nigg churchyard. The spot is marked by a rude undressed stone, near which the grave digger never ventures to open a grave.—Edinburg Botsman.

Saved by a Miracle

As a New York-Chicago train was speeding along the railway it encountered a great storm of wind and rain. The stoker persuaded the driver to stop the train, for he insisted he had seen a woman in black dancing before the engine. With lantern in hand, the driver left the locomotive and walked along the line to Rock creek. To his dismay, he found that the bridge had been washed away by the overflowing river. When he returned something prompted him to examine the lamp of the engine. He found imprisoned in it an insect, vainly trying to escape. The shadow of the insect magnified by the glass and reflected in the rainy air, had all the appearance of a dancing figure!

Scarlet From Persia

"Few of us know that we owe on most vivid hue—scarlet—to Persia," says a writer in the Manchester (England) Guardian. "Scarlet is the Persian 'saqalat,' and is believed to have been applied to have been applied first of all to cloth of that color imported into Europe from Persia. Easterners knew how to produce scarlet some 2,000 years ago, obviously, or we should not have had the Biblical phrase 'Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.'

"In the East Christ once was regarded as the patron of dyers, even by followers of Mohammed, and the Persians, who were skilled textile colorists centuries before Manchester came into being, knew a dye-house as 'Christ's workshop' as late as the Seventeenth century."

"Catch" Problem

The "banker's problem," the one that leaves a dollar in the bank after one has made several withdrawals and has finally taken out the deposit, is somewhat after this style: "A person deposits $50, then makes a withdrawal of $20, leaving a balance of $30; a withdrawal of $15, leaving a balance of $15; a withdrawal $9, leaving a balance of $6; and finally a withdrawal of $6, leaving no balance. Total of these balances is $51, which is $1 more than was deposited." The answer to this is that there is no reason why the total of balances should equal the total deposits, but the final balance plus the total of withdrawals must equal the total deposits.

"Cloth-Yard" Shafts

The Archers company of Pinehurst, N. C., says that toxophilites for many years have accepted 28 inches as being the length of the cloth-yard shaft. Elmer's "Archery" says: "Arrows for men are standardized, and have been for time out of mind, at 28 inches. That is the real length of the 'cloth-yard shaft' of the old English ballads because the Flemish weaves brought over the continental cloth-yard of 27 inches, and it was so called to distinguish it from the standard yard of 36 inches which survives today. With the inch-long pile added to it the cloth-yard shaft thus became a 28-inch."

China's Right to Title of "Mother of Gardens"

The late Ernest H. Wilson, who was undoubtedly the world's foremost authority on plant introductions from China and keeper of the Arnold arboretum of Harvard university, remarks that China is, indeed, the Mother of Gardens, for of the countries to which our gardens are the most deeply indebted she holds the foremost place.

There is hardly a garden in this country, for instance, that is not indebted to China for the plants that embellish it. The forsythia, the Yulan magnolias, the peonies, the parents of our modern roses, be they hybrid tea, rambler or polyantha; many of the azaleas and primroses, peaches, oranges, lemons and grapefruit have been brought to us from China.

The Portuguese reached China in 1516 and took back with them to their settlements in India the sweet orange, which was later introduced into Portugal. Mr. Wilson says that, so far as he has been able to discover, this was the first plant taken to Europe. From that time to the present era there has been a constant flow of new plant introductions from the East to Europe and America.—New York Herald Tribune.

"Latah" Sufferers Made Victims of Odd Pranks

An extraordinary disease called latah is prevalent in the Malay states, a contributor informs the Sydney Bulletin. To anyone who has never seen latah before, the gesticulations of the sufferers appear at first funny or offensive, until it is explained that a person afflicted with it will, if suddenly startled, fall into a hypnotic state and imitate the gestures of anything in sight. For instance, an old woman suddenly startled by a bicycle bell will violently imitate the pedaling of a cyclist until she falls down exhausted.

That the victims make these movements entirely against their will is evident when one considers the pranks that are played on well-known latahs. They have been known to jump off a lugger in shark-infested waters, drop trays of drinks and crow like a rooster at a sharp command. What causes latah is unknown; there is a theory that it is associated with betel-nut chewing.

American Cliff Dwellers

Cliff dwellers, although of broader application, means in America that prehistoric race that built the houses and villages whose ruins are found in the southwestern part of the United States and especially in the valley of the Rio San Juan and its tributaries. This river rises in the extreme southwestern corner of Colorado, and flows westward along the borders of adjoining states to a junction with the Rio Colorado. As to the origin of these vanished cliff dwellers nothing is known, but it is evident that centuries ago these valleys were occupied by a considerable, sedentary population, who had fixed homes and cultivated fields for crops of corn, beans, gourds and probably other things, by means of extensive systems of irrigation. They made pottery, cloth, baskets, etc., and stone implements, but nothing metallic.

Origin of Word "Dogma"

Contrary to common belief, "dogma" is not originally a word of authority, nor is it connected with "doctrine." "Doctrine" comes from the Latin "docere," "to teach"; "dogma" from the Greek "dokein," "to seem," whose nearest relation in Latin is "decet," "it is seemly," the ancestor of our "decent." "Dogma" at first therefore meant "that which seems to one," or "an opinion." But when the early Christian councils met to discuss the essentials of the faith, what they sought were the "opinions" held in common by all orthodox bishops. These were called "dogmas"; but since they represented the agreement of so weighty a concourse, the word soon acquired the sense of authoritative truth.

Fortune in Croquet Box

A manuscript worth hundreds of dollars a page was found in the lumber room of an English castle.

One summer's day the guests of Lord Talbot de Malahide decided to play croquet and sent servants to fetch the mallets and hoops from their box in an old lumber room. The servants opened a box and, instead of mallets, found a mass of musty crumbling papers yellow with age.

These proved to be the manuscript writings of James Boswell, the great-great-grandfather of Lord Talbot, and among them were 107 pages of his famous Life of Johnson. Only 16 pages of this manuscript had been found before, and their owner was offered $75 000 for them.

Scors One for Henry VIII

A lady's position in the Fifteenth century wasn't particularly an agreeable one considering the fact that she sat in the balcony merely as a spectator at the royal feasts which her lord gave. Henry VIII, however, was a considerate old fellow, and allowed the fair sex to enjoy the elegant food. His queen, Catherine, presided at the head of one table, and he at another. "The party being assembled, and the king and queen seated in their chairs of state, it was the custom to begin the ceremonial of royal banquets by presenting hippocras and wafers to the sovereign and his consort."—Kansas City Star.

BILL ROGERS

PITCHES GREAT BALL AGAINST BOOSTERS, BUT LOSES THRU POOR SUPPORT—STRIKES OUT 16—JARRELL'S CATCH SAVES BOOSTER'S GAME—

In a pitchers battle in which Bill Rogers received all the worst of the breaks of the game Belleview went down to defeat at the hands of Petersburg in an exhibition affair at the Belleview park last Saturday afternoon. Boehler was on the hill for Petersburg and pitched carefully and cleverly enough to win. The score was 4-3.

Errors behind Rogers were very discouraging to the tall boy, as he knew that the slightest lit up on his part ment disaster when pitted against the Big Hoosier. Each twirler allowed eight hits, but Rogers found it necessary to strikeout fourteen Petersburgers in order to stay within striking distance of his rival. Boehler fanned but six, while one of the greatest catches ever seen on a Boone county field undoubtly saved him from the necessity of going into extra innings in order to defeat his more unfortunate rival on the mound. Rogers indeed deserves great credit for his sterling effort. He fanned seven of the first ten men to face him and averaged two to an inning for the first five stanzas.

Lowe proved a bad thorn in Rogers' side, however, as he made three bingles after having gone down twice in succession on strikes at the outset of the game. It was his double that started things going badly for Rogers in the fatal sixth up to which time he had the enemy at his mercy and was leading by a 2-0 score.

To start the sixth Lowe doubled as aforesaid and Matthews popped to third. Boehler was given a life on [illegible] error at short but Lowe was nailed [illegible] Boehler advancing to second on the play. Bradburn then singled and Boehler romped home. Klopp followed Bradburn with another single the latter stopping at second. Both then stole second and third, aided by a passed ball. With runners on second and third Jarrell sent up a pop fly back of short, which Rogers dropped for his second costly error of the inning and the second and third Petersburg runs scampered across. Cox then ended the disastorus frame by forcing Hitzfield who had walked.

The score remained 3-2 until the first of the ninth when Petersburg made their victory safe by adding another run to their total. It was here that Lowe again caused most of the trouble, for, with two out, he hit the longest wallop of the day and paused at third long enough for Matthews to single, driving him in with what a moment later proved to be a very valuable tally.

Belleview's scoring had been limited to two runs, when they took their bat in the last of the ninth. In the second Bucky Rogers had been driven in with a single from the bat of the youthful Hensley, and in the sixth Mutt Rogers had singled and stole second to be sent home by a single from Whitey Rogers' bat.

So when they came to bat in the last of the ninth Boehler faced them with a two run lead. Apparently that was plenty. It was the troublesome Bucky Rogers who singled to open what almost proved to be a Garrison finish. Bucky went down to second while Black was going out on a grounder to first base and then come home when Hensley, who had hit safely on two former occasions, added his third hit of the day. With Hensley on first and only one out Pope was sent up to hit for Clore. Pope again proved that he is one of the most dangerous hitters in the league when he caught one on the proboscis and sent it for a long ride toward distant center. It looked like a sure tripple and possibly a homer and Hensley set sail for scoring territory with the tying run.

But Bennie Jerrall was on the move with the crack of the bat and when he snagged that ball he dumfounded the entire populace—and probably himself. But he recovered quickly enough to fire the ball to first base, where it completed a cinch double play on the startled Hensley, who was almost home.

Mr. Harry Holtzclaw, of Lancaster, Ky., spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Cropper and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fryman and family, of Cynthiana, Ky., spent the week with Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hickman.

Deaths

MERIT LIPSCOMB DEAD

Merit Lipscomb, passed away Thursday at Booth Memorial Hospital, Covington, Ky., after a long illness. He is survived by his widow Mrs. Stella Lipscomb, two sons Raymond and Russell all of Erlanger, Ky., as well as two daughters, Mrs. Leroy Foster and Mrs. Leonard Ruehl, of Covington, also several grandchildren and many other relatives and friends.

He was a machinist at the Hess and Wolf Co., Cincinnati, O., for 15 years.

The pall bearers were immediate members of his family, two sons, two grandsons and two sons-in-law.

Funeral services were conducted at the Taliaferro Funeral Home at 2 o'clock Saturday, by the Rev. R. D. Martin, pastor of the Erlanger Baptist Church, of which the deceased was a faithful member. A quartet from the same church furnished the music. Interment took place in Independence, Ky., Cemetery.

S. S. CLASS

AT ERLANGER SHOWS REMARKABLE GROWTH DURING RECENT YEARS— AVERAGE OF 62 SO FAR THIS YEAR—

About three and one half years ago, the Erlanger Christian Church found itself in the condition of a lot of present day churches, namely, woefully lacking young people. After considerable discussion about the subject it was decided that there must be something done at once to stimulate the attendance of young people.

Harry L. Riggs was appointed [illegible] number, and the Stretcher class was immediately formed, adopting "Why stay at the bottom when there is so much room at the top," and the scripture, from Phillipians 3:13-14, "Forgetting the things that are behind and stretching forward to the things that are before." This class began to grow and during its first years existence had an average attendance of twenty-six.

The second year showed an average of thirty-seven, the third year an average attendance of forty-one, and so far this year the average attendance is sixty-two.

This class is having a visitors day on Sunday, July 26th., and as seen elsewhere in this edition is extending a cordial invitation to young a cordial invitation to all young people between the ages of fifteen and thirty to attend its sessions.

The Recorder is reliably informed that the instruction given in the class lectures by Mr. Riggs is designed to definitely tie the young people up with the teachings of Jesus Christ, thereby leaving a wholesome and healthy effect upon each of their lives.

This is certainly a commendable work and a community possessing such a class is greatly blessed.

OBSERVES 70TH. BIRTHDAY

Last Sunday about 75 guests, including relatives and friends from near and far, assembled at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Glen Crisler, in Florence, for the purpose of the observance of his 70th., birthday.

A mammoth birthday cake was baked by Mrs. Lewis Sullivan and decorated with 70 small cacndles of candy.

Thruout the day entertainment was provided for all. The young folks enjoyed croquet and hand ball, while there was some fine music for all who cared to listen. Violin, guitar and banjo formed a three instrument Old Time orchestra, the strains from which finally got the better of some of the "old timers" who had not enjoyed the association of each other for many years, and the result was an old fashoned square dance.

To say that all enjoyed themselves would be an utter wast of words in fact they enjoyed the day so well that many allowed the sun to sink before severing themselves from the pleasant associations of the party.

The new 1932 auto license plates have been received at the office of County Clek A. G. McMullen. The plates are identical in size with those of last year, but will have maroon background instead of the green of 1931.

FIRST HALF

ODDS TO WALTON AS RESULT OF VICTORY OVER HEBRON SATURDAY—SECOND HALF STARTS NEXT WEEK—

Settling without question the ownership of undisputed possession of first place in the first half of the Boone County League split season the Walton boys defeated Hebron at Walton last Saturday in the play-off of the opening game of the season, which ended in rain and a tie at 2-all. Hebron again scored two runs in this game, but Walton managed to push over three more to make their final score 5-2.

Brown opposed Norman on the hill and he was good enough to have won lots of games, but his infield played poor ball behind him, making no less than five errors. Norman was good in the pinches. The result never was in doubt after Walton amassed four rns in the fourth inning, the score being 5-1 until the eighth. Hebron was the first to score, when they counted once in the first.

The final standing in the league has Hebron in a tie with Petersburg for second place, altho a protested game is counted in the Hebron lost column to make this possible. The dicision of the protest will be conditioned upon the standing in the second half.

According to rules of the league the teams winning the first and second halves will battle it out this fall for the county championship. Should Walton win the second half then it would be necessary for Hebron and Petersburg and whatever team might finish second in the second half to decide in a one game play-off the right to play Walton.

STARTS FLORENCE PASTORATE

Rev. R. F. DeMoisey, who was for five and on half years the pastor of the Burlington Baptist church, and who has been pastor of the New Bethel church, Verona, for the past six years, started as pastor of the Florence Baptist church last Sunday. Rev. DeMoisey will divide his time between the New Bethel and Florence churches, preaching at Florence on the second and fourth Sundays. Rev. DeMoisey has been preaching for the past 17 years and during that time has preached hundreds of funerals and married hundreds of young couples in Boone county. His friends have dubbed him the "marrying parson." The Recorder extends to him its best wishes for extended success in his new field.

ENTERTAINMENT DE LUXE AT FLORENCE FAIR GROUNDS

Larger crowds than ever before are said to be attending the regular Saturday night dances and concert entertainment at the Florence Fair Grounds. This is said to be the only place in Northern Kentucky where one can dance all evening for twenty five cents.

Then the management points to its many extra attractions for entertainment for those who tire, or do not care to dance. W. C. K. Y. stars, as well as boys and girls from Chicago vaudeville stages, render regular vaudeville acts in the arena each evening. And all for the small sum of one quarter. You are urged to come out and try the Florence Park for one evening's entertainment next Saturday.

Howard Kelly and family of Florence, were calling on Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Kelly last Sunday afternoon.

Miss Bunie Willis, County Health Nurse, who is utilising her vacation in taking a post graduate course in Cleveland, has sent to us her report for June, which will be published next week. Miss Willis is sadly missed by Boone county people during her absence.

TAX PAYERS

PASS RESOLUTION HERE AT MEETING SATURDAY— TO PETITION FOR 30 PER CENT REDUCTION ON REAL ESTATE—

A good crowd attended the mass meeting of taxpayers of the county at the Farm Bureau last Saturday afternoon.

The meeting was held with the view of getting a reduction in the valuation of farm property in the county, much of which is listed above its actual value.

Quite a number expressed their views and all favored an effort to have the valuation lowered. C. F. Thornton explained matters pretty thoroughly as to what had been done in other counties and what may be possible here.

The following resolutions were passed:

Whereas, the present assessed valuation of real estate in Boone county, Kentucky, is based on war time prices, and the present assessed valuation is far in excess of the actual cash value of said real estate,

Whereas, the farmers thruout Boone County, Kentucky, are hardtherefore, be it resolved that we, ly able to make interest and taxes, the taxpayers of Boone County Kentucky, in mass convention assembled, do hereby petition the State Tax Commission for a reduction of 20 per cent. of the present assessed valuation on said real estate in Boone county, Kentucky.

Respectfully submitted this the 11th. day of July, 1931.

B. B. Grant, Chairman.
Marvin Hudson, Secretary.

POOLED WOOL

OFFER OF [illegible] AGO— PRICE IS $20.31 PER HUNDRED— DELIVERING DATES JULY 21,22 AND 23—

The 1931 crop of Boone County wool was sold Monday to L. S. Dinkespiel, of Louisville, when his bid of $20.31 per hundred was accepted over four other bidders.

Several weeks ago the Boone County Pool was offered 17½ cents for the crop, but rejected the offer and as a result, have made the sheep raisers approximately three cents a pound. According to L. T. Clore, Secretary of the county pool, the bids ranged from 19 cents to the successful bid.

Mr. Clore stated that the 1930 crop of from 35,000 to 40,000 pounds probably would be exceeded this year. He also announced that the receiving dates for tthe wool had been set for Tuesday, July 21, at Walton; Wednesday, July 22, at Burlington, and Thursday, July 23, at Petersburg.

HEBRON WINS

Hebron scored a 4-0 victory over the Acme Pies in the Spinney League elimination series at Hebron last Sunday afternoon. Joe Aylor made one of the greatest catches ever before seen at the Hebron park, while the pitching of Ellis was another feature. Next Sunday the Feldhaus Builders, who defeated Elizabethtown 17-3, will be the attraction.

Burlington Wins Close One

The Burlington Baptists defeated the Bullittsville team on the local grounds last Saturday afternoon in a very close game. The score was 3-2 and was a pitchers battle between Roscoe Akin and Roberts Bullittsville tied the count at 2-2 in the first of the ninth when Riley singled and came home on Edgar Goodridge's double into the corn field in center. Finn was first up in the Burlington half and duplicated the drive of Goodridge and came home when the return throw went wild. The play at the plate was close and a short argument ensued, but of course the "umps" won. Next Saturday afternoon Taylorsport, with a strong team, will show at Burlington. Manager Hubert White would like to see a large crowd out to root for the boys.

C. S. Kelly and wife, C. G. Kelly and family and Robert Yeoell and family spent Sunday att the home of Chas. Kelly, near Waterloo.

CONVENTION

OF LEGIONNAIRES AT LEXINGTON TO BE GALA AFFAIR— LARGEST FIREWORKS DISPLAY-STATION IN STATE'S HISTORY PLANNED—

Lexington, Ky., July 16:—A big parade, reminiscent of the Boston and Louisville National gatherings of the Legion; Fire-works galore, a golf tournament and dances featuring Freddy Burgin and his radio orchestra, will combine to make the thirteenth annual State Convention of the American Legion at Lexington, July 26-29, the greatest and most spectacular convention ever held by the Kentucky Legionnaires and Auxiliary members.

Pre-convention activities will begin July 26 with the "Grand Wreck" of the Forty and Eight, Legion playground organization. The "French box car boys" will stage a drum corps parade, banquet and initiation the afternoon and night previous to the opening of the convention proper.

Thousands of convention delegates who are expected to arrive in Lexington Sunday, July 26, will find plenty of amusement in the polo game between the Legion team and a team representing the Lexington Polo Club at the Whitney Polo field, near Lexington, which will be open to Legionnaires by the mere showing of their registration cards. Some of the most famous polo players of the country, including Maj. Louie A. Beard, formally captain of the United States Army international championship team, will take part.

The convention will be opened formally at 9 o'clock Monday morning, July 27, at Ben Ali theatre here, after which the big parade, including a score or more of drum corps and bands from all parts of the state. This event annually is the most important feature of the convention, whether State or [illegible] from every county in the Commonwealth. Nearly 1,000 boy scouts and representatives of other patriotic organizations will take part in the parade, representatives of other patriotic organizations. Probably 5,000 men and women will take part in the parade through the Main streets of Lexington.

Another long-to-be-remembered feature will be the drum corps contest and fireworks spectacle that same night in the mammoth stadium at the University of Kentucky. The many drum corps at the convention will compete for $600 in cash prizes beneath the huge flood lights in the stadium which are used during the fall for night football games, which will bathe the entire spacious field in daylight illumination. The war time tunes which thrilled Americans in the eventful days of 1917-19, stirring marches and patriotic tunes, will be flared forth from hundreds of bugles with their rumble from the snare drums.

Following the drum corps contest, the flood lights will be dimmed, and from the adjacent football field, in which a long trench has been dug for the emplacement of the mortars, will be ejected the most dazzling display of fireworks ever seen in Kentucky. Accompanined by patriotic music, the huge bombs will burst high in the air to paint pyrotechnic pictures of General Pershing and other war figures, ending with a fireworks tribute to the American heroes who laid down their lives in France.

As the smoke of the fireworks display is fading, the first convention dance will begin at the near-by Men's Gymnasium of the University where Freddy Burgin and his radio entertainers, including Don Dewey, former radio star of W. L. W., and Skeeter Palmer, famous accordion player, who is well known to radio listeners.

CARRIERS TO MEET

Northern Kentucky Rural Letter Carriers will meet with the Ladies Auxiliary at the home of E. C. Lutes, Florence Carrier, Saturday evening, July 18th.

An excellent dinner will be prepared by the wives of the carriers and a special program is being arranged which will consist of a report from the State Convention by the delegates and special music. Talks by the Postmasters and members also will be heard.

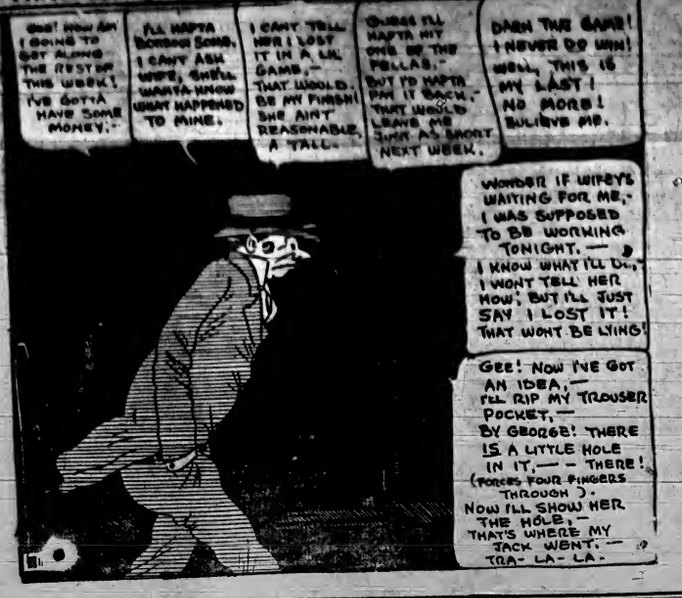
THE COST OF ILLNESS

There is another thing as sure as death and taxes—sickness. The average American man is ill once a year; the average American woman nearly twice as often; the child of school age twice as often. These figures taken from a study made by the Committee on the costs of Medical Care, which is coming to the end of a five year study of the economic aspects of the prevention of disease and the care of the sick. These illnesses total about 130,000,000 every year. Their direct cost in money is computed by the Committee at $3,100,000,000.



This is a huge cost, reckoned either in terms of time lost or of money expended. The cost would be huge even if we could foresee just when we fall ill, just how serious the illness will be, or just how long it will last. None of those things, however, can be foreseen, and to all the other burdens that illness imposes upon us must be added uncertainty. Uncertainty exists not only as to appearance and character of illness, it is even more a factor with relation to cost. No problem enters into the daily lives of Americans that is more serious than this.

Medical facilities in the United States are adequate in the aggregate, perhaps. The committee has found that 1,500,000 people devote their full time to medical care. There is one physician to every 126 inhabitants. Over 7,000 hospitals have 900,000 beds, which would give every man, woman and child one and one-half days occupancy a year. But neither physicians nor hospitals are evenly distributed; there are places that have too many and there are places that have too few.

What can be done about seeing that everybody in the United States has sure and convenient access to the medical care to which he is entitled? What can be done about seeing that those who furnish this care are adequately rewarded for their labor? What can be done about seeing that the means of paying for this care are provided for all the people?

In the four years which has already put in upon its task such progress has been made that answers to those questions will soon be submitted to the people of the United States. There is promise that the formula which will result will be workable. If it is, then one of the great contribution to civilization of our age will have been made.

"THAT LITTLE GAME"—A LOSER'S THOUGHTS

SURFACE DRAINAGE SPOILS SPRINGS

Of the 678 samples of spring water examined in the Public Service Laboratories at the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky, last year, 742, or 69 percent, were found polluted. It is true that spring water contains only a small percentage of the water supply; yet, in view of these figures, when spring water must be used for house hold purposes extreme care should be taken to protect it.

Since the contamination of springs is nearly always due to surface drainage, or to refuse carried into the spring by the wind, the spring house should afford adequate protection against danger of pollution from these sources, points out the agricultural engineering section of the College of Agriculture. If the spring is not large, and it is not desirable to build a house to protect it, a good curbing may be built up with an underground overflow outlet for the spring, and a tight cover placed over the curbing.

The Way of Life by Bruce Barton

Last summer there was a water shortage in a town where I was visiting.

I happened to be chatting with my host, who is a noted man, while he was shaving, and I noticed how careful he was to use very little water.

"It seems sort of silly for you to be so conscientious," I remarked. "After all the few drops that you conserve won't make any difference."

"They don't make any difference in the final result," he said, "but they make a lot of difference to me."

When he saw from my expression that I did not quite get his meaning, he proceeded to give me his philosophy of life.

He said when he graduated from college, a quarter of a century ago, there was a great deal of popular emphasis upon so-called "social-service."

Science had begun to introduce wonderful new inventions for increasing human happiness. Men were stirred by the hope of a quick millennium. Young people graduated with the notion that a few years of earnest effort would transform the world.

My friend was one of the most eager of the reformers. He organized, and voted, and agitated, and did all the things that he should. But nothing happened. The good candidates for whom he voted were defeated. The good causes made slow progress. Human nature showed a discouraging unwillingness to change.

"I went through a period of deep disillusionment," he said. "I thought to myself, what's the use of doing anything when one's single effort seems so futile.

"One day while I was in this mood I discovered these words of Socrates

'I, therefore, . . . consider how I may exhibit my sole before the judge in a healthy condition. Where fore, disregarding the honors that most men value, and looking to the truth, I shall endeavor in reality to live as virtuously as I can; and when I die, to die so. And I envite all other men, to the uphost of my power; . . . to this contest, which, I affirm, surpasses all contests here'

"That flashed across my mind like a bolt of lightning," my friend continued. "It clarified everything.

"I realized that I am not responsible for the success or failure of any good cause. All I am responsible for is my own best effort in that cause. Whether my vote be effective or not; whether the amount of water I can save will make any difference—these are not the questions.

"The only question is: Am I doing my best?

"That discovery gave me great comfort," he concluded. "Maybe you could use it in one of your editorials?"

"Many thanks," I answered. "I can."

Sunday School Lesson

SOCIAL SERVICE IN THE
Acts 4: 32-35; 6: 1-4
II Corinthians 9: 1-7

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Christianity is far more than an ideal. Its principals can be put into practice. Calvin Coolidge recently said in one of his daily messages: "It would be difficult to find anywhere on earth a human being whose life has not been modified in some degree by the influence of the Christian religion." Thought of others rather than of self is basic. This began with the Founder and every true follower has the same idea.

Today the world still needs the fullest expression of Christian socialism. As people had need in Jerusalem congregation, provision was made by turning into a common fund whatever could be spared. Many quarrels resulted over the distribution of money. When the apostles faced the situation they realized that their work of preaching was so great that they could not also give adequate attention to the physical needs of the growing office of deacon was inaugurated and seven were chosen to undertake this special type of service. This office of deacon persists in the church of today and a long line of men and women have thus very honorably served the Lord in helping the poor.

Later the gathering of the poor fund was an extensive enterprise. The Council of Jerusalum decreed that Paul, and the other apostles to the nations, should seek funds for the poor in Jerusalum when they ministered abroad. The church in Corinth was held up as an example to the friends in Macedonia quite as we are urged to measure up to the gift made by another. Thus what are called modern financial pressure methods in raising money seem to be rather old.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

SPINACH SALAD

Chop cooked spinach. Add chopped boiled egg and a little chopped cold tongue or ham. One egg to two cups of the spinach should be allowed and for the same amount a half cup of chopped meat. Add a half cup of toasted bread crumbs. Pack in small cups or molds and chill. When ready to serve turn out on beds of lettuce leaves and dress with mayonnaise.

GOOD DRESSINGS

Sauce Tartar: To one cup of mayonnaise add a tablespoon each of finely minced olives, sweet pickles and chives or onions.

Thousand Island Dressing: To one cup of mayonnaise add two tablespoons of chili sauce, one tablespoon of chopped onion and one tablespoon of chopped pepper.

Manhattan Dressing: To one cup of mayonnaise add a finely chopped hard-boiled egg, one tablespoon of capers and a tablespoon of finely chopped sweet pickle.

California Dressing: To one cup of mayonnaise add a quarter cup of minced ripe olives and the same amount of minced green olives.

CHEESE ON SALAD

Did you ever try grated cheese on salad? Use yellow cheese dry enough to be grated and then after you have added a little mayonnaise to the salad sprinkle the cheese lightly on top, or pass in a little dish with the mayonnaise. It is especially good with a salad made from cold cauliflower.

For luncheon some time try a salad from cooked rice that has been set to cool in small individual molds. Place one of the rice molds on each bed of lettuce, and serve with mayonnaise or home-made boiled salad dressing with grated cheese sprinkled on top.

The Family Garden

By John S. Gardner, Kentucky College of Agriculture.

Chinese Cabbage.—Now is the time to start Chinese Cabbage. There are two methods. One is to sow the seed in a seed bed, and transplant the seedlings in rows 30 inches apart, and 18 inches in the row; the other is to sow groups of 3 or 4 seeds where the Chinese Cabbage is finally to stand, and thin to one seedling. The latter is usually the safer method, as escaping the hazard from transplanting during hot weather, and when the ground is dry.

Chinese Cabbage may follow any early vegetable except radishes, mustard or ordinary cabbage. Even though none of these were diseased, they leave a toxic condition of the soil that may prevent Chinese Cabbage succeeding. As for ordinary cabbage, nitrogenous fertilizer is needed. Although manure will serve, it is better to use a good general fertilizer, such as 3-8-6 or 4-10-4. If the garden was well manured in the spring, it may be assumed that phosphorus and potash are present in sufficient amount without refertilizing, but a side dressing of nitrate of soda should be given when the plants are well established and a second 2 or 3 weeks later. The amount is 1 pound to 60 plants.

There are two varieties: Pe Psai and Wong Bok. Of these, Wong Bok is usually the more satisfactory in that it is slightly surer in holding in warm weather.

Endive.—This toothsome salad should be started now. Although it may be handled in the same manure as given for Chinese Cabbage the more usual way is to sow the seed thinly in a continuous drill and thin to 8 inches. The rows may be as close as 18 inches in hand tools are usen in cultivating the garden.

Endive may follow any crop in the garden without danger of contracting disease. The same rules for fertilizing apply as for Chinese Cabbage, except that the rate of sidedressing is one pound to 100 feet of row.

There are two distinct varieties. These are White Curled and Broad Leaved Batavian. The former, usually used as a salad, is prized for the blanched hearts, the blanching effected by tying up the leaves loosely with a soft cord, about two weeks before the head is to be cut. Batavian, a green variety, though capable of being blanched somewhat in the same manner as described above, is usually served cooked, like spinach.

Tomato Spraying.—The time for "blight" (tomato leaf mold and leaf spot, combined) is here, and the plants may be expected to begin dropping their lower leaves unless steps are taken to prevent this trouble. That is to say, the reminder given a few weeks ago, that bordeaux mixture should be applied, is in order. Although the prepared bordeaux obtainable of any druggest or seedsman will serve, it is of advantage to make bordeaux at home. A request to the writer will bring you full directions for making bordeaux mixture.

Bean Troubles.—Two diseases threaten beans at this time, rust and leaf- and pod-spot. Plantings on which the major part of the crop is set may need no treatment, but Plantings still in bloom may well be worth saving. The means is spraying with bordeaux mixture, to which may be added calcium arsenate at the rate of a tablespoonful per gallon, to serve as a check for the Mexican bean beetle as well.

KAMALA REMEDY FOR TAPEWORMS

Tapeworms are white, flat, segmented, ribbon-shaped parasites. Some species are very small and almost invisible to the naked eye; others are larger and easily recognized. Chickens infested with tapeworms are unthrifty and may become so emaciated and weak as to seem paralyzed. In some cases the most prominent symptom is a twisting of the neck and legs.

The department of animal pathology at the Experiment Station University of Kentucky, says that kamala is the best remedy for the removal of tapeworms. The dose of this drug is 15 grains for mature fowls and half that much for frying size chickens. The birds to be treated should be held off feed for 24 hours before and for three hours following the treatment. The house should then be thoroughly cleaned and disinfected.

Advice to Bosses

A good executive doesn't subdue initiative; he develops, strengthens and uses it.—Country Home.

MAIN STREET LOOKS AT BROADWAY

CITY FRIGHT

Everybody who visits New York is seized at some time or other with a sense of panic at its immensity no matter how well travel seasoned they have become. Practically every noted foreigner, from Dr. Albert Einstein to the youngest British flapper, yields at some time or other to this feeling.

People in country towns who may have kept away from the city because of their innate fear of the town ought to conquer this feeling and spend some time here. It is more than a liberal education.

NO REAL DANGER

Life here is as safe as in any spot on earth, in spite of the monsters that roar in the subways, clatter on the elevated railroads and screech on the streets. That noise is what saves lives, probably. At the same time it is nerve-shaking to the stranger, from its potential menace.

Being lost in this enormous city is no great shakes. All one has to do is step up to some one of its 19,000 policemen and let him straighten out your mental tangle. Years ago they earned the name of the "The Finest" and there is on reason to think of them as otherwise, even in these days of newspaper exposes.

AUTO TOURISTS

Hardly an hour passes, day or night, that one cannot see an automobile carrying a load of farm folks out to see the sights of a great city, bowling along through the heart of Longrace Square—the focus of all this country's theatrical activities. Nothing is missing on most of these autos; the tent strapped on the running board; camp paraphernalia piled in; rusty old baggage, and dad up front in his shirt sleeves camly moseying along past the friendly traffic cops; and mother in calico getting an eyeful while soothing baby brood.

Everybody they stop to ask for directions takes a pleasure in helping them along and, even if they don't stay long in the city but hike right out to some tourist camp, they get to see the greatest show on earth at a minimum of expense and effort. Its a good stunt for anybody in the country who is wondering where to go for a vacation.

BIG VARIATIONS IN FARM RETURNS

Returns last year ranging from a profit of $1,452 to a loss of $1,526 are shown in a business analysis which farm economics department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, made of 15 farms in Graves, Calloway, Marshall, McCracken and Ballard counties.

Receipts for the 15 farms average $1,747, and expenses, including five percent interest on the investment an average of $11 for the work and managerial ability of the operators. Small net returns were expected, according to the department, because of drouth and liw prices for farm products.

Notwithstanding the dry season and low prices, some of the farmers made good profits. Eight lost money, failing by $46 to $1,526 to meet expenses.

In studying the records, the department found that the more profitable farms had a much larger volume of sales per acre of tillable land operated, than did the everage farm or the least profitable five farms. Even in the dry year they had $21.32 receipts per acre, as compared with $14.46 for the low group. This was accomplished through a combination of crops and livestock which fit the farm and market conditions to the best advantage.

The five farmers in the low group spent $1.42 for each dollar of receipts, while the five most successful men spent only 62 cents. Efficiency in feeding livestock was found to be an important factor. The best farmers produced most of their own feed. The most successful farmers were better tobacco growers, producing not only more pounds to the acre but also better quality, and received more than twice as many dollars per acre for their tobacco as did the poorer farmers.

FEED WHEAT AND BARLEY TO HOGS

Many farmers are considering the economy of feeding wheat and barley to hogs this year. In fact, some farmers with small acreages of wheat turned the hogs into the fields. Most of them, however, harvested wheat in the regular manner and will feed the grain. The barley acreage in much of the statte was large and many yields exceptional this year.

Both barley and wheat make satisfactory hog rations, according to Grady Sellards of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky Barley, because of its higher fiber content, is considered less efficient than corn or wheat. Both wheat and barley should be coarsely ground for best results.

Barley and wheat should be supplemented with skimmilk or a mixture of 200 pounds of tankage and 100 pounds of cottonseed meal. Pasture is always desireable in feeding hogs. Salt should be self-fed.

Chicago's Time of Agony

The great fire in Chicago October, 1871, destroyed 18,000 buildings with an estimated loss of $200,000,000.

ORCHARD TOUR POSTPONED

The Louisville orchard and truck crops tour scheduled for July 16th. and 17th., and planned in ... person with northern Kentucky farmers during the early part of last month has been postponed according to the county agent.

The usual busy harvest time in all northern Kentucky counties was the cause for a large number of orchard and truck growers orginally cooperating in the planning of the tour to request that it be postponed.

LAWN DAMAGE

Many farmers and farmers wives were worried the past week over the dying of grass in their lawn. The lawns in two or three days time from a beautiful stand of grass to so much litter. Close observations disclosed that there were hundreds of small dark worms resembling wire worms cutting the grass at the top of the ground.

The county agent collected a number of the above worms and sent them to Dr. Price of the Entomology Department of the College of Agriculture for identification and information on methods of control.

Revolutionary Pensions

On August 26, 1776, congress offered pensions equal to half pay to the officers and enlisted men who were disabled in the Revolutionary war, with proportionate pensions in the case of partial disability. An act granting pensions to invalids was passed in 1785, but the first service pensions were granted by the act of March, 1818.

Solomon refers to the graceful action of the greyhound, and relief carvings at least 4,000 years old have been found in Assyria, showing a slim, long-legged, smooth-coated dog, which is the image of the modern greyhound.

Chinese Medical Ethics

The statement that the Chinese pay physicians to "keep them well" is fallacious, but has this foundation in fact: Upon feast days or holidays, Chinese families make substantial gifts of money to their physicians. These gifts are expected. They, however, do not pay large fees for actual medical attendance.

Water for Goldfish

A temperature between 50 and 80 degrees is best for goldfish. Avoid any sudden change in temperature. If water is above 85 degrees in summer watch the fish and if they seem distressed reduce the number of fish in each aquarium and be sure the water is aerated. Do not put ice in the water. Cooled water may be fed in gradually if temperature is dangerously high.

Famous Civil War Poem

The poem, "Sheridan's Ride," was written by Thomas Buchanan Read. Gen. Philip Henry Sheridan's famous ride through Winchester, his enthusiastic reception at the hands of his troops, his remarkable success in turning a disastrous rout into a brilliant victory, formed a dramatic episode of the Civil war.

Alaska's Old Capital

Sitka, Alaska, was the old Russian capital of Russian Alaska, and remained the capital of the new territory of Alaska when the Americans took possession on October 18, 1867. There was very little government in Alaska for some time after its acquisition, and it was not until the act of August 24, 1912, that the territory was organized and the capital officially established at Juneau.

FUNDS FOR HOMES SUPPLIED BY BANK

By ROGER C. STEPHENSON
Member American Bankers Association

A LARGE portion of the funds required in home building today has been furnished by banks. That fact shows unusually deep interest in the performance of this feature of national development. Upon it rests much of our country's future stability, and any contribution to its advancement redounds to the advantage of all. So banking has never permitted its co-operative attitude toward home building to lessen.

R. C. STEPHENSON

Practically all banks now accept savings deposits which can well be turned to the advantage of the home builders. The construction of individual dwellings requires a large amount of financing and is a thoroughly commendable enterprise. Necessarily, the aid given to home builders is governed by the sound banking rules which have grown out of the years of experience and the constant studies of bank practices.

All of the efforts made to secure broader real estate loan privileges, to adjust resources to make it possible to lend larger sums for long terms, the standardization of mortgage loan formulas, and the actual lending of vast sums on mortgage notes evidence the desire of banks to contribute a full measure of support to the home-building movement. This is true of all classes of banks, but even in a more marked degree do those whose deposits are largely in the form of savings and whose loans are primarily for building or home purchasing purposes.

Both Sides Protected

The process through which bank loans are made on real estate is as simple as the nature of such an important transaction will permit. When money is advanced the lender must know that repayment will be made the specified time. Likewise the borrower wants to be assured that, after he has figured the loan on the basis of his conservatively anticipated ability to pay, he will not be required to do more, that he will not be disturbed in his efforts to work out of his obligations under those terms. Whether his agreement is to repay the entire loan in three or five years, or on a monthly or yearly basis, he wants the assurance that no additional burdens will be imposed upon him. All of this is settled definitely in advance.

There is no mystery about any of the details, and when the negotiations are complete the borrower knows just what he may expect and what he will be required to do to meet his obligations.

Loans made to persons who wish to acquire homes are not necessarily building loans. One may wish to purchase a home already constructed. In this form of transaction bank loans are used very freely because it is the only kind of a real estate loan some classes of banks may make. Others of course, may lend upon real estate with improvements uncompleted and advance funds as the construction progresses. Different styles in home financing have developed in the various states, and banks have tried to adapt their facilities to the needs. Whatever character of assistance is required in any particular instance usually can be found in some bank in the local community.

Among banks and borrowers for home acquisition purposes a long established and thoroughly tested relationship exists. Banks are not the only agencies through which such funds are available; they do not embody all the spirit of helpfulness which abounds. However, through the years of their cooperation their aid has been of unquestioned value to the home builders whose efforts to establish a permanence for themselves have received constant encouragement. Bankers everywhere are ready to counsel with their customers about their home-building plans and to assist to the extent of their ability. This is being done constantly and the many advantages of it are not without recognition.

Farm Service by a Bank

A farm service department was inaugurated a year ago by a bank in Olympia, Washington, and a farm advisor appointed. Close cooperation has been maintained with the state college extension service. Work in dairying is carried on in conjunction with the Dairy Herd Improvement Association. Also a pasture contest was held in cooperation with the four banks in the county which offered prizes amounting to $100. Work in poultry was carried on in cooperation with the Co-operative Poultry Association and assistance was given in organizing an economic conference for the benefit of berry growers. The farm advisor of the bank is active in the Agricultural Council of the county composed of farm and other organizations interested in agricultural development, and also in the Farmers' Market. Six hundred farm business analysis blanks were distributed while farm account books and poultry record books were also provided to farmers and have been helpful in starting many farmers in keeping business records.

Attitude Toward Time

All That Really Counts Is Present, Not Past or Future

Time is money, so quickly does more of need for us to push on with our job we hurry, so much do we think that time passing costs money, so much do we hate to waste it, that we rush it on its way to the next task. Our crowds grown so in the thing that counts. If we are busy we are happily engrossed in the affairs of life, we do not notice the passing of time. It is when we say that it passes quickly. When we are bored we are distressed and gloomy, we think that time hangs heavy upon our hands. And it does.

The right attitude in the matter of time should be something different. Time, and therefore experience, must come and go. Are we being intelligent enough to utilize every second of time in the best possible way, and are we directing our lives to the fullest possible advantage as a result of the experience? If we are not, we are not pushing on. Valuable days are passing, and people are suffering—some physically, some mentally; many in both ways. There is no time to lose. If we are economists of time and effort, as we should be, there is need for a closer and a more intelligent understanding and grasp of our jobs; not only our personal task, but the business of caring for others.

We must push on. There must be no fainthearedness. If we would lead, there must be courage and determination.—Exchange.

Queer Designations Given Animal and Bird Groups

Perhaps the ingenuity of the sportsman is nowhere better illustrated than by the use to which he puts the English language in designating particular groups of animals. Here is a list of terms which have been applied to the various classes:

A covey of partridges; a nide of pheasants; a wisp of snipe; a flight of doves or swallows; a muster of peacocks; a seige of herons; a building of rooks; a brood of grouse; a plump of wild fowl.

A stand of plovers; a watch of nightingales; a clattering of choughs; a flock of geese; a herd or bunch of cattle; a bevy of quails; a cast of hawks; a trip of dotterel; a swarm of bees; a school of whales.

Stood on His Dignity

Bill, aged six and one-half, came home to announce pridefully that he had been promoted to A class, first grade, and that he meant to be the best boy in the world and study like everything.

Imagine, then, the surprise of his mother when the very next day she got a note from Bill's teacher saying that Bill had been astoundingly bad. Actually, he had flatly and persistently refused to cut and paste and color pictures.

"And you did it so beautifully all last term," said his mother. "What ever possessed you to refuse?"

"Sure I did it swell last term," Bill agreed. "But you don't catch me doing baby stuff like that now I'm grown up. What they've got to teach me is reading and writing and arithmetic, or I'll walk out on 'em."—New York Sun.

Co-Operative Farming

In an arid country, so rocky that it compares favorably with the slope of the Rocky mountains, a rancher has tried to eke out a living for more than 50 years. With him lives his hired man who has been with him that length of time also. One day a visitor asked the old rancher how he managed to pay the old hand his wages.

"It's this way," said the rancher. "I hired him for two years and gave him a mortgage on the ranch to guarantee his wages. At the end of two years he got the ranch, and I went to work for him on the same terms. For 50 years the ranch has passed back and forth every two years and neither of us has drawn a cent of wages. So we made it pay."

Youth Must Be Served

A Pittsburg man addressing a local luncheon club the other day said the eighty-one-year-old grandmother of the family lives at his home.

Not long ago, he related, she came back from a shopping trip with a package and took it on up to her room. There was considerable curiosity as to what was in the package, but grandma seriously objects to being questioned. A little later, however, she came down with another bundle, and handing it over to her daughter, remarked: "There are all my old nighties. I'm rid of them, for I've just laid in a supply of silk pajamas that I sport from now on."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

African Form of Greeting

Perhaps the nearest form to the handshake found in Africa today is the custom of the Hausas, a native numbering more than 6,000,000, living in northern Nigeria. The Hausamen stand or kneel and clasp hands in much the same manner that we do, only they do not shake them. Then after holding hands for a few moments, with much feeling, they release their hold, and each touches his breast, and sometimes his forehead. This is repeated two or three times. They also clasp hands again when parting.

BUSINESS PITFALLS IN FARM DISTRICTS

Bankers Point Out Menace of Unsound Practices and Help Farmers to Avoid Them.

WAYS in which bankers may discourage unsound farm practices are described by President F. D. Farrell of the Kansas State Agricultural College in the American Bankers Association Journal. He says:

"In Kansas in connection with the importation of dairy cattle, a large shipment of very inferior animals came into a county to be sold at auction to local farmers. The county agricultural agent informed the bankers that the cattle would be a detriment to the community. The bankers refused to finance the purchase of the cattle and the sale was abandoned. The cattle were shipped to another county. The county agent and the bankers there did as was done in the first instance and the second county escaped.

"A year ago creamery promoters began trying to capitalize the Kansas farmers' desire to improve his markets by inducing communities of farmers to purchase creamery plants before production and local conditions justified them. Informed of this by the State Agricultural College, the bankers association sent warnings to every bank in the state, leading many to refuse to support the creamery promoters until the college approved the plant for the community concerned. This saved many communities loss from the premature establishment of plants.

"A third way bankers can discourage unsound practices is to refuse to finance farmers who wish to pyramid their enterprises, a temptation difficult to resist. This is illustrated among farmers who buy cattle for feeding purposes. A farmer feeds two or three cars of cattle one year and makes a good profit. This induces him to buy twice or three times as many the second year, still more the third and so on until he finally loses more by having too many cattle on feed in a year of bad prices than he made in several previous years with smaller numbers and better prices. When bankers discourage bad practices their action is a positive benefit to the farmers concerned."

WHAT A KEY BANKER DID FOR HIS COUNTY

The farmers of one county in Tennessee are receiving $400,000 additional annual income from new farm enterprises started since 1926 through the efforts of a "key banker" and the county agent, according to estimates from the Tennessee College of Agriculture. A "key banker" is part of the state bankers' association voluntary field force cooperating with the American Bankers Association in its nationwide plan for bringing about better agricultural conditions through combined banker-farmer effort. New projects started in this particular county are tobacco, Irish potato and cabbage production for cash crops, and dairying and poultry raising for livestock.

The key banker, looking for something to do to better his community, first attempted to procure a county agent but was unable to get the county to make the necessary appropriation, so he and other leading citizens made up the requisite funds through private subscription among farmers and business men and an agent was employed.

Up until 1926 grain was the principal farm production in the county. The banker recognized the disadvantages of this. It afforded a low cash income, and the land was too hilly and rough for profitable grain raising. His idea was to introduce cash crops that offered more return per acre and were better fitted to the county. It was decided that the county should standardize on the Green Mountain potato and to market it in carload lots. Through his bank he sponsored the buying of a car of certified seed potatoes. He likewise bought some high quality tobacco seed and several hundred settings of purebred eggs. These supplies were distributed at cost through the banks to the farmers.

After considerable effort a market for dairy products was assured the farmers when in 1928 a national cheese company located a factory there. A county appropriation was secured for county agent work in 1928.

In 1929 the cash crop program resulted in farmers selling $45,000 worth of milk, $150,000 worth of tobacco and fifty-five carloads of potatoes and cabbage, mostly through cooperative sales. "This was some step from the $26,000 worth of cash crops in 1926," the county agent says, "and indications are that this amount will be doubled."

Banks Favor Diversification

Emphasis was placed on the strategic position the banker holds through the use of directed credit at a recent meeting of the Alabama bankers' agricultural committee. Alabama is confronted with the problem of over-production of cotton. The committee recommended to banks that credit be extended on the basis of a twenty-five per cent reduction in cotton acreage. The value of growing other crops than cotton was strongly stressed and county outlook meetings are being planned with the thought of bringing about a more balanced agricultural program in the various communities.

Old Type of Banker Passes

The Lloyds Bank of London is the result of the amalgamation of a number of old banking houses, each of which was founded by a Quaker. The Quakers were famous for their honesty and their strength of purpose and the bonds in gold to be paid to him through the Bank bear on an oak to subject the interest, but they take back again in the power and honesty of a Board in the Osborne republic house.

The finest war of the past hangs in the "gunroom" and weighed about 100 pounds. As it was being drawn out of the rugs which it shared with the pythons it coiled a twelve foot snake by the neck.

Locked together, the two creatures were drawn out. Keepers made every effort to lever the jaws of the lizard apart. But it was useless, and the python's neck was flat as a pancake when at last the lizard let go.

A record illustration of the muscular power of the turtle was given by the late Frank Bullen. He and his mates captured an immense turtle weighing 1,600 pounds and cut it open. They removed all the meat and left only the head attached to the shell.

A young man began examining the head and foolishly put his fingers into the turtle's mouth. They were bitten off as cleanly as if they had been cut.

Historian Sees Symbol in "Song of Nibelungs"

A strange theory, according to which the famous "Song of the Nibelungs" is partly a symbolic description of metallurgical processes, has been published by the German historian, Carl Ludwig Ants. While Herr Ants does not deny that some of the personalities and motives of the song may have a historical background, his thesis is that the poet of the Nibelungs used old fairy tales and myths merely as a garment. The life of Siegfried, Herr Ants contends, is full of such indications. In his opinion, it is highly remarkable that metals have been mined in the territory around the city of Worms, the seat of the Nibelungs, for several thousand years. Siegfried's fight against the dragon is explained as a symbolic interpretation of mining. Brunhilde, who lived in Brittany (not in Iceland), is described as the queen of tin, and Siegfried conquers her for Gunther, the king of copper. Gunther (copper) marries Brunhilde (tin) and the result is bronze. Alberich, the dwarf, is a miner who reveals the secret of mining to Siegfried.

Mankind Never Able to Change Nature of Cat

It seems that the house cat of today behaves in much the same manner as it did in the bygone ages. The animal's association with man has not changed its habits in one particular. It goes about in its own way and takes its own time and all efforts to make it take some part in the operations of the household have failed. The animal resents any interference with its coming and going. Miss A. S. Firkins, of Columbia university, has put the cat to an intelligence test. Seventy-eight cats were secured from a pet show and put through a series of tests. The first problem put before the cats was how to reach food placed inside an inclosure. Most of the cats solved this by stepping upon a plate which opened the way. The problems were then increased in difficulty, the hardest being one which required the cats to touch seven plates, one after the other, to get the food. Only two of the contestants were smart enough to do this. One of the conclusions arrived at was that male cats are smarter than the females.

Sailors' Refuge

Robert Richard Randall was the founder of Snug Harbor. Randall was a sea captain who retired from the sea in the late Eighteenth century and settled down on a large farm on the edge of which is now Greenwich village. When he died he left his property to an institution known as Sailors' Snug Harbor for Ancient and Decrepit Seamen. His relatives did all they could to break the will, but in 1831, over thirty years after the captain's death, the Supreme court upheld the bequest. In the meantime the city of New York had grown so enormously that the trustees decided it would be better to lease the land contained in the Randall farm and locate the seamen's home on Staten Island. At the time of the captain's death or prior, his farm brought in an annual income of about $4,000; at the time the trustees made the change it was yielding $40,000. Today it is estimated that the annual earnings of the property are about $4,000,000.

Bowling Old Pastime

Bowling has been played for centuries in Germany and the Low Countries, where it is still in high favor, but attains its greatest popularity in the United States, whence it was introduced in Colonial times from Holland. The Dutch inhabitants of New Amsterdam, now New York, were much addicted to it, and from 1628 to 1840 it was played on the green, the principal resort of the bowlers being the square just north of the Battery, still called Bowling Green. The first covered alleys were made of hardened clay or of slate, but the modern alleys are built up of strips of pine or maple wood, about 1 by 3 inches in size, set on edge, and fastened together and to the bed of the alley, the surface being carefully leveled and polished.

Old-World Melody

A New Yorker in London was strolling past Lincoln's Inn, one of the old domiciles, which figures in Charles Dickens' "Bleak House." Out of the old building came familiar strains of music.

Meditating, as he walked, on the old-worldliness of this inn built centuries ago, the tune was slow in identifying itself.

It wasn't until the last line of the song that the words came to mind. They were, "I'll never go there any more," and the song, of course, was the one that starts: "The Bowery the Bowery."

Babylonian Lawgiver

Hammurabi was the most illustrious of all the Babylonian kings. He was the sixth of the Amoritic or West Semitic dynasty and reigned 43 years between 2067 and 2025 B. C. Hammurabi promulgated for use throughout his empire one of the greatest legal codes ever devised. A fairly complete copy of the code was found about the Twelfth century at Susa inscribed on a diorite stela eight feet high. Apparently the stone had been taken to Elam as plunder by invaders during the later period of Babylon's decline.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Ancient Jews Fond of Good Dinners, Liked Wine

One example of the use of wine is found in the story of Esther. Ahasuerus, king of Persia, had married Esther, a Jewess, and had made Haman, a descendant of Agag, the king of the Amalekites, his chief minister. Mordecai, Esther's uncle, refused to bow down to Haman, and Haman, angered, plotted to destroy Mordecai and all the Jews in the empire. Esther, however, invited the king and Haman to a banquet, and at the banquet revealed the plot. Haman was hanged on the gallows he had built for Mordecai, and Mordecai was made chief minister in his place.

Wine was used in the sacrifices, and the priests were forbidden to drink it when they were about to enter the tabernacle. Nazarites, who were dedicated to the service of God, were forbidden to drink wine or strong drink, or to eat grapes, raisins or anything made from the vine.

Wine was also used in the sacrifices of the Greeks and Romans, and the priests of Bacchus, the god of wine, were forbidden to drink it when they were about to enter the temple.

Historic Rifle Found in Attic

Some Indiana people are wondering if they have made the discovery David Rumsey Miller, county editor, has an explanation other than the supposition that it might have been the work of some ardent advocate of another freedom, possibly a disciple of Thomas Paine.

The discovery appears in Article 11 of a treaty of "peace and friendship" negotiated with Tripoli by an American sea power, Capt. Richard O'Brien, November 4, 1795. Although spotted with sea water and yellowed with age, the instrument still is legible. On alternate pages are the Arabic and English texts, the latter declaring:

"As the government of the United States of America was not in any way founded on the Christian religion—as it has in itself no character of enmity against the laws, religion or tranquility of Mussulmen, and as the said state never has entered into any war or act of hostility against any Mohammedan nation, it is declared by the parties that no pretext arising from religious opinions shall ever interrupt the harmony existing between the two countries."

Veils Once Belonged to Martha Washington

Three veils that once belonged to Martha Washington are owned by Col. Louis J. Kolb, Philadelphian.

One is the bridal veil the Widow Custis wore when she was married to the stalwart Virginian. It is a thin netting, one yard square, elaborately embroidered in floral design on its lower edge. In the center the lace maker worked in hundreds of representations of clover leaves.

Another is the veil she wore when she sat for the portrait Gilbert Stuart painted. It is hand-embroidered in silver spangles with a border of fern-frond pattern and measures three yards by fifteen inches.

The third is a riding veil, reminiscent of the peaceful days when she used to accompany her husband on tours of their estate at Mount Vernon. This one is of fine quality Brussels net and is two and a half yards long by fifteen inches wide.

The heirlooms had been in the hands of kin of the Washington family continuously until they were acquired a few years ago by Colonel Kolb.

Found in Shakespeare

The line "caviare to the general" appears in Shakespeare's play, "Hamlet." Act II, Scene II where Prince Hamlet is speaking to the actors, saying: "I heard thee speak me a speech once, but it was never acted; or if it was, not above once; for the play, I remember, pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general." The word "general" here signifies "the general public." Caviare, the Russian condiment made from the roe of the sturgeon, was then considered a new and fashionable delicacy, but was not obtainable by nor relished by the common people. Consequently, anything which fails to achieve popularity because it is thought to be above the popular taste or comprehension may be considered as "caviare to the general."

Erasmus Alms Box"

Erasmus, noted scholar and reformer of the Sixteenth century, with his friend Dean Colet, founder of St. Paul's school, visited St. Nicholas' almshouse, in England, and one of the brethren ordered a holy relic for them to kiss, as was the custom before sprinkling guests with holy water, writes Lovinia Walsh in the Boston Transcript. The relic in this case was a part of a shoe once worn by St. Thomas of Canterbury. The dean, it seems, was not kissing anybody's old shoes. He forthwith got hot under his clerical collar and became rhetorically hectic.

The scholarly Erasmus, on the contrary, was most courteous, and to make amends for the dean's misbehavior, he dropped a goodly sum into the alms box. Ever after, this box was known as "The Erasmus Alms Box."

Getting Deaf

A certain well-known local hypochrondriac has a new fear—that is getting hard of hearing. His doctor assures him it isn't so, but he worries constantly about the possibility of becoming deaf.

His complex took the form of announcing to his office mates that he was going to buy some sort of an earphone, to see if that aided him. Consequently his colleagues were ready for him when he appeared with it next day, and whispered every word they addressed to him or to anyone in his presence.

Now he's telling his doctor that the good man doesn't know what he's talking about. Mean? Maybe—but have you ever lived with a hypo-chrondriac? —Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Properly Southern States

The original Mason-Dixon line was the boundary line between Pennsylvania and Maryland; just before the Civil war the line was accepted as the dividing line between free and slave states. The states generally regarded as southern are Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi, Texas, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, Missouri, Kentucky, Maryland and Delaware. The Mississippi river, which forms the eastern boundary of Missouri, does not change its name. The Missouri river divides the state, but the whole of Missouri is considered as a southern or border state.

Making a Market

A market for any kind of goods is any assemblage of buyers and sellers of that commodity. This market does not necessarily mean that the buyers and sellers must be in close contact, as on the New York stock exchange, but there can be no actual market unless the buyer and seller are in communication with each other. Thus modern inventions like telegraphy, telephone, wireless and other means of communication have greatly enlarged the possibilities of markets.

"Sweetheart of Europe"

Austria is the happy young girl in Europe's family of such different children, for whom godfathers and sweethearts have dreamed more names of delightful meaning than the proesis allow. It was thought that in calling her "Austria," a name reminiscent of Aurora, the goddess of dawn, the problem of expressing her beauty in one word had been attained, but as soon as her charms were revealed to the tourist every lover who lingered about her beautiful estate ransacked the archives of fairyland to find a new term of endearment for her. "The Nymph of the Danube," "The Queen of the East," "The Musical Maid of Monarchy" and "The Sweetheart of Europe" were but a few of the tributes with which men adorned her.

To the Home of the Fair

So long as tourists visit Verona to see Juliet's tomb, or the Doone valley to see Lorna's farm, or Elsinore to see the grave of Ophelia, so long will tourists go to Perth in Scotland, to its North Port, and seek the corner of Curfew row and Blackfriar's wynd, to visit the house of Katie Glover, the fair maid of Perth, whom Sir Walter Scott made known to all of us. About the only thing that is certain, is that the house did belong to the Glovers, and standing within it, and walking about this part of the old city, it is possible for the lovers of Scott to reconstruct the scenes of the great romance.

Canada's Oldest House

Canada's oldest continuously occupied house stands in the little village of Sillery, a suburb of the city of Quebec. The mansion, as it once was, is nearly three hundred years old having been built in 1637. The father and founder of Sillery and its mission was the Commander de Sillery, a great Frenchman of his time, a favorite of the French court and for a long time a leading ambassador of the king of France, following which he took holy orders as a Jesuit, and thus became one of the early missionaries to New France.

Washington Snap Shots

The United States will participate in the general disarmament conference to be held in Geneva next year. An invitation to send representatives to the parley was received by the President. It will be accepted formally, according to a White House announcement. The invitation was forwarded by the League of nations, evidently impressed by Mr. Hoover's recent utterances regarding disarmament and the American Government's clear purpose to use its influence toward a reduction in military expenditures to aid economic rehabilitation. The Administration's welcome of the invitation is further evidence that this Government is determined to press for disarmament as a sequence to President Hoover's moratorium. It also demonstrates that the Administration's view of our relation to the arms conference has changed radically and that Mr. Hoover now regards it America's duty to be an active participant.

A movement has been started by the Democratic Borsen Courier to name some important Berlin street "Hooverstresse" in recognition of the American President's initiative in attaining a reparations motorium. There is a possibility that the street might be named before Secretary Stimson's visit to Berlin if the paper's crusade is successful.

The Stars and Stripes have again taken a leading place on the high seas. The United States Shipping Board has issued information showing that American-flag ships sail regularly from 16 Atlantic ports, from 18 Gulf ports, and from 29 Pacific Coast ports, a growth since the World War that is amazing. This statement from the Shipping Board also informs the public that 40 foreign ports now have from 5 to 15 daily United States flag services, while only 11 such ports had regular service prior to the war. American ships sail into the ports of every civilized country of the globe. They bear American-made bring hither the merchandise from many lands to enrich American homes.

Despite the decline on the value of commodities exchanged between the United States and other countries last year, the "invisible" trade, and praticularly international financial operations, continue close to the level of the preceeding "boon" year. This was brought out by Assistant Secretary of Commerce in a foreward to the department's delayed report on the balance of international payments for 1930. Part of the international financial operations reflected in the study, he pointed out, have a close relationship to commerical operations.

The most important result of the United States will be to relieve Germany of the burden of reparations payments. If President Hoover had not made his announcement on June 20, the German Reichsbank would have closed its doors June 22. If the negotiations at Paris had not been successful, the same disaster would have been inevitable, for even after Mr. Hoover's proposal for suspension of intergovernmental payments had been made the condition of the bank continued to grow more and more critical.

In a vigorous defense of the tariff law of which he is coauthor, Senator Smoot, of Utah, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, challenged the Democrats to clarify their position and specify the duties they should reduce. He called upon Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Democratic leader in the Senate, for a statement, declaring, "it is high time the public is informed as to the extent and specific nature of the Democratic attitude on the tariff." Up to this time Senator Smoot said the only Democrat who has specifically mentioned schedules is Jouett Shouse, executive director of the Democratic National Committee, and the only items he has named were sugar and wool.

Although wheat prices slumped to the lowest level since 1896 on the Chicago grain pit, the Federal Farm Board appeared victorious in its policy of reserving the right to sell from its wheat stock not exceeding 5,000,000 bushels monthly for the next year. The rebuff which Vice-President Curtis and Senator Capper (Rep., Kan.) received from James. C. Stone, chairman of the Farm Board, appears to have taken the heart out of the opponents of the board's policy. Bitter resentment against the board exists and grows daily, but the feeling is that unless President Hoover intervenes nothing can be done about it.

Failing to find the whole system of Federal jurisprudence adequate machinery with which to deal properly with child offenders, the new cabinet Wickersham Commission, in a report issued at the White House, recommended that juvenile prisoners be turned over to the juvenile courts and welfare agencies of the forty-eight states, which are making attempts to deal with them as delinquents rather than criminals. Children in the Federal court courts are dealt with on the same plane as adult offenders, and many times are confined in the same prisons, when their offenses, according to the commission's views are such as called for the "application of community guardianship."

Gathered here from every part of the United States, are more than 4,000 members of the Baptist Young People's Union of America opened their fortieth annual convention with a session at which addresses were made by Walter H. Newton, secretary of President Hoover; W. W. Everett, chairman of the executive committee of the Columbia Association of Baptist Chuches, and Mrs. J. M. Dawson, of Waco, Texas. A feature of the convention was introduced when investigation sessions on various topics, ranging from the home to prohibition were held. The object of these sessions being to go to the heart of the various subjects with the view of advancing remedies to existing problems.

Thrilled with the prospect of a visit to Washington, the 27 British university students, who arrived in New York recently under the auspices of the Garnegie Endowment for International Peace, will take in the sights of the Capital and will be much feted during their sojourn here from July 20 to 24. They are in this country to attend the British and Americans students conference on international affairs at Ann Arbor, Michigan. At the Ann Arbor conference 24 American students and four Canadian students will participate with the Britons. The purpose of the sessions, as outlined by the Carnegie endowment, is to bring together students from various parts of the British Empire and the United States for the discussion of problems of such vital international interest as those chosen for consideration in the three commissions upon which the program is based, which are: "What Follows the Pact of Paris?" "Limitation of Armaments," and "International Region Organizations."

The first landing of a heavier-than-air craft on the Capitol Plaza was made by James G. Ray in an autogiro to pick up Senator Bingham of Connecticut, president of the National Aeronautic Association and fly him to the Burning Tree Golf Club. The flight was arranged as a demonstration of the ability of the "flying windmill" to land in, and take off from small areas in the heart of a city. Eleven minutes after the take-off from the Capitol Senator Bingham was on the links at the Burning Tree Club, 12 miles away. He lost time on the way, he said, because Ray circled the Washington Monument and then went around the White House grounds to show the point on the south lawn where he landed the autogrio in connection with the awarding of the Collier Trophy last spring.

A total of 1698 students from 118 counties in Kentucky and thirty states will be in residence at the University for the first session of the summer school. This enrollment represents an increase of 211 over last summer when the total number was 1,485.

Courses are being offered in each department and college of the University and in addition to the regular faculty, several professors from other educational institutions are teaching at the University during the summer. A full week of Chautauqua is being held on the campus beginning June 22.

Free medical service will be available to all summer school students as the University Dispensary will be open daily as before. Last year during the summer session 368 man and 408 women were inoculated for typhoid.

Attending the first session of the University summer school from Boone county are Walter Dudley Vest and Kathryn Chandler Walton; and Joe Edward Ransom, Verona.

Hallowed Spots

The site of ancient Jericho today is marked by a series of mounds a little distance from the present village of Jericho. On one side looms the Mount of Temptation, where Christ is said to have passed His forty days' fast in the wilderness. On the opposite side of the ruins is Elisha's fountain, said to be the waters which Elisha sweetened by throwing salt into them.

French Law Officials Walked Long to Parties

"It is a serious thing to be 'out of the law in France," writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. "The elephant never forgets servitudes to more or less as most French officers of the law. While decades after men escape from Devil's Island or the Foreign Legion they are wont to be tapped on the shoulder in the streets of Marseilles or Bordeaux and told to come along to the police station.

"And recently an elderly peasant woman in a village near Boulogne was tackled for an eight-franc fine inflicted on her nine and twenty years ago. It appears that on September 15, 1901, three children were seen gleaning in an outfield before the sheaves had been removed. The garde champetre called on their mother and told her that she would be fined for this heinous delinquency on their part.

"She was a busy woman with eight other small children continually getting into the sort of mild trouble that befits their age. She waited for the summons, but it never came along, and presently she forgot all about it. Recently, however, she received that summons with a demand to pay eight centimes. Mystified, she went to the office of the local justice of the peace, where they explained what it was all about, and said that they had found the matter outstanding in the book. She paid it to avoid further bother."

Nothing Modern About the Use of Spectacles

Glasses for the aid of our sight are almost as old as the universe. It is not far-fetched to think that the Atlanteans 22,000 years ago knew of lenses, Dr. Fassett Edwards writes in an article on the history of glasses, in Hygeia Magazine.

The ruins of Nineveh yielded the oldest known piece of transparent glass, which was dated 2,000 years ago. Pliny has recorded, Doctor Edward's reports, that Nero winked and blinked and brought objects close to his eyes. Nero was wont to gaze on gladiatorial fights through a glass cut from a huge emerald.

The first of our present-day spectacles was produced by Roger Bacon, who in about the year 1280 A. D. made a reading glass to be used in magnifying the smallest letters. Benjamin Franklin was the inventor of the local spectacles.

Action of Roentgen Rays

A German physicist Wilhem Konrad Roentgen, born at Lennep, in Prussia, in 1845, discovered the X-ray, or Roentgen rays, in 1895. He was a professor at Wurzburg at that time. The X-rays are known to be vibrations of the ether, similar to but much more rapid than those of light. The wave length is so extremely short that every substance, regardless of color, is more or less transparent to them. A simple explanation of them is that when a high tension electric current is sent through a glass tube from which the air has been highly exhausted, the negative pole or cathode sends out an invisible stream of negatively charged particles called cathode rays. These rays can be brought to a focus like light, and when focused on a metallic target within the tube, the metal becomes intensely hot and gives off these Roentgen rays, or X-rays.

Bug-Rest Houses

The late Seth Buddhimal, wealthy and pious banker of Sihora, Central India, left $100,000 to build and endow in perpetuity three rest houses into which insects may withdraw from the world. Poor travelers will be allowed to sleep overnight in these bug-rest houses, will even be paid a small sum for doing so, as long as they lie still and kill no bugs. Should a sleeper kill a bug, even by accidentally rolling over, he will be ejected from the bug house by attendants and forfeit his sleep money. No less than 200 insect rest houses of a more or less similar nature are maintained throughout India by pious natives who realize that no bug is too insignificant to contain the reincarnated soul of an ancestor.—Time Magazine.

Try Yawning

If you would fortify your wilting nerves before walking into the boss' office to ask for that long-delayed raise or for that luscious higher job, just yawn and indulge in a hearty stretch. The procedure is guaranteed by one authority to give renewed courage and vocal tones that will reflect confidence in the crucial interview.

Helen Hathaway, author and contributor to many noted periodicals, says that bodily poise is directly allied with mental balance through correct posture and regular breathing. One way of acquiring the elusive quality, she says, is through oscitancy (Fancier for "yawning").

Italy's Flag

The royal standard of Italy consists of a square blue field, on which is centered the national coat of arms. When Napoleon made the northern provinces of Italy into a kingdom in 1805 he gave it a flag of three colors—green next to the flagstaff, white in the middle and red at the fly end. This flag disappeared when Napoleon was overthrown, but was revived when Victor Emmanuel, king of Sardinia and a member of the house of Savoy, became king. At the present day Italy's flag consists of the Savoy arms, surmounted by a crown, on the central white vertical stripe of Napoleon's green, white and red.

The earliest life insurance policy of which anything definite is known was issued in 1583 in London, insuring the life of William Gybbons for a twelvemonth. This policy was underwritten by 18 persons acting individually and the premium was $30 a thousand.

Prize for Riflemen

The Wimbledon cup was presented in 1874 by the National Rifle association of Great Britain for annual competition by the riflemen of America. It is open to any citizen of the United States. The course is 20 shots at 1,000 yards. Any rifle sights and ammunition may be used, and the position is prone.

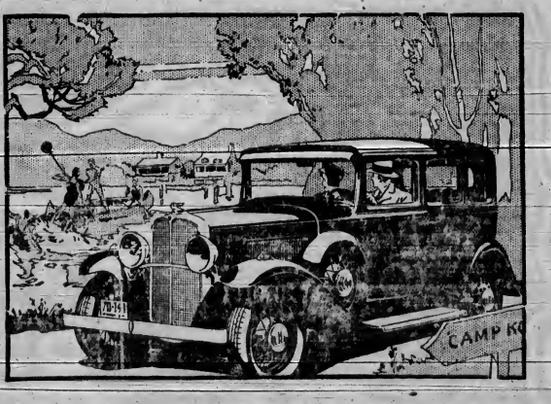
The quality you want . . the price you approve★

If the things you want most in a motor car have cost more than you care to pay—and if the cars you felt you could easily buy have not quite satisfied you—here is a timely message . . .

A lot of people just like you have found in Pontiac both the quality they want and a price they approve.

Suppose you are driving a Pontiac for the first time. What do you find?

Going along at medium speed, you notice how smooth and quiet the engine is. You wonder how it will be at high speed, and a test shows it is just as smooth. For Pontiac's 60 h. p. engine is big enough to do all you ask without laboring.



Over a back road, Pontiac's "rubber insulation" at 43 points in the chassis surely does take up road shocks and gives Pontiac fine-car riding ease. So do the four hydraulic shock absorbers, and the other niceties of design.

You examine the Pontiac interior, and at once you see that the upholstery is genuine mohair or whipcord. You find that seat springs are deep, cushions soft, and the driver's seat easy to adjust the way you like it.

How about protection against heat, cold, and rain?—you ask. And you learn that the fine Fisher-built Pontiac body is weather-tight and leak-proof. Everything has been done for your complete comfort.

There remains only Pontiac's effect on other people. Glances you notice along the street, and the comments of your friends soon settle that! You know you are right in your judgment.

But don't stop at this imaginary test. Take a new Pontiac out on the road and ask it to do everything you want a car to do. Let it prove that it has the quality you want—then ask the price. It's a figure you will warmly approve.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

Radio, the crowning achievement of its time, and one of our greatest blessings, may be degraded to a mere matter of dollars and cents, when mankind descends wholly to that your receiving set may lead you headlong into the open arms of the nostrum-vender and quack, solely in the interest of your pocketbook? That you are made poorer and he the richer by your own soft gullibility?

It gives me a first-rate case of nausea to hear the blatant yawp of some hired man for a quack concern, pleading with me and you to go to the drug store, first thing in the morning and BUY a bottle of germ-killer that knocks 'em in a specified number of seconds!

These fellows that never crossed the threshold of a pathological laboratory in their lives, presume to tell me about "bactera." They infer off-hand that you and I have a mouthful, neckful, stomachful, of potent germs, deadly in character, if not killed off at once by the great bottle savior of mind and body; they juggle handily with laboratory terms, as though they had been raised on test tubes and retorts and chemical reactions; all to get YOU and ME to BUY their guily wash and soak it into our systems.

And do we buy it? We certainly do; we buy stuff of which we know absolutely nothing, at the solicitation of an itinerant who is solely interested in the sum he can extract from your purse, and who knows and cares nothing about the stuff he is paid to peddle. He gets his pabulum into the family, into your children, into you and your wife—and if you use it four or six times a day, all the better—for the nostrum-vendor. For nine out of ten, you could use hot water and boracic acid with better results at one-twentieth the cost.

A good rule for the rural radio-fan is, to believe nothing he hears from a paid porpagandist. He has an ax to grind, and you, dear reader, have been picked out to turn the grindstone. Summon your horse sense; that's my advice.

COLLEGE PREPARED TO TRAIN MEN FOR THE DAIRY INDUSTRY

Laboratories well equipped to demonstrate all phases of dairying will be operated at the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky beginning in September, in training men in dairying, Kentucky's most recent agriculture development.

Practical work will be given in dairying, including the handling of cows on the farm, the production and marketing of milk, and the manufacture of butter, cheese, ice cream and other products.

The new dairy building recently completed in the Experiment Station farm is equipped with a modern creamery, ice cream plant, refrigeration and pasteurization machinery and other apparatus for practical instruction.

Students will use the college's dairy herd of 80 head, representing three breeds, to study cows at first hand, learn what good animals are, and how to judge, breed and feed cattle for the best results.

Lecture and study courses include general dairy farming; a study of the dairy breeds, judging, feeding, clean milk production, bacteriology of dairy products, judging dairy products, and all phases of manumethods in the production of butter ice cream, cheese and market milk.

Prof. Fordyce Ely, in charge of dairying, says that the development of the dairy industry in Kentucky is well under way and presents great possibilities. He emphasizes the fact that the industry in this state is calling for men who are technically trained. Positions are open to men so trained, Men are wanted for the positions of dairy inspectors in various parts of the state, and the College also has calls for men to manage dairy farms, or act as managers or assistant managers of dairy plants or to be fieldmen for creameries.

EASTERN KENTUCKY FRUIT GROWERS TO HOLD FOUR MEETINGS

Lexington Ky.-Four summer fruit growers, meetings for eastern Kentucky are announced by the Kentucky State Horticulture Society and the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky. They will be held in Fleming county July 24.

Orchards will be inspected and problems of fruit growing discussed by local growers. Officers of the State society and members of the faculty of the department of horticulture at the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station. Among the speakers will be W. H. Stites and Ben E. Niles, president and secretary, respectively, of the Kentucky State Horticulture Society; Prof. A. J. Olney, head of the department of horticulture of the College, and W. W. Magill, extension field agent for the College.

Orchards to be visited include V. C. Razor and Browning Orchards in Fleming county; Dr. H. Van Antwerp in Rowan county, Fred C. Van Hoose in Johnson county, and the Ford Experimental farm in Pike county.

Penny Oil Inevitable, Dearest of Life's Ills

Time comes a moment in all of us when we realize we have not only reached the crest of the hill, but that we are going down the other side. Or, at least, we think so. For, if we are strong enough, we need not really go down that hill.

Physically speaking there has been a descent in our life since the moment we were born. Life comes, and incontinently begins to go. But that is the least important side of us. If we have the vision, the movement of our mind and soul should be back up and wider. We only go downhill if we decide that we are going so. Up always should be our watchword—our real determination. Getting the idea that we are going downhill means that we are, definitely and surely. Once it gets into our mind, life takes on a drab, dull, unpleasant view.

You can go on going up the hill if you make up your mind to do so. Going down is a miserable, slippery business, bringing with it no end of sorrow and regret. And lots of stones tumbling after us. It need not be. Make up your mind to go up—and go up you will.—J. H. O. in London Tit Bits.

Fortunes for Those of Inventive Turn of Mind

There seems no end to the variety of quick-witted people who, by some simple, unexpected thought, have introduced new habits to civilization, and grown to be millionaires as a result.

The skilled mining engineer, the builder of ships or bridges, lives and dies in poverty and obscurity compared with such giants of enterprise as the man who invented tins for food, the man who invented openers for the tins, and the master mind who crowned himself with glory by inventing a tin which did not need an opener at all.

It is worth recalling, in this case, that a Chicago meat packer, hearing of the invention, ordered 10,000,000 of the new tins straight away and was followed in desperate haste by his rivals, who fell over each other in the effort to secure supplies of the new marvel.

Sunrise in the Himalayas

Tourists in India rarely omit a visit to Calcutta and when in Calcutta they rarely miss the oppertunity of witnessing a sunrise in the Himalayas. From Calcutta you go to Darjeeling by train, which is a climb of many thousand feet. From this city in the clouds you ascend further about 1,500 feet to see the sunrise. The start is made at two o'clock in the morning and the 1,500 feet referred to is made by pony back or sedan chair. You arrive at the top before daybreak and you sit and watch for the break of dawn. You watch the sun come up over Everet, Kinchingang and other white giants of the greatest mountain wall in the world. If the atmospherical conditions are favorable, you will see a marvelous play of color and after a cupful of coffee served on Tiger hill you silently descend wrapped in the mystery of the stupendous and unspeakable experience.

Shame to Them

Mr. E. Wilkinson has an aunt visiting him from a small town some place in Ohio. City traffic is new and alarming to her.

The other evening the family started out from the West side to keep a dinner engagement somewhere on the East side. They hit the home-going traffic on our downtown streets and got into one of the inevitable jams.

Two mounted policemen scurried through the lines, trying to get some of the slow drivers to pull out of the way, doing their best to remedy the situation.

The little old lady watched these two figures in scorn and finally broke out:

"The very idea! Somebody ought to report to the police that those two men are riding horseback up and down the main street at a time like this!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Dry

Mrs. Robert A. Mack of Porterville relates the story of a little city girl paying her first visit to a farm. Everything was new and novel to her but her interest finally centered in the pig pen where a huge mother sow had temporarily deserted her onspring in order to enjoy a plentiful luncheon of sour milk.

But the piglets didn't care so much about it. They wanted some attention themselves. They were very hungry and very tired. They lifted up their voices and told the world so—especially their mother—in no undecided fashion.

"Daddy! Daddy!" called the little city girl. "Come quick! All the little pigs need oiling. They squeak!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Germs Never Predominant

Although there was a discussion the Continental congress in regard to the use of the German or English language in the colonies, and a motion was made in favor of using the German language, the matter never came to a vote. Only in Pennsylvania was the German element more than a small minority before the Revolution. Perhaps a third of the settlers in Pennsylvania were Germans. Although the German language persisted in the speech and in the press in Pennsylvania, the English stock outnumbered all the others from 1760 to 1790.

PLAN GARDENING FOR INDUSTRIAL WORKERS

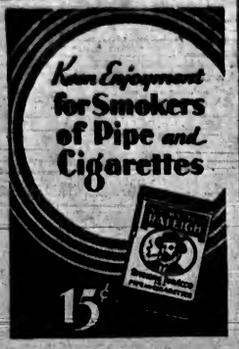
Dean Thomas P. Cooper announce that the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, has made plans to encourage gardening among industrial workers in cities. J. Ford Bailey, a vegetable garden expert, has been employed to interest employers of labor, owners of vacant grounds and workers in cities in gardening.

The purpose of this new extension work by the College of Agriculture, according to Dean Cooper, is to help city workers to provide a better living for their families in the event of complete or partial unemployment.

The work is being inaugurated in Kentucky through the cooperation of President Hoover's unemployment committee, which secured the aid of a national philanthropic agency in furnishing the necessary funds to finance it.

Emergency gardening for industrial workers will be a regular extension project of the College of Agriculture, and will be under the immediate direction of Prof. A. J. Olney, head of the department of horticulture.

Mr. Bailey is a graduate of the University of Kentucky, and has been a farmer and teacher of agriculture, and was for three years in charge of vegetable gardens at the Jefferson county children's home at Ormsby Village.



"How Old Is Anne?"

Under date of October 12, 1908, John Mahon of Brooklyn wrote a letter to a columnist of the New York Press which started the commotion over a problem which he stated as follows: "Mary is twenty-four years old. She is twice as old as Anne was when she was as old as Anne is now. How old is Anne now? A says the answer is sixteen; B says twelve. Which is correct?"

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

SCRAPS FROM THE UNIVERSITY OF KENTUCKY

Fred L. B. Mallon, head of the department of Drawing in the College of Engineering, University of Kentucky, is spending the month of July in Missouri doing special work in photography for the state highway department of Missouri.

Prof Paul K. Walp, member of the Political Science department faculty at the University of Kentucky has recently returned to Lexington for a brief visit, following a tour of the west. He will leave shortly for a trip to Virginia, North Carolina, Marryland and Washington D. C., returning by July 18 to resume his duties as member of the Political Science faculty for the second term of the 1931 Summer Session.

Roy H. Owsley, instructor in the department of Political Science at the University of Kentucky has recently completed a survey of the cost of crime administration in the city of Louisville in 1930. Mr. Owsley is studying for his Ph. D. degree at the University of Kentucky. He made the six-day study on Louisville under the auspices of the National Commission of Law Observance and Enforcement, headed by United States Attorney-General George W. Wickersham.

Dr. A. M. Harding, professor of Mathematics and Astronomy at the University of Arkansas, delivered an illustrated lecture before summer school students at the University of Kentucky recently on "The Depths of Space." His subject dealt with astronomy from a popular viewpoint. Doctor Harding is a prominent lecturer and author, and has published several textbooks dealing with the subjects which he teaches.

Booklets given the broadcast program from the University of Kentucky remote control studios of station WHAS for the six-month period beginning July 1 have been received from the printer and are now available for distribution.

Anyone desiring copies of the radio bulletin can obtain same from Prof. Elmer G. Sulzer, University radio director, or the office of the University Publicity Bureau.

According to Dr. W. D. Funkhouser, professor of Zoology and Anthropology at the University of Kentucky. "the state is famous for its evidences of prehistoric people, and it is very important that these specimens be preserved." Not only should our fine mounds, fortifications and ancient graves be preserved at least until they can scientifically studied, but all other objects associated with prehistoric cultures should be treasured" Doctor Funkhouser has quite a collection of these specimens which he has found in Kentucky, which will be placed in the new University Museum which was formerly the library building and which will be converted to this important use.

4-H TOBACCO LOOKS GOOD

Several 4-H tobacco club members visited the past week showed thatthe members were making progress. Most of the members were compelled to reset their crop from two to four times and some as high as five times due to cut worm damage. They did not give up but remembered the 4-H slogan, "A winner never quits and a quitter never wins." They fought right on and practically all have a good stand if it is a bit uneven.

4-H Club work is a partnership proposition. A partnership of the boy or girl and his or her parents all working thru the home, the school, the community club and local adult leaders. It puts the responsibility on the individual. It represents the best boys and girls thru a natural elimination process. The wide awake and ambitious are the ones who enroll at the start and the project responsibility soon eliminates the lazy or indifferent. The 4-H motto is, 'Make the Best Better.'

KOREAN DEMONSTRATIONS

Korean lespedeza demonstrations of B. C. Kirtley,, Sterling Rouse, Robert Chambers, O. R. Russ, Ben Nichting, Kirtley McWethy, Frank Dolwick and Hess Vest were visited the last two weeks. The second year stands showed splendid growth and all were innoculated. The first year stands had not gotten innoculated todate but were making fair progress.

Korean did not make the expected growth the past two years but both Korean and Japan are making good growth this year. Korean in most cases is about three times taller than Japan at the present time. Korean is still considered an experiment by most farmers of the county.

The legion of friends of Ben Zimmer in Boone county will be grieved to learn that he has been ill for several weeks and that his ailment was diagnosed by a specialist last week as an ulcerated stomach. It will be necessaryfor him to remain at his home for several weeks to come.

It is to be regretted that a man of Zimmer's activity should be afflicted as he is and the Recorder joins his many friends in the wish that he soon will recover his health.

Hoover Defeat Likely, Though Chauces Have Been Enhanced

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Heimes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

When President Hoover suddenly and without warning cast that moratorium bomb into the camp of world-wide business doldrums, there were those who conscientiously disapproved of his action; there were those whose disapproval was obviously based upon premises purely political; there were those who accepted the move hopefully although with fear and trembling, and there were those who lauded it without qualification as the economic and diplomatic masterpiece of a century.

But there were no "those" who had the hardihood to question the political significance of the explosion. Republicans, regular and "progressive," and Democrats, capital and labor, high and low tariff exponents, wet and drys, industrialists and agriculturalists, pro- and anti-administrationists of every political complexion, unanimously conclude that the Hoover plan for war-debt and reparation suspension has radically changed the national political picture within the last three weeks.

Of course, "the proof of the pudding is the eating thereof,, and it remains to be seen whether or not our at least temporary sacrifice of $260,-000,000, on top of an appalling treasury deficit, and lesser but still consequently sacrifices by France and other governments, will sacrifice to entice old normalcy back into our midst, but there is no doubt that the political situation has been changed, or that the change has necessitated a general rearrangement of the pre-convention campaign program of both parties and all factions.

There is no possible doubt that up to the time of President Hoover's announcement the politicans had agreed that so far as a second term was concerned, in the absence of the pulling of a Democrat bone of colossal dimensions, he was doomed. No one questioned the apparent certainty of his renomination, but all chances were against his election. Now, not only has his renomination been practically assured but no one disputes that his chances of succeeding himself have been manifoldly increased.

It is no longer to be questioned, by causual observer, political, partisan or fanatic, that the forthcoming campaign will be faught largely on economic issues, and the result depends almost wholly upon the "proof of the pudding," in other words, upon the degree to which there has been economic recovery.

Then, there's another angle. The moment one serious and vital question seems to be difinitely settled, it appears to be inevitable that a dozen or more equally serious and vital new questions are presented. Stick old paterfamilias under six feet of earth, if you will, but ther is always some orphan who bobs up with "What are you going to do with me?"

President Hoover, even in the hour of his great triumph and well-earned satisfaction, knows as well as everyone else that the year of grace which he has secured for the world must be a year of intense activity. He referred at once to the still pressing issue of disarmament. He also spoke of the urgent need that all nations address themselves with intelligence and energy to the ways and means of bringing about economic recovery. For above and beyond all these matters, there lies the certainty that steps should be taken at the earliest possible moment to bring about an agreement as to what is to be done when the moratorium ends on June 30, 1932.

Undoubtedly there are a whole lot of other angles. For one thing, it is more than interesting to note that among the outstanding Democrats who did not indorse the Hoover plan for a moratorium in war debts and reparations were Representative John N. Garner, of Texas, and Senator Joseph T. Robinsonn, of Arkansas. As everybody knows, Mr. Garner is the Democratic leader of the House and if the Democrats organize that body next session will be its Speaker. Mr. Robinson is the official floor leader of the Democratic Senators.

Senator Robinson has asserted that since the negotiations for a moratorium on international debts have been successful. President Hoover should take another step and "back-pedal on his insistence for a tariff bill," which, the Senator contended, is largely responsible for the domestic business depression.

Then, again, there's the angle of a special session of Congress. There are reasons why it seems that President Hoover would be well advised to call a special session at once to act upon the postponement of war debts, although there is no reason to believe that he will do so. Enthusiasm over his plan for the relief of Germany and the restoration of prosperity is now at its height. No doubt that Congress would just now almost unanimously approve of his proposal, but by next December, the time of the regular session, this enthusiasm may cool off. By that time a more exaggerated partisan view of what has taken place will probably exist.

Still another angle: On this coming Saturday, the first Republican to announce his candidacy for the 1932 presidential nomination, former Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland, will have launched his campaign. The Marylander is to hold a meeting at his own home, Mount Ararat Farms, near Fort Deposit, to make his first extended speech. In addition to Senator France, other speakers will be former Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, Lyell Rader of New York and Jerome Brumfield, who will act as chairman of the meeting. It is to be an outdoor meeting and arrangements are under way to take care of the crowd of 2,000 or more persons.

Naturally, no one takes seriously Senator France's candidacy, but it may be remarked that straws indicate the general direction of the wind.

The Truly Great

It is easy in the world to live after the world's opinion; it is easy in solitude to look after your own, but the great man is he who in the midst of a crowd keeps with perfect sweetness the independence of solitude.—Emerson.

Sassafras as Medicine

Sassafras roots became an important article of medicine early in American history, for in 1602, when the plant was selling for three shillings a pound, it was the object of an English expedition to Massachusetts. At this time it was frequently called the "ague" tree, as a decoction of the bark was supposed to cure the malady.

Old Stage Favorite

The theatrical career of "Fast Lynne" dates back to March 23, 1863, when it was performed at a New York theater. Tripler's hall. Clifton W. Tayleure, a Brooklyn playwright, prepared what was probably the first dramatic adaptation. Lucile Western was the first actress to play the role of Lady Isabel.

Little Use for Gold Piece

By act of congress passed April 11, 1930, the $2.50 gold piece was discontinued. The coin was discontinued because it was not desired for circulation or commercial purposes. It was used mainly as a gift during the Christmas season, and in January these coins were again returned to the vaults of the banks.

Legal Notice

The abbreviation "p. q." following a lawyer's name in a legal notice signifies "per quod" and means whereby. In this case it means the lawyer attaches his signature and the reason whereby it is official is the fact that he is a notary appointed at a certain time, giving the expiration of his term of office.

Beautiful Attic Sculpture

The so-called "Victory of Samothrace" is the "Goddess of Victory," excavated by French archeologists who were at work between 1863-67. The "Goddess of Victory" was represented by the Greeks as having wings. Her name was Nike. This statue, which was the great prize of the French archeologists, is a beautiful example of the Fourth century Attic sculpture. It was first set up by Demetrius Poliorcetes about 305 B. C.

Duties of Statesmen

"Our Government," by Garner & Capen, says that members of the cabinet cannot at the same time be members of either house of congress. They could, however, be allowed to occupy seats for the purpose of advocating or opposing the enactment of laws affecting their department and for giving explanations to congress and defending their policies against attack. This privilege could be allowed without amending the Constitution.

The Push-Cart Type

Wonder if the farmgirl hoeing Bedstraw, who made a long and exhaustive study of the "wild lettuce" that had the good sense to run around on all fours instead of crawling on their bellies, ever observed what became of babies that insist on propelling themselves around on their sitting apparatus.—Ohio State Journal.

Happiness Through Love

All the rewards of life lie with goodness; health, power, service, wisdom, knowledge, beauty, and scores of other rewards. All the penalties lie with badness; pain, anger, failure, ignorance, and hate and its brood. Love separates the sheep from the goats. Love is the divine arbiter. Love is the most powerful factor in the achievement of mankind's priactpal pursuit—happiness through service and success.—Exchange.

Highlights of Chase House

The Chase house at Annapolis, Md., was built in 1770 by Edward Lloyd. A three-story, hostile exterior in Flemish bond, it contains a monumental stair hall lighted by a Palladian window on the first landing. The carved interior detail is lavish and beautifully executed. There is a very lovely marble mantel in the parlor. It is now the Chase home for the aged.

First American Iron Works

By Walter Raleigh, searching for gold, discovered iron ore in what now is North Carolina in 1585. The first iron works was established at Falling Creek, near Richmond, Va., in 1610, by the Virginia company. Indian troubles resulted in early suspension and permanent iron works were established near Lynn, Mass., in 1643. John Winthrop, son of the famous Massachusetts governor, was the builder of the works.

GAMES IN COUNTY LEAGUE SCHEDULE HALTED BY RAIN AFTER HALFWAY MARK IS PASSED—NOT GAMES THIS WEEK

A much needed rain, that was of untold benefit to growing crops in Boone county, halted both games in the County League last Saturday afternoon. However, Old Jupe Pluve was considerate enough to permit both games to slide past the lawful limit of five innings before descending upon the playing fields at Belleview and Petersburg.

It was the opening of the second half of the league season with Petersburg and Walton starting off in a tie for first place, while Belleview and Hebron deadlocked in the second division. Petersburg was leading Hebron by a score of 4 to 1 in the last half of the sixth, while Belleview was on the short end of an 11-3 count with Walton.

Black is Hit Hard

Ben Black was on the hill for Belleview and was faced severely after an altercation with the umpire in the second inning. With the bases full and no one out Black thought he had Ross struck out, but the "umps" called the fourth ball, forcing in a run and Black was so peeved that he walked from the box. It required a lot of pursuasion to get Ben back on the hassock, but he finally acceded.

Walton opened hostilities in the first inning when Dudgeon singled with one down and advanced to third on a hit by Robinson. Norman, who was doing the pitching for Walton, hit a long fly to center, scoring Dudgeon.

This one-run lead was quickly erased by Belleview and a like lead [illegible] on Norman who was succeeded [illegible] by Mutt Rogers. Miller doubled, scoring Cook and later counted on a single by Black.

But the Belleview supremacy was short-lived, as Walton cut loose in the very next inning with a barage of singles that filled the bases with no one out. Laws, Johnson and Hartman were on by virtue of hits when Ross drew the pass that was disputed by Black. When he finally resumed his place in the box things began to break badly for him and kept on until rain put a stop to the carnage. Dudgeon was first up and was safe on an error, another run trickling over. Robinson then singled scoring two more and a second error on Glenn permitted the fifth run of this disastrous session to amble across the plate.

In the fourth Walton added another five runs. Ross and Dudgeon singled in rapid fire order and Norman hit a long fly to left which Cook dropped and lost in the weeds, Norman going all the way round behind both Ross and Dudgeon. Glenn then singled and Shearer drove one far over Rogers head in center, which also was lost in the brambles for a home run, Glenn chasing over ahead of the author of the drive.

In the Belleview half of the fifth Pope led off with a triple and was sent home on Cook's single. Mutt Rogers followed with another single. Cook, who had stopped at second, was caught at third on Miller's grounder, and Whitey Rogers ended the abbreviated contest with a fanning bee as the rain began to fall. As the last of the fifth started it was apparent that it would rain before the inning was completed, but Belleview showed good sportamanship by refusing to stall. Five minutes of effective stalling would have caused the game to be played over, as the home team was trailing and five full innings are necessary to comprise a regulation game under these circumstances.

Boehler Has Better of Braun

At Petersburg Boehler had the upper hand in a hurling duel with Braun, the Hebron boxman, altho the score does not indicate the closeness of the struggle between them.

For the first three inn gs it was "dog eat dog" with neither twirler showing any signs of giving in. In fact Braun seemed some what the tighter of the two and when Reibling, star Hebron center fielder, drove one to deep left center for a homer in the fourth it appeared that the lanky Hebron twirler might be on the way to a victory.

However, Petersburg came back in their half of the same inning and pushed over two large tallies with the aid of some loose playing by the Hebron infield. In the fifth and sixth, with Braun showing signs of weakening, they scored two more, bringing their total to four when the rain stopped hostilities.

Hebron was weakened somewhat by the absence of Bob Hafer, hard hitting infielder, and Hinges their capable catcher. Snyder, subbing for Hafer, was all there with the bat, getting two nice hits, but was at sea on short, where he committed two harmful errors before he was transferred to second base, his regular position. Stull was receiving the slants of Braun instead of Hinges.

Boehler held Hebron to four hits, while Petersburg made five off Braun. Braun walked two, while Boehler did not permit a pass in the abbreviated contest. Braun fanned four and Boehler five.

Next Saturday will find Petersburg at Walton in what should be one of the greatest and most important games of the summer, as Petersburg is the only team in the league that has handed a setback to the fast aggregation representing the Dixie highway metropolis. Belleview will go to Hebron, and needless to say, both will be struggling to win, as a defeat will leave the unfortunate team in undisputed possession of last place, while a victory will land one team or the other in a tie for second.

Save The Schedules

Due to a rush in the job printing department at the Recorder office it will be impossibe to have printed schedules out for the second half until next week, so fans are urged to clip one from this week's issue in order that they may keep posted on the movements of the four teams in the league.

Deaths

Mrs. Ada Quigley, aged 80 years, passed away Tuesday at Booth Hospital, Covington, following a major operation a few days previous.

The remains were removed to her home in Florence, where funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock by the Rev. F. B. Heibert, pastor of Hopeful Lutheran church, after which the remains were laid to rest in the I. O. O. F. cemetery at Burlington.

She is survived by her husband J. W. Quigley, and one son, Roy Batchelor, by a former marriage, besides many other relatives and friends to mourn her departure.

The pall-bearers were Linton Hempfling, Vernon Tupman, Wm. Sebree, Lee Snyder and Frank and Dolpha Sebree.

Funeral Director Philip Tallaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

AUTO MISHAP

REPORTED ON FEDERAL HIGHWAY NEAR BEAVER—NEWPORT PARTIES RECEIVE INJURIES, THOUGH ALL PROBABLY WILL RECOVER

Boone county's first serious auto accident in the month of July occurred last Sunday near the residence of Robt. Greene on the Warsaw-Florence road.

A large Packard car, driven by Charles Heringer, of 619 Linden Street, Newport, capsized and Heringer and four companions were injured. Beside Heringer in the car were Joseph Schilling, who received a broken left arm, Carl [illegible] on the head and body. All were removed to St. Elizabeth Hospital, Covington, where it was said that they would recover.

Heringer told employees at the Dixie Motor Co., Florence, that his car skidded in the slick mud that had been washed on the concrete by the heavy rains. The car, which was badly damaged, was towed to the Dixie Motor Co., for repairs.

Marriage licenses issued during the past week at the county clerk's office included: Millard Hubbard, 21, and Mary Alice Herington, 21, both of Belleview; Ertan Holcomb, 26, and Flossie Henderson, 36 both of Milan, Indiana; and Raymond C. Finke, 21, and Wilma Hendricks, 18, both of Cincinnati.

HOG FEEDERS

VISITED BY SPECIALIST FROM UNIVERSITY EXPERIMENT STATION — FEEDING FOR EARLY SEPTEMBER MARKET ADVOCATED

Mr. Grady Sellards, field agent in swine work from the College of Agriculture, spent last Wednesday with the County Agent visiting a number of hog feeders in the county. Three general plans in feeding out the spring crop were found, the full feeding for an early market, the hogging down of wheat and rye and the running of the pigs with some feed on grass until the new crop of corn.

The practice of hogging down wheat or rye can be considered a very wise one this year with the low price of grain and the cost of harvesting elliminated. Hogs fed on these grains however should have a protein supplment of either skim milk or a tankage, cotton seed and oil meal mixture. Skim milk should be fed at rate of ½ to 1 gallon per day per hog. Salt should also be fed as one pound of salt equals four bushels of corn compared with no salt. Farmers were advised not to feed on rye alone longer than 60 days, due to the anemic effect that is likely to follow if rye feeding is continued too long.

Whether one should feed their pigs just a maintenance ration depends on a number of factors which will more than likely result in a loss. Two main factors are to be considered: first it takes more feed than where the hog is full fed, and secondly hogs marketed early in September have averaged for the past twenty-one years on the Chicago market over 60 cents per hundred higher than [illegible] September. With wheat reported to be selling for 40 cents per bushel and less at the mills across the river in Indiana it will more than likely pay to full feed.

The third method of full feeding for an early September market is recommended by Mr. Sellards. Mr. S. B. Sleet, of Beaver Lick, is trying this method this year for the second time. He has 52 shoats that are being self fed a grain mixture of corn and middlings with a self fed protein mixture of 200 pounds of tankage, 100 pounds of cotton seed meal and 100 pounds of linseed oil meal. The hogs are doing fine.

The old hog feeder used to figure 10 pounds of pork per bushel of corn as a good gain. Hog feeding Practices today are more efficient. Sixteen pounds of pork on a bushel of corn and 3½ pounds of the above protein mixture is often secured where the swine sanitation program preceded the feeding program.

HIGH COW

Mr. J. W. Huey, of Union, owned the high cow on Register of Merit test in Kentucky during the month of June. The cow averaged 2.26 pounds of fat on the day tested.

The above cow is one of a number that Mr. Huey has on test at the present time.

URGES FRUIT SPRAYING

The prospect for a good peach and grape crop as well as other classes of fruit is making fruit spraying of special importance this year.

The county agent wishes to stress the importance of peach and grape sprays at this time. Brown rot on peaches and black rot on grapes cause serious damage from now until the close of the harvest season. Both of these diseases can be controlled practically 100 per cent if properly handled.

Peaches should be sprayed with a sulfur-lime (NOT lime-sulfur) mixture. The sulfur may be purchased under trade names as Drilomic or Mulsoid sulfur.

Grapes should be sprayed with 4-4-50 Bordeaux mixture to which arsenate of lead at the rates of 1 pound to 50 gallons of water.

Spray schedules are available at the county agent's office free of charge. Growers areurged not to wait until the rot starts as it is often too late at that time.

HOW'S THIS?

RECORDS SHOW SOME FARMS IN BOONE AND KENTON RETURNED PROFIT IN 1930 —THIRTY-EIGHT ARE ANALYZED

A complete analysis of thirty-eight Boone, Kenton and Campbell county farms on which complete farm account records were kept during 1930 showed that a number of these farms showed a profit even in a bad year. The operators net income varied from $2703.00 for the highest to $1650.00 loss for the lowest.

Mr. R. E. Proctor, field agent in farm management from the College of Agriculture spent last Monday and Tuesday with the county agent visiting those farmers who kept complete records last year and those who are keeping complete records this year. He pointed out the importance of considering the fact that farm earnings vary from year to year. We should know that there are years like 1921 and 1930 and that there are farms that are normally very profitable will show a loss in these years. In making plans for several years it is wise to make allowances for this fact.

Three main factors stood out as strong or weak points in last year's farm business that will stand out every year. These factors are first the control of expenses on machinery, labor and equipment, the ten higher farms spending sixty-four cents for each $1.00 received, while the lower ten spent an average of $1.34 for each $1.09 received; second, larger receipts per acre the high farm receiving an average of $34.31 per acre and the low ten $18.69 per acre; third, efficiency in feeding livestock and the receiving of larger production per unit of feed [illegible] thru more efficient [illegible], close culling, balanced rations and careful management to see that each animal is working at its best.

RED CROSS

REPORT ON PUBLIC HEALTH WORK FOR THE MONTH OF JUNE

June's report is short in days, yet as I review the things done in the first thirteen days of the month they seem of sufficient number and important enough to make those two weeks quite valuable when added to our work of a year, and we always have to view even a day's accomplishment at is relates to the whole program, in order to in anyway truly evaluate it's content.

In those first two weeks of June, I made six ttrips into Cincinnati in behalf of cases and on some of these trips, as many as three institutions were visited in behalf of as many cases.

Then on the kind consideration of the Red Cross Nursing Committee, I left Boone County on June, 14, for one weeks vacation, preparatory to going to Cleveland for the summer course in Public Health Nursing and as I write this report, I am deeply interested in this subject as it is being taught with its relation to society and its conflicts to day.

However, Public Health Nursing is going on in Boone county during my absence, for before I left, I had planned and arranged with children and parents and interested citizens, that certain individals might receive special attention, appointments were made for some, for corrections of defects and arrangements for their transportation made for this purpose. After all it is thru this activity and interest in Public Health Nursing is done, for and by the public that a real job of the things that count and which make it effective are the thing not done by the Nurse but by the people.

GRAPEVINE

REPORTS RUN THIS WEEK AND LAST, BUT ALL ARE UNFOUNDED AND UNTRUE—AS USUAL THEY FIND NO SOURCE.

Funny how some things get started. And its still funnier when one realizes that the tales that are circulated without foundation are never traceable to any particular source.

Usually the "grapevine" stories are of a damaging nature. Always they are sensational. During the past week two sensational stories gained circulation throughout this section, neither of which had one iota of foundation and no one has been able to ascertain just where and how they started.

Late last week Rev. F. E. Walker received a telephone call from Rev. Smith, of Warsaw, Gallatin county, inquiring as to the day of his son's funeral. Some one had told Rev. Smith that Rev. Walker's eldest son had been drowned. The Walker family also received numerous letters of condolence, indicating beyond question that the story had widespread circulation.

Tuesday morning the editor received the "sad" news of the death of a life-long friend, Ben Zimmer, of Ludlow. Upon inquiring about town he found that most everyone else had heard the same story. Naturally Mr. Zimmer's friends, which are legion in this section, were deeply concerned. South 5509 was called and the editor learned that instead Mr. Zimmer was much improved, thereby doing away with the disagreeable task of writing Ben's obituary. A few minutes later Mr. Zimmer's brother-in-law, Lehman Goodridge, informed the writer that a like report had been circulated in Hebron. Also the Hebron report had Mr. [illegible] the Burlington report.

If anyone of our readers still is laboring under either of these delusions let it be said that Mr. Walker's son is hale and hearty and Mr. Zimmer, though ill, is recovering steadily.

All of which reminds us of a time, just seventeen years ago, when this writer was on the receiving end of a like tale. On July 14th our mid-section came in contact with the right heel of a mule. The now "deceased" Cincinnati Commercial Tribune carried a front page story on fifteenth stating in substance that a certain "farmer boy had been mortally injured by a mule kick." Since it was a rather unusual manner in which to meet death the story was relayed by Associated Press to other papers in the country.

A college friend in a far Western state picked up a paper and read it. Needless to say when we met him at Lexington that fall he was not a little surprised to see the "ghost."

So, even the newspapers horn in on the tale-bearing, but they get the information from someone who got it somewhere else—but where?

4-H CLUBS PICNIC JULY 29TH

The Grant 4-H er's, Blue Ribbons, Norbeh Champions, X-ll-Alls, Union Boosters and Waltonians 4-H community clubs are planning for a one day outing and picnic at Split Rock, Wednesday, July 29th.

Each club will go to the picnic as a community club group. A general meeting to discuss camp, county fair and other 4-H events will be held just before the noon hour. TYING THE NATION TOGETHER

The process of tying every part of the United States to every other part of the United States by means of modern, hard-surfaced highways is going on more rapidly than ever before. It is a big program, for this is a big country. But we only have to look back a few years, to the days before the automobile to realize what tremendous progress has been made.

One would have to go a long way into the back country these days to find a main-traveled road as bad as even the average highway roads than others, but every state is there a main road that is not passable for teams in any weather? There used to be thousands of them in which wagons would be mired hub deep in the spring and defy all efforts of horses, mules and oxen to move them.

It has cost us something to build but the result has been worth the our national system of highways, cost. Some states have built more roads than others, but every state is doing its share. This year the greatest increase in highway expenditure is being made by Louisiana, with a $71,950,000 road budget for 1931 compared with about half as much last year. All told, states, counties and the Federal government are spending $259,897,000 on roads this year. That is only $15,000,000 or so more than last year. New York, naturally, is spending the most, a hundred and fifty-three millions, with Pennsylvania, second. Sixteen states are spending less on roads this year than last, 32 of them more.

One noticeable result is the greatly increased freedom of intercourse between all parts of the nation. The people of one section no longer regard those of others with suspicion, as strangers. It is probably cans have traveled farther from true that the majority of Ameritheir home communities, seen more of the rest of the world outside their local boundaries, than have any appreciable proportion of the people of any other country. That alone will, in time, make us a broader-minded, more cultured people than is to be found anywhere else.

The Family Garden

THE MEXICAN BEAN BEETLE AND OTHER MATTERS

(By John S. Gardner, Ky., College of Agriculture)

It may seem to some that talking about the bean beetle at this time is very like calling "Wolf," when there is no wolf, but it is about the bean beetle, even tho not wise to be too complaisant there is little evidence of its presence. For, there is no ground for believing that this insect will not come.

Many gardens are now showing bean beetle injury here and there, and that is the very time to begin to cope with this pest, for, the eggs are being laid. The method of control is, as everybody knows, applying a poisonious dust or spray on the undersides of the leaves now, so that when the eggs hatch there will be no delay in killing the larvae. To wait until these larvae have made growth, doing damage all the while, may be too late. At least, the job of killing them increases each day they grow.

The formula for home-mixing the dust is:

Calcium arsenate	1 pound
Sulphur	1 pound
Fine lime	4 pounds

Several ready-mixed dusts are on the market, and if they conform, in the main, with this formula, they should be effective. One pound of dust will dust from 200 to 300 feet of bean row, depending on the amount of foliage to be covered. Ten days after the first dusting, whether the beans seem to need it or not, a second application should be made. Two such applications have proven in numberless demonstrations to give adequate control.

Those gardeners who prefer to spray should use magnesium arsenate, at the rate of one tablespoonful to one gallon of water. It is not safe to use lead arsenate because of the danger of leaf-burning; nor calcium arsenate, be-a spray that will stick. For larger cause of the difficulty in making acreages, magnesium arsenate is used at the rate of 1 pound to 50 gallons of water. Fifty gallons of spray will cover an acre of beans; and one gallon, about 250 feet of row.

Many gardeners complain of the yellowing of their bean plants even though the crop is still not made. This applies more particularly to the early plantings, which it will be recalled, suffered several set backs, first from cold and more lately from dry weather. The trouble is not blight nor rust, for which the control would be spraying with bordeaux, but merely weather. The later plantings of beans, which because of warmer soil conditions, are more deeply rooted, will be able to cope with the drought, and should show no dry weather symptoms, unless the weather becomes the mid-July planting of beans is past, but not too far past to make it now, in the event it was overlooked. These are to be canning beans, and the variety should be a stringless one—Stringless Greenpod or Full Measure.

By the way, the time for making abnormally dry.

The Way of Life

By BRUCE BARTON

KILLING THE SNAKE

PAMPHLET issued by one of the big insurance companies tells us how to act in emergencies; how to revive a drowning person; how to bandage a burn; what to do for snake bite.

On this last subject there is in introductory sentence which is DON'T STOP TO KILL THE SNAKE.

The idea contained in that crisp utternace has far-flung applications. Whether any specific deed should or should not be done depends not merely upon its character but equally upon the circumstances and the time.

Years ago I interviewed Dr. John R. Mott, a great leader, and I asked him his rules for selecting executives.

"I watch a candidate for a long time before I decide," he answered. "I want to satisfy myself on two points: Does he do small things well? Does he do FIRST things FIRST?"

As he spoke I remembered a well intentioned, hard working man who was under my observation at one time. He had a most amazing capacity for doing his work in the wrong order.

He was to meet his boss one day at the Grand Central Station with tickets for Detroit. The boss arrived five minutes before train time and, telephoning to the office, found the man still at his desk. His excuse was that he was engaged on a plan which he thought might possibly double the business and he had become so engrossed in it that he had forgotten his watch.

The plan might have been all right, though it turned out not to be, but in dealing with it at the wrong time he caused the boss to miss a train and lose an order.

He was forever writing memoranda on matters outside his department, while neglecting the routine duties for which he was paid. He was usually late to the office because he had gone out of his way to make a call which he believed might be of benefit to the company.

All of his activities were inspired by a genuine desire to increase the business and so raise his own earning power. But he was a nuisance, and was finally fired.

The human race possesses all the information necessary for the successful conduct of its affairs. Many of its troubles arise because men fail to make a schedule and arrange their tasks in the order of relative importance.

The parade is held up by perfectly good people stopping to do perfectly proper things at exactly the improper time—letting the patient perish while they earnestly kill the snake.

Sunday School Lesson

CHRISTIANITY SPREADING BY PERSECUTION

Acts 7:59-8:8; 11:19-21

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Progress usually comes in connection with very hard experience. It has been so in the extension of the blessings of Christianity. The stand-pathers in the old Jerusalem church certainly made it hard for those who were trying to follow Christ's teaching. Persecution was resorted to in order to stay the progress of these humanitarian teachings which claimed the crucified and risen Lord as their Teacher. Special hatred centered upon one of the seven deacons, by the name of Stephen.

Again the Sanhedrin was summoned and Stephen was tried. When called upon to make his defense the opportunity was used to present a formal statement that reviewed the leading facts in the ministry of Jesus Christ and how He had been treated by this same Council. In bold language Stephen charged the Sanhedrin with the killing of Jesus. Soon sentence of death was given against him, also in the hope that the Cause could be stopped by destroying its able proponents.

Death was accomplished by stoning. During the slaying Stephen, like his Lord, prayed his executioners might be forgiven. A profound impression was made by all these acts on a young man named Saul, who as a member of the Sanhedrin had helped in the sentence and further assisted as caretaker of the garmentts that were laid at his feet by those who did the killing.

Such persecution forced many Christians to leaave Jerusalem, and thus the leaven of Christianity was extended over a large area and "a great number turned to the Lord."

Joe Hodge's house burned Monday night. Fortunately no one was occupying it.

Logan Chapman, a Lee county farmer, picked 40 gallons of cherries and expects to harvest 1,000 bushels of apples and a large crop of grapes.

Machinery is being installed for a milk products plant at Somerset to use a minimum of 20,000 pounds of milk daily.

O. E. Van Cleave of the American Jersey Cattle Club predicts that Marion county will become a leading center for the production of good dairy cattle.

Principal Or Interest?

We believe a depositor is more interested in the safety of his principal rather than a PROMISE of high income return.

For that reason this bank joins with the banks of Boone County and the banks of our neighboring Counties in announcing

A Safe and Conservative Rate of 3% ON TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITS on and after August 1st., 1931

When money rates were high in the open market and City correspondents were able to allow a high rate on daily balances, banks could afford to pay 4% on Time and Savings Deposits. With these rates considerably reduced and it being no longer profitable to make investments that will return a profit on 4% money, we think it a sound and conservative move on the part of the Bankers to pay a rate of interest that will enable the banks to continue a sound banking policy.

We will appreciate having our friends call in and discuss any matter of business with us.

BURLINGTON, KY.

Announcing---

A New Interest Rate

On Time and Savings Deposits

The following banks of Boone County announce that

In The Interest Of Sound Conservative Banking

They will follow the action of the banks of Cincinnati, Covington, and generally throughout the United States in adjusting interest rates. The interest rate on Time and Savings Deposits will be

3% Per Annum

Beginning August 1st, 1931

This new rate will apply to all new or renewal Time Certificates issued on and after August 1, 1931. All Time Certificates will be permitted to mature at the old rate. Interest on Savings Deposits will be calculated at the old rate to the next interest paying period except that any Deposits made on and after August 1, will be calculated at 3%.

THE BANKS WILL CONTINUE TO PAY THE TAXES --AT THE PRESENT RATE--ON ALL DEPOSITS

This action in adjusting the interest rate on deposits is made necessary because of the lessened earning power of money.

The banks warmly appreciate the patronage of their thousands of depositors and feel confident that their adherence to sound banking principles will meet with full approval.

Interest will be payable semi-annually instead of annually at the option of the depositor.

POINT PLEASANT

(Too Late for Last Week)

The Drill team of Sunshine Council No. 97, D. of A., Bromley, Ky. gave a surprise on Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Armstrong at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Gross on Wednesday evening July 9th. Those enjoying the happy event were: Mrs. Carrie Seals, Miss Effie, Bra Butler, Daisy Marsh, Gladys Willoughby and daughter, Ester White, Kate Highouse, Emma Tanner, Fanny Beamers, Kate Turner, Alice Murphy, Lillian McDonald, Mary Moss, Laura Symmes, Molly Gardiner, Mr. and Mrs. James Hooper and daughter. The team presented Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong with a beautiful set of dishes. After refreshments were served, everyone left for their homes, reporting a good time and wishing Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong many years of happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gross and Mr. and Mrs. A. Armstrong entertained Sunday afternoon and evening, Mr. and Mrs. E. O'Donnell of Sedamsville, Mr. and Mrs. D. Strain and daughter, Helen, of Price Hill, and Robert Beach of Independence.

MORE EGGS FROM FEWER HENS ON KENTUCKY FARMS

Thah Kentucky poultry raisers are rapidly becoming more efficient is indicated by the fact that 15 percent fewer chickens produced 28 percent more eggs in 1929 than in 1919. Census figures show that the 10,477,598 chickens on farms in the state in 1919 produced 42,224,720 dozen eggs, while 8,919,683 chicens on farms in 1929 laid 53,960,601 dozen eggs.

While adopting practices that increased the egg production per hen, Kentucky farmers at the same time sold 60 percent more live or dressed chickens in 1929 than they did in 1919, sales increased from 3,713,172 birds to 5,963,132.

"Census figures clearly point to the increased efficiency of Kentucky poultry farmers," declared Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry work at the College of Agriculture and Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky. "The increase in production from fewer hens resulted largely from closer culling and improved breeding and feeding practices. The yield per hen in this way has been materially increased.

"The mere keeping of any certain number of chickens is no index to profits. It is rather the yield per hen that determines the returns from the flock.

"Each year during the past 10-year period from 100 to 500 Kentucky farmers keeping flock records have demonstrated that it is possible to make money from poultry where efficient methods are practiced, in poor as well as in good years.

DELAYED TOPPING, CLOSE... ... SUCKERING BEST PRACTICE

Experiments made at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky indicate that, considering both yield and quality, topping followed by close suckering gives the most profitable results with layed until all the plants had bloomed and a few pods had developed on the seedheads. Suckers were kept closely pulled until harvest time.

The color and body of White Burley leaf are influenced by the practices followed in handling the crop after the flower bud appears. The practice usually followed in the past was too top the plants as soon to 20 leaves depending upon the vi- to 20 leaves, depending upon th vigor of the plant, weather conditions and the like. Suckers were kept closely pulled. This method of handling, still followed by many growers, tends to cause the development of large, thick leaves which may not be very colory, especially in certain seasons and on some kind of soil.

Higher topping usually results in the production of thinner, brighter leaf of less size and weight. Allowing suckers to grow to a large size before pulling has the same tendency. In recent years, suckering practices intended primarily to reduce labor have been extensively adopted. Unquestionably these practices often reduce yields, but give higher quality of leaf. It is the opinion of many growers that the reduced cost of production and the higher prices received for the leaf more than compensate for the reduction in yield. It is probably impossible to obtain the highest quality of leaf and the highest yield at the same time. Leaves with heavy body, necessary for heavy yield, do not cure as bright as thin leaves.

MANY SOW ALFALFA GRASSES IN SUMMER

Late summer seeding of alfalfa, grasses and clover on a specially prepared seed-bed or following early cut tobacco or a soybean crop, is a dependable method when the work is done carefully, says a circular published by the College of Agriculture, University of Ky., on the subject, "Practices in Seeding Meadows and Pasture Crops." No nonpasture grain crop should be used.

A large number of alfalfa growers regard summer as the best time to sow this crop. When ground has to be plowed and fitted, summer seeding has become an expensive method. Good judgment is required to decide when soil conditions are favorable for sowing, and how deep to cover the seeds. However, weed competition is avoided, and, with clover, certain diseases that attack the crop when spring-sown are less troublesome.

In Kentucky, summer seeding should be be done from August 1 to 20. Perhaps the best practice is to sow very shallow when the surface is dry; then the first shower will bring up the crop.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University extension studios of W-H-A-S the week of July 27th. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

July 27—Making the most out of farm labor, R. E. Proctor.

Cull the laying flock, W. M. Insko.

July 29—Selecting the breeding ewes, L. J. Horlacher.

Taking advantage of our fruit crop, A. J. Olney.

July 31—What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

COLLEGE MEN HELP REORGANIZE FARM

The reorganization of a 100-acre Kentucky farm according to college men's ideas of modern farming is discussed in a bulletin of the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky, entitled, "The Budget Method of Improving Farm Organization and Management."

Limestone and superphosphate were prescribed for the land, so that legumes could be included in the crop rotation. This resulted in better yields and improved quality of hay and pasture, and reduced the cost of producing feeds.

Livestock reorganization plans called for more milk cows, because of the operator's skill in dairying, and also because more cows would give employment for other members of the family.

For this size and type of farm it was considered advisable to limit the acreage of corn, relative to the amount of hay and pasture. The number of hogs commonly raised, therefore, was reduced.

The reorganization of the farm is being worked out over a period which would make it advantageous to keep cows rather than hogs of years, with careful consideration given each step. One field a year is being treated with limestone and phosphate. Shifts are being made gradually as the plans develop. Expansion in the dairy herd is being brought about principally by saving good heifers, rather than by buying expensive cows.

Although still incomplete, the reorganization already is showing profitable results, according to the authors of the bulletin.

WATER FROM MANY WELLS CONTAMINATED

More than half of the samples of water from 3,085 wells analyzed in the Public Service Laboratories at the Experimenit Station, University of Kentucky, last year showed evidence of contamination. Since thewell is the most important source of the home water supply in Kentucky, this indicates a dangerous situation, and each home owner should make certain that his water supply is pure.

In addition to testing the water in the well for purity at its underground source it is necessary to protect the wall against seepage through the sides and the entrance of filth and surface drainage thru a poor cover. It is probably true that the safety of a well depends upon no other single factor to so great an extent as upon the nature of the curbing or casing used. This factor is especially important in the case of dug wells and other kinds of shallow wells for it is in these wells that most of the cases of pollution occur.

Old Theory Upset

The generally accepted opinion that every young child needs a long afternoon nap is not upheld by a recent investigation, in which the children who took half-hour naps kept as fit as those who regularly slept more than two hours

Great Pyramids' Stone

The Egyptian pyramids were built of a hard, rough-hewn limestone, but large blocks of granite were also used, especially on the outside. The stone was taken from quarries in the cliffs which line the Nile valley in its lower reaches.

Chicago's Time of Agony

The great fire in Chicago October, 1871, destroyed 18,000 buildings with an estimated loss of $200,000,000.

WASHINGTON SNAPSHOTS

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and United States Senator Robert F. Wagner warned industrial leaders and governmental authorities of the country in addresses here at the convention of the International Longshoremen's Union that there must be no slashing of wages in the present depression if economic disaster is to be avoided. Mr. Green said his organization would stand against any general tendency toward cuts "like the Greeks at Thermopylae." He called upon President Hoover to summon a conference of industry, finance and labor, "for the purpose of insuring to those at work a continuance of their jobs and making provision for the unemployed."

* * * * * *

President Hoover's challenge to speculators to put patriotism above profit and cease short selling in the economic emergency is expected to be followed by further steps to check the practice unless the response should be satisfactory to the Administration. For the moment, however, it cannot be found that the Department of Justice contemplates prosecutions. To sustain criminal action the government must be in a position to make out a strong case of "manipulation" or "conspiracy," it was explained, for there is nothing in the grain futures act that gives the Department of Agriculture authority to proceed against speculators as such.

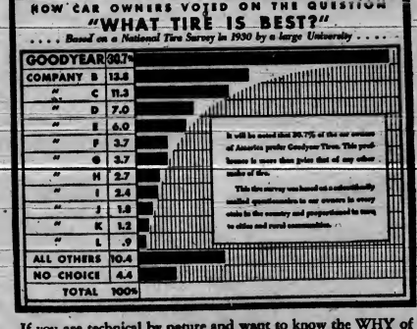
20 Million Motorists can't be wrong!

WHAT is the best tire made?

After all, conversation aside, that's what you really want to know, isn't it? For with rubber prices where they are today, you certainly can afford to buy the best.

It's natural, of course, that every tire manufacturer should try to convince you his tire is best.



But if you want to cut through a welter of words to get the real low-down, listen to the 20 million car owners of the country.

They give the palm to Goodyear.

For 16 consecutive years it has been true that "More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind."

Moreover through an impartial institution, in no way connected with the rubber industry, 205,000 car owners were asked this point-blank question:

QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

If you are technical by nature and want to know the WHY of Goodyear superiority, call and let us demonstrate. We can quickly dispel your last vestige of doubt.

And best of all, we give you good news on prices. A few of which we quote here.

IT WILL PAY YOU TO BUY THE LEADING MAKE OF TIRE

Increasing Government Cost Growing Burden To Taxpayers

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Heimes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Every newly-elected member of Congress comes to Washington overloaded with what are too often considered by him obligations to hungry constituents seeking seats at the government pie counter. Every congressional holdover and veteran is the subject of constant importuning for like favors, too often by those who cannot—or will not—make a living at home and want to get on Uncle Sam's pay roll.

In private business, when there is no longer any work for a clerk to do, he is dismissed. Under any other sytem there would not long be any business. In the administration of government, however, when work is slack, as a rule the surplus clerks' jobs become sinecures; to discharge the unneeded workers would invite congressional protest, and every department of the government exists by virtue of congressional appropriation. Furthermore, some provision must be made for at least a part of the horde of congressionally-backed job hunters which descends upon Washington after each election—and to a lesser degree in between elections.

Without going into the matter of the growing generosity of spenders of other people's money in unwise charitable projects, indulgence in paternalism, in speculation, in wise and unwise governmental encroachment upon private business enterprise, thru the growth of its pay rolls alone the cost of government is increasing at an ominous rate. Ignoring the correspondingly increasing cost of State, county and municipal governments, it does not require a skilled mathematician to figure out that unless there is a halt before long one-tenth of the population of the United States will be supporting the other nine-tenths. However, it is perfectly safe to say that government would have ceased to exist long before such ratio could be reached.

Take the Census Bureau, for example. It is a permanent institution the work of which is largely of a perfunctory character for from eight to nine years out of each ten. Every tenth year, however, when the census is taken, nearly 6,000 extra clerks must be employed. In accepting these positions, the new employees know very well and fully understood that the employment is temporary and ends when the work is completed. Yet as the actual taking and recording of the census is gradually brought to conclusion, every mother's son and daughter of them fights to the last ditch, pulling every possible political string, to prevent retirement, well aware that there is no longer any work to be done.

Undersecretary Ogden Mills, when he reported on the government's deficit some time ago, set forth two principal reasons: exceptionally large financial drains resulting from unusual conditions, and curtailed income because of business depression. Now come reports from the Census Bureau on governmentts. The figures emphasize the unceasing demand for more and better service by the governmnet, more public projects, more governmental assistance. All these things cost money, and that money can come but from one source—the taxpayer. He meekly submits to a grossly exaggerated pay roll and then mixes up his howl about taxes with demands for more and better governmental service, new and extraordinarily expensive projects and more governmental assistance.

Then comes the Hoover moratorium pronouncement, in its present form not yet meeting with unanimous international approval but likely to be accepted in substance within a short time. The proposed postponement of war debts and repreations will mean, among other things, this government's sacrifice during a period of depression of an income of about $260,000,000. Manifestly this amount must be made up from some other source. What source? The taxpayer, of course. No wonder so many of them, without time for more than superficial analysis, are criticizing President Hoover for going in the relief of Germany when so much in the way of relief is directly needed at home.

Of course, it was inevitable that this criticism should be heard. The President must have known this when he decided to submit a proposition for the postponement of payments of war debts to this country. The fact that it did not deter him from taking the course that seemed to him best, not only for the rest of the world but for this country, shows how bold was his offer to Europe.

Mr. Hoover says on the theory, based on long experience, that if you remove the causes of business depression abnormal unemployment will automatically cease. He has emphasized the difference between the reputable, conscientious physician and the quack. He is like the doctor who insists upon treating the disease and not its symptoms. The patient cannot sleep and the doctor says that he has a digestive disturbance that will yield gradually to a strict dietary. The patient dislikes the diet and still suffers from insomnia. Therefore, of course, the doctor is no good.

One of the factors prolonging the depression was the fear of a collapse in Germany with grave political and financial consequences for all of Europe and indirectly for this country. If the worst fears about Germany were realized, there was no telling where this depression would end. The best of minds had agreed that the mere postponement of payments and reparations would remove the worst apprehension that hung over the business world. So Mr. Hoover set about doing the one thing he could do to eliminate one of the causes—possibly the outstanding cause—of the depression.

So great was the faith everywhere that the President's offer would meet with approval and acceptance that immediately upon its promulgation talk of a special session of Congress was revived. Reasons were given why he would be well advised in calling an extra session at once to act upon the postponement of war debts, altho there is nothing to indicate that he has any intention of doing so. Just now enthusiasm over his plan for the relief of Germany is at its height. If Congress were now in session, there is little doubt that it would almost unanimously vote its approval of the President's proposal. But, unfortunately, enthusiasm is invariably short lived, and by the time the next regular session of Congress convenes, in December, a more partisan spirit will have developed and approval delayed, to say the least.

Debt payments to this country fall due on December 15. Manifestly a law authorizing postponement of these payments would have to be passed before that date. As Congress convenes on December 7, there would be only eight days in which to enact the necessary legislation, and there is every indication that the House will not be able to organize within the first week of the session, let alone pass any laws. If the division between the two major parties remains unchanged, the fight over the speakership will be prolonged, as it doubtless will in any case unless the Democrats should gain a seat or two. It is assumed as a matter of course that there is no opposition witthin his party to Mr. Garner, of Texas, as Speaker.

At this writing, the good ship Moratorium is still not clear of dangerous reefs. If not wrecked, and once in deep water, it would seem that a special session about November 1 is inevitable to provide time for the selection of a Speaker and allow for the usual delays that attend the passage of legislation in the Senate. The President's aversion to a special session this summer is well known, but there would appear to be little doubt that he will be forced to call one some time this fall.

Days of the Week

The week consisting of seven days is a unit of time which dates from prehistoric antiquity. Each of the seven days corresponds to one of the seven moving heavenly bodies then known. Sunday and Monday are named after the sun and moon; Tuesday was named for Mars (Tues in Norse) day; Wednesday, Mercury's (Wodan's) day; Thursday, Jupiter's (Thor's) day; Friday, Venus' (Freia's) day, and Saturday, Saturn's day.

PLANS TO BEAT UNEMPLOYMENT

By ROBB C. STEPHENSON
President American Bankers Association

Some look upon unemployment as a social or political problem. For them the remedy is compulsory accumulation of reserve funds on the insurance principle through contributions from the government, the employers, the employees or all three. That will not meet the present emergency, since these reserve funds have not been built up and it would take years to do so. At best this plan could only become effective at some indefinite time in the future as against the return of another catastrophe of general unemployment. Others look upon unemployment as purely an economic problem, holding that the only fundamental preventive is in business stability.

R. C. STEPHENSON

It may well be asked whether either of these cures—namely, the creation of unemployment insurance funds on the one hand or the maintenance of everlasting business stability on the other—do not present in themselves bigger problems than the problems they seek to cure. However I am inclined to the belief that the more practical approach to the solution of such problems and the prevention of such situations as general unemployment presents is along the latter lines of economic foresight rather than along lines of legislation.

National Foresight

Economic foresight is conceivable not only for the individual but for business as a whole. Millions of individuals and virtually all lines of industry failed to practice it during the last stages of the recent prosperity.

The public welfare of the United States demands that industry as a whole vigorously and sincerely devote itself to the development of plans of economic foresight, aimed to prevent repetitions of the present unemployment situation. The general outlines for such plans are clearly definable. They demand that industry adopt a long range viewpoint and lay out its production and distribution plans with the thought that it is far better to have a long period of good sound business activity than a short period of frantically over-competitive endeavor. This would tend to lessen over-production in various lines, to prevent over-expansion of plant capacity, to avoid over-stimulation of public buying and above all to avoid periods of slumps and stagnation following periods of over-stimulation with their disasters of unemployment.

For business, too, there is a part in such a conception of economic foresight. It should aim to cooperate with industry in its endeavor to avoid reckless over-production, over-stocking and over-selling the public.

In this picture of national economic prudence, banking and finance, too, have their place. Their effort should be to influence the use of credit and other financial facilities into channels of sound public economy consistent with the attitude I have already sketched for industry and trade. All finance, whether current commercial banking or industrial investment banking, should seek by their influence in granting or witholding credit to stimulate and build up a balanced economic situation.

The Individual Must Help

Finally, the individual too has a place in any such plan of a sounder economic future for the United States. It is the duty of the individual to make every effort to take care of himself and provide for himself. Neither government nor industry can do that for him. They can give him the opportunity to succeed but they can't succeed for him. He must out of his own initiative and effort earn and create his own means and defenses against the requirements and contingencies of life.

Individual determination to provide against sickness, accident and death by insurance before indulgences in extra comforts and luxuries are given place in the family budget, and individual responsibility to guard against the contingency of unemployment by means of a sound program of thrift and savings are to my mind the true foundation of economic stability for the United States as a whole.

A limestone spreader, owned by a bank in Illinois is rented out to farmers for ten cents a ton, and also a phosphate spreader at five cents a ton. The "limestone project" was the principal contribution of the bank to banker-farmer work, during 1930, and was carried on in cooperation with the Farm Bureau. A man trained in the testing of soil, and in the making of soil maps was employed by the bank. The unit maps used covered forty acres, on which 23 surface tests were made at mathematical points. At five other points three tests were made—surface, sub-surface, and sub-soil. The completed map showed, by varying shadings of red, the points which needed limestone. Arrangements were also made by the bank to have limestone shipped in in car lots for sale to farmers in any quantities needed.

CHICK VACCINATE TO CHECK CONSUMPTION

Consumption chicken pox vaccine is used for the prevention of chicken pox, according to the department of animal pathology of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. This is sometimes called the follicle method of vaccination. A few feathers are plucked from the front part of the leg and the vaccine is rubbed in with a camel's hair brush. Persons using the vaccine should not handle the birds as they may infect other parts of the bird and a generalized case of chickenpox result. Healthy birds in good condition, free from coccidiosis and worms, and less than 14 weeks old, are the best subjects for vaccination. The vaccination of laying hens and pullets with cutaneous chickenpox vaccine may cause a severe reaction, resulting in a heavy loss in egg production. Vaccination is not recommended in flocks in which chickenpox has already appeared.

Taylor county's wheat crop is the best in years. Much of the grain was so heavy as to make it difficult to harvest.

Fulton county farmers sold more and better lambs than in years. Increase in lamb raising and more alfalfa and other legume crops are a part of the county's diversification program.

County agent H. S. Patterson of Grayson county delivered three addresses on poultry raising at the annual short course for poultry raisers at the College of Agriculture at Lexington.

Butler county red clover grown on limed land will yield three times as much as clover grown on unlimed land.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years, I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

From Our Early Files

THIRTY YEARS AGO

The dry, hot weather that has prevailed here during this month is now quite a serious matter to the farmers. The idea of anything like a full crop of corn is now abandoned and many fields look like a total failure. With the exception of one or two neighborhoods there has been no rain of any consequence this month, while intense heat has prevailed all of the time. July 1901 will go down in history as a record breaker for excessively hot and dry weather.

Kirb Conner's furniture passed thru town one day last week to Erlanger, his future home.

Spreading adders are so plentiful out on J. J. Berkshire's farm that he is wearing boots for protection.

Jasper Sullivan, of McVille, was in town Saturday. He said corn was badly in need of rain, and that the potato crop is nearly a failure. Oats good, hay pretty fair.

Hubert Gaines brought his trotter home from Oakley last Saturday. Johnnie Duncan has been training it and gave it better than a 2:30 gait. We hope that Hubert will realize a handsome sum for the animal.

At 12:30 Monday the thermometers in this county, so far as we could learn by telephone, registered as follows: Limaburg, 106; Florence 99; Union 100; Hebron 106; Petersburg 106; Idlewild, 110; Burlington 106; and by 2 p. m., the thermometers had reached 110 at Limaburg, 106 at Florence; 107 at Hume's Store; 110 at Union; 104 at Verona; 102 at Walton; 108 at Burlington; 106 at Bullittsville; 109 at Petersburg, and 112 at Idlewild.

Our friend Edgar Riley and company of Bullittsville, attended church here Sunday.

Elder Edgar Jones preached two masterly sermons to large crowds here Sunday.

There was a riot of considerable dimensions down at Coney last Sunday. Several of the participants bear marks of the sport. The disorder was quelled before the entire police force was called to the scene.

There has recently been added to our population several families whose conduct si outrageous. It is very strange that our good citizens will put up with the behavior of which these new comers are guilty.

MOUNDFIELD FARM

R. L. Bradford entertained a number of his friends at Moundfield Park last Friday evening with his wonderful phonograph. Fifty odd records were rendered and were enjoyed very much. A substantial lunch, consisting of green apples and lemonade, was served during the entertainment.

We are proud to announce the fact that Hebron has added another valuable industry to her already long list of improvements. This is her hotel accomodations recently h opened to the public by mine host, Ed. Ernst. Travelers and tourists will find him a genial and accomodating landlord who will endeavor to make everything as homelike as possible.

The grass has been in excellent condition for the stock all summer. The rains have kept it green and thrifty.

Gen. P. W. Hardin is advertised to speak at Walton on the 1st of August. Several other distinguished speakers will be present.

The case of the Commonwealth against Vince Ross for cutting young Roberts at Big Bone on the fourth of this month was tried before Esquire John H. Slater last Thursday. Roberts was on hand and testified but the jury found the defendant not guilty, considering the cutting done in self-defense. S. W. Tolin represented the Commonwealth and G. O. Hughes represented the defendant. Quite a crowd was on hand for the trial. The other parties for whom warrants had been issued were not apprehended.

The blackberry wagons are hauling large quantities of the fruit from this part of the county. Fritz Zimmer, of Constance, seems to be the principal merchant in that line.

H. C. Lassing Jr., brought a large trunk and box to town with him one day last week and those who saw him unload the wagon in which they came at once concluded that he had come to stay. There is plenty of room here for such young men as Henry.

The Burlington and Belleview base ball teams played here last Saturday afternoon. For about six innings it was a very nice game, but after that there was considerable loose playing done, and the score allowed to increase beyond reason. Some very creditable plays were made by each club during the first innings. At the conclusion the score stood at 15 to 5 in favor of Burlington. Next Saturday afternoon a picked nine from Burlington and Belleview will play the Covington Stars at this place.

Capt. Chas. Kottmyer, of Constance, called in to see us Monday morning. The captain was going lame in one foot, having fallen out of a coal barge a few days ago, mashing it considerably. He says he used to get about by main strength and awkwardness, but now he is getting about by awkwardness only.

PETERSBURG

The Petersburg team crossed batswith another one of Aurora's teams last Saturday and defeated them by a score of 7-3. It was a pitchers battle. The home club will meet the Williamson club, of McVille, here next Saturday.

The rain last week damaged the Burlington and Belleview pike from $300.00 to $500.00. The road and bridges were in such bad condition that the company collected no toll on Friday.

PLATTSBURG

Damage to the Woolper pike by the lat erains will amount to about $500.00.

One of the heaviest wind and rain storms that ever visited this neighborhood passed over here last Thursday evening. The rain fell in torrents for about one hour and a half, the low lands on Woolper and Ashby Fork were overflowed and the growing crops destroyed. Geo. Voshell lost five acres of corn, J. A. Tolin four acres, O. Snyder eight acres, Henry Miller 4 acres, and Henry Sullivan one acre of tobacco and all his garden. Henry Snyder had two cows killed by lightning during the storm.

HEBRON

Conner and Walton, candidates for the Legislature, spoke to about twenty-five men and as many boys here last Saturday.

COUNTY BOARD BUYS BUSSES

The Boone County School Board composed of Supt. D. H. Norris and Messrs. Hubert Conner, Mark Cook, Geo. Walton, Roy Kenney, and Kenneth Stephens were in session until the midnight hour Tuesday entertaining bids on new school busses to be used in transporting students to and from consolidated schools in the county this winter.

The board had announced its intention of purchasing six busses and as a consequence received some very low figures, the lowest and successful bidders being Collins and Vest, of Walton, with Chevrolet, C. W. Myers, of Florence, with Ford, and W. W. Woodward, of Devon, with Willys. Other bidders were C. D. Seller Motor Car Co., represented by David Castleman and Francis Kenney, with Dodge, Dempsey Motor Car Company, Erlanger, represented by Robert Gaines, with Studebaker, H. D. Green, Rising Sun, and a Ludlow concern, both Ford, and Donald Dila, of Aurora, Ind., factory representative for International.

After a lengthy discussion the board was unable to agree upon a purchase of a fleet of six from any one bidder and finally reached a compromise agreement by which two each were bought from Myers, Collins and Vest and Woodward.

Six bodies were purchased from the Wayne Body Company.

Boone Post Members Signally Honored By Convention Body

J. P. BROTHERS, OF LIMABURG, NAMED SERGEANT-AT-ARMS WHILE B. H. RILEY, WILLIAM DOYLE, AND C. L. CROPPER ARE GIVEN IMPORTANT COMMITTEE ASSIGNMENTS

Twenty members of Boone Post No. 4, American Legion, took part in the mammoth parade of the thirteenth annual convention of Kentucky legionnaires at Lexington Monday. Boone Post gained state wide notice when three members of the post drew general attention and applause from the onlookers when their representation and interpretation of the "Spirit of 76" went over with a bang. The Lexington Herald of Tuesday morning also recorded recognition of their part in the parade.

J. P. Brothers, of Limaburg, and a member of Boone Post, was accorded the distinction of being appointed the sergeant-at-arms for the convention. Mr. Brothers is a loyal legionnaire and deserving of the honor bestowed upon him.

Only three men from each district are named in the personnel of the various committees and Boone county men landed on three of the committees. B. H. Riley was named as a member of the committee on Legislation; C. L. Cropper on the Finance committee; and William Doyle on Rehabilitation.

Former Sheriff L. T. Utz was succeeded as Sixth District Committeeman by Judge F. A. Harrison, of Williamstown.

The Sixth District was fifth in district membership.

Deaths

B. C. TANNER DEAD

B. C. Tanner, aged 94 years passed away Saturday morning at his home in Florence, after an illness of five months.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Francis Tanner, one daughter Mrs. L. P. Aylor, and one son L. T. Tanner, of Savannah, Ga., besides eight grand-children and 15 great-grand-children, as well as a host of other relatives and friends.

Funeral services were conducted at the Hopeful Lutheran church Monday at 2:30 o'clock, by the Rev. F. B. Helbert, pastor. Mr. Tanner had been a member of this church for many, many years. In his younger days he was a church officer and taught a class in the Sunday school.

The pall-bearers were six grandsons Shelly, Stanley, Guy, Harold, Lewellen, and Robert Aylor.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Miss Jennie Campbell Dies at New Castle Tuesday

After a brief illness Miss Jennie Campbell passed quietly over the borderland into that better world, her death occuring at the home of her niece, Mrs. Clarence Harrison, in New Castle, at 9:15 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Miss Campbell, previous Miss Campbell was taken from one room to another, and suffered a severe fracture of her right hip bone. So serious was the injury that no attempt was made to set the bone, her advanced age making her condition extremely precarious. However, she was not considered in immediate danger, and the news of her death came as a distinct shock to her many friends in Carrollton.

Miss Campbell was born in Burlington, Ky, the daughter of the late John O. and Emily Rogers Campbell. In 1884 she and her mother came to this city to make their home with her sister, the late Mrs. J. E. Gullion, after the latter's death spending the remainder of her life with her niece, Mrs. Harrison.

Although Miss Campbell never enjoyed good health and many times had been so seriously ill her life was despaired of, yet she was always patient and cheerful. During her many years of semi-invalidism, she was the object of tender solicitude on the part of her niece, who was unceasing in her efforts to make life as comfortable and happy for her as it was possible to be. Miss Campbell's death fell on the fifth anniversary of the death of Mrs. Harrison's father, just as the daughter was preparing to come to Carrollton to place flowers on his last resting place.

Brief funeral services were held this morning at 9:30 o'clock at the Harrison residence, after which the body will be brought to Carrollton for burial in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery.—The Carrollton News-Democrat.

BURLINGTON P. T. A. TO MEET

Regular meeting of Burlington P. T. A. will be held at the school auditorium Tuesday evening August 4th, at 7:30. All members will please be present.

Anyone wishing to bid on managing the kitchen for the coming term of school send bids to Mrs. L. A. Conner not later than August 4th.

PUBLICITY CHAIRMAN

Mrs. Lillian Presser spent Sunday with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Louden, near Waterloo.

The blackberry crop is abundant in some localities in the county, while in others there are none.

E. A. Martin recently threshed 448 bushels of wheat off 11 acres of ground for Hubert Conner, of Hebron. This is the largest yield of grain reported to this office in many years.

REVAMPING

OF BELLEVIEW TEAM SHOWS GOOD RESULTS IN HEBRON GAME — ROGERS TWIRLS A GREAT GAME, WHILE BRAUN GOES FINE UNTIL LATER INNINGS.

The greatly strengthened Belleview club journeyed to Hebron last Saturday afternoon and defeated the home team there by a 5 to 1 score.

Bill Rogers and Braun engaged in one of the prettiest hurling duels of the season until the 8th when Braun weakened slightly and it was just too bad. Taken from all angles the fans were treated to one of the very best games of the season.

Two Rabbit Hash players of well known ability have been added to the Belleview roster in the persons of Leslie Ryle, who was at shortstop Saturday, and Stephens, the hard throwing catcher, who was a bulwark on both offense and defense for the Rabbit Hash club.

Wilson and Reibling were the hitting stars for Hebron, while Cook and Miller occupied the offense spotlight for Belleview, each of the quartet accounting for two blows. Reibling and Cook were the authors of home runs, the former's drive being one of the most peculiar circuit swats known to the pastime. Reibling had doubled his first time up and the second time had been passed intentionally. But when he came up in the sixth Ryle came in from short and told Rogers to pitch to the gentleman. Mr. Rogers complied and Less almost lost a shin when Reibling shot one down his way that bounced off his leg and evaded "Hop" Clore in left field for the circuit. In the eighth Mr. Reibling [illegible] Rogers [illegible] and other pals of the circuit.

Both teams went scoreless until the sixth when Bill Rogers walked and Cook came thru with a single and was followed by another pass to Whitey Rogers, filling the bases. Miller then dropped a fly back of short, which was so nearly handled by Aylor that only one run scored. Cook and Whitey Rogers, however, ran wild and both were trapped for a double killing on the same play, retiring the side with only one run. Hebron then drew alongside in their half on Reibling's homer through short.

The deadlock continued at one-up until the eighth. Braun opened this fatal session by walking the first man up and Cook followed this move by dropping a long one over the fence in right center for the round trip. Whitey Rogers singled and Braun's error gave Miller a life. Less Ryle then chose this moment as the opportune one to deliver his only hit of the game, house in left-center, which sent both Rogers and Miller home. Braun then settled to retire the side without permitting Ryle to score, but the damage was done and the game was over.

Each pitcher allowed seven hits, while Rogers walked two as compared to four passes handed out by Braun. The latter, however, fanned eleven men, while Rogers set back seven on strikes.

The Hebron boys claim that Belleview presented the strongest lineup Saturday that has appeared on their lot this season, but at that about. Belleview will have their they gave them plenty to think work cut out for them next Saturday when they trot out on the Petersburg pasture to hook up with Boehler and company. Both teams are going at a fast clip with pennants bees buzzing in their respective bonnets. That it will be a battle royal is conceded.

DIAMOND JUBILEE

Members of St. Paul's church at Florence will join their pastor, Rev. Herbert J. Egbring, in a diamond jubilee picnic to be held at the church next Saturday. It will be just ten years since Rev. Egbring took charge as pastor at Florence.

Since the day Rev. Egbring came to Florence many changes have been wrought in the church and congregation. The church now enjoys all modern conveniences, while a new school and auditorium have been built. The congregation has hsown a rapid and constant growth, now having 80 families, or a total of 375 members, whereas ten years ago there were but 50 families in the church circle.

CAMP ERNST

WILL BE GATHERING PLACE FOR OVER 100 NORTHERN KY., 4-H CLUB MEMBERS DURING WEEK OF AUGUST 11TH—CAMP OFFICIALS ARE MAKING PLANS.

Camp Ernst officials are making plans for a big 4-H Club Camp to be held on Gunpowder during the week of August 11th to the 15th. More than 100 Northern Kentucky farm boys and girls who are members of 4-H clubs have their project work up-to-date are expected to attend.

The camp grounds have been greatly improved the past year under the supervision of Mr. Wade, the camp manager who will be in charge of the supplies for the 4-H camp. An open air church for the evening vesper services has been constructed. A log hut and special Indian war war council grounds have been prepared for special services. The swimming pool instruction is of the best, the water is tested at regular intervals and best of all Mr. Wade says that the cooks can really put the camp food up in first-class shape.

All in all Boone county club members will have one of the best camp sites in Kentucky this year. The instruction program will be under the supervision of Mr. E. E. Fish, club specialist from the College of Agriculture assisted by project specialists, northern Kentucky county agents and adult community club leaders.

A full camp program will be carried out each day of camp. The morning program is devoted to a high type of farm and home economics instruction while the afternoon and evening program is devoted [illegible] of Head, Health, Heart and Hand will be put forward in all events in camp. The members who display outstanding 4-H character will receive awards of honor at the close of camp.

Judge J. M. Lassing arrived at his home here from St. Petersburg, Florida, last Sunday for a belated summer vacation. Business matters required Judge Lassing's presence in the Peninsula state longer than has been his custom in past years. The Judge's legion of friends thruout Boone county will be pleased to learn that he is in splendid health and appears to be as active and energetic as ever.

DIVER DROWNED

Portsmouth, Ohio, July 28—The body of Forest Riddle, 35 years old, Hebron Boone County, a diver, floated to the surface of the Ohio River today an hour after he had been trapped by the fouling of an air line when repairing wickets at Dam 31, four miles below Portsmouth.

Fellow workmen tried frantically to extricate him but to no avail.

A life-saving squad of the Portsmouth Fire Department was unable to revive him after the body was taken from the water.

Since there was no indication either he had drowned or suffocated, physicians expressed belief Riddle died of heart failure.

Riddle was employed by the James Rice diving crew, of Cincinnati.

—Cincinnati Enquirer

The 29th annual convention of the churches of Christ in Boone county met at the Belleview Christian church Friday, July 24. A well prepared program was enjoyed by all present. Each speaker had given his subject careful thought and presented it in a very forceful manner. All enjoyed Rev. Arthur Breaden, president of Transylvania and College of the Bible, of Lexington, his subject being the History of the Christian Church of Kentucky, which will celebrate its 100th birthday next year. The convention assembly wish to express their hearty appreciation to the Baptist folks for the use of their beautiful church lawn and for their hearty co-operation which helped to make the convention a success.

The 1932 convention will meet with the Florence congregation.

The officers for ensuing year are President—R. R. Witham; Vice-President—G. F. Schram; Secretary-Treasurer—Mrs. Mary Berkshire. All churches of this brotherhood are urged to help make this a banner convention.

Glen Kelly, Aged 16, Of Dillsboro, Ind., Is Drowned Tuesday

SON OF MR. AND MRS. CARL KELLY MEETS DEATH WHILE VISITING RELATIVES AT PETERSBURG—EFFORTS TO LOCATE BODY PROVE FATAL

The Ohio River claimed another victim Tuesday afternoon, when Glenn Kelly, aged 16, of Dillsboro, Indiana, met his death by drowning while in bathing at Petersburg.

The unfortunate lad was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kelly, formerly of Boone county, Mrs. Kelly having been a Marshall before her marriage. The victim was visiting his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. John Weisickle, and accompanied his cousin, Jack Weisickle, 14, in a row boat to a point about a mile above Petersburg, where bathers are wont to disport themselves.

It is said that they had been forbidden to go out in the boat by Mr. and Mrs. Weisickle, but the lads allowed the lure of the stream to get the better of them.

Shortly after their departure the Weisickle lad rushed home with his comrade's clothes under his arm and bearing the sad news of the drowning. Earnest efforts were made all afternoon and evening to locate the body, but it had not been found Wednesday morning.

The current is said to be swift a short distance out from the point where the boy went down and the body may have been carried far down stream.

The Weisickle boy was unable to give a connected account of the incident, except that he suddenly glanced at Kelly and saw that his [illegible]

Be sure to attend the Baptist revival services, which will get under way next Sunday at the all-day home-coming services to be held at the local church of that denomination.

J. H. Feeley, one of the most energetic farmers in this section, suffered the loss of a fine work horse last week. Mr. Feeley found the animal in a sink hole, still alive, but the animal fell dead after he had been extricated from his plight.

E. L. Stephens, of East Bend, spent Saturday night with his daughter, Mrs. K. W. Ryle and Dr. Ryle.

WEB WORM

Blue grass lawn owners will be glad to know at last that there is some remedy for the control of the sod webworms that have destroyed parts of over 75 per cent of the lawns in Boone county. The following information was received the past week by the county agent and lawn owners of the county who had reported this pest to the College of Agriculture.

"Heretofore the natural enemies of the sod webworms enemies have kept the numbers of the pest reduced to the extent that control measures were not necessary in grass lands. Of a great number of different soil treatments recently tried by the Kentucky Agricultural Experiment Station, kerosene emulsion was the most successful."

To make a kerosene emulsion—dissolve ½ pound of laundry soap in a gallon of water by boiling. Remove it from the fire and add 2 gallons of kerosene while the mixture is still hot. Agitate the solution vigorously. A good plan is to use a spray and pump the mixture back into its self thru a fine nozzle, for ten to twelve minutes. When this solution is thoroughly solution set it aside to use as a stock solution for sprinkling the grass. When ready to use, bring the mixture to 24 gallons by adding water, then sprinkle on the grass at the rate of 1 gallon to 6 square feet. Late afternoon is the best time to make this application.

CAR WAS STOLEN

Arriving at the scene of an auto wreck on the Dixie Highway last Sunday morning between Walton and Richwood Sheriff Snyder found the driver of one of the cars still occupying it and in a drunken condition. He was arrested and brought to Burlington, where he was lodged in jail on a charge of reckless driving. It later was learned that the car he had driven had been stolen at Lexington. The man, who gave his name as John W. Ross Bishop, of Lexington, was held here until Monday, when Fayette county authorities came for him.

PETERSBURG

CLAMPS LEAGUE LEADERSHIP BY TROUNCING WALTON — BOEHLER IN COMMAND AFTER FIRST INNING UNTIL COMRADES BAT OUT LEAD—SCORE 12-6.

The Petersburg team went on a batting rampage to bag their second victory of the season over the Walton aggregation on the Walton diamond last Saturday afternoon.

The winning team fought an uphill battle to win the game, as the Walton lads were on top from the first inning until the seventh, except for a few brief moments in the fifth.

Boehler was compelled to bear down at frequent intervals during the earlier innings in order to keep pace with Benson, who twirled a very capable game until the seventh, when he weakened, allowing Petersburg to count four runs, after which they continued to count at the expense of Norman, Benson's successor.

In the first Shearer singled and came home ahead of Robinson when the latter hit a home run. With his opponents spotted to a two run lead Boehler proceeded to hold them until after his mates had tied the count in the first of the fifth. Jarrell started the trouble in this stanza with a double and Walton was given a life on an error. Lowe then drove out his first of three triples, scoring both of them.

Walton came right back in their half and scored one run, again giving them the lead. Shearer made his third safe hit, and stole second, scoring on Dudgeon's single. This was all for Walton until the last of the ninth when they counted three more after Petersburg had a 12-3 lead. Petersburg drove Benson from the box in the first of the seventh and never again were in danger.

Boehler struck out seven of the Waltonian's and permitted eleven hits, while Petersburg garnered 13 off Benson and Norman, the former fanning two and the latter 3 during the time he worked.

Next Saturday will find the battling Walton nine in the Hebron back yard, where they undoubtedly will have a merry time, as Hebron will be fighting with backs to the wall, having lost their first two games.

TOO MANY GOVERNMENTS

The reason for the rapid increase of taxes is in the increasing number of governments and government officials which the taxpayers are called upon to support.

Governor Roosevelt of New York recently pointed out that no citizen of that state can live under fewer than four governments, and many of them live under no less than ten different sets of public officials.

There are the Federal, State, county and city governments, as a minimum. "If one lives in a town outside of a village he is under five layers of government: Federal, State, county, town and school. If he lives in an incorporated village another layer is added. If he lives in a town outside of the village he may be in a fire, water, lighting, sewer and sidewalk district, in which case there are ten layers of government," said Gov. Roosevelt.

Similar conditions exist in every state. Most of the work of administration could be done by half as many people as are employed at the public expense, merely by merging the different governmental units. Dr. C. J. Galpin, sociologist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, suggests the consolidation of townships, small villages and even of counties. This is necessary in many rural districts, he says, if adequate modern facilities for education and other community enterprises like hospitals, libraries, parks, playgrounds, fire companies, churches and the like are to be available. He estimates that it takes a community of at least a thousand families to support up-to-date facilities of such kinds. If he is right, then there is no way out for small communities except such a merger of interests as Dr. Galpin and Governor Roosevelt propose.

County government in general is not very satisfactory anywhere in the United States. It is natural that people give their first attention to their local, town, village or city government. They do not, in many sections, have occasion often to come in contact with their county governments. If all the functions now delegated to local communities became the business of the county as a whole, perhaps the effect would be beneficial not only in making county officials more responsive to public opinion but in lessening the burden of multifarious taxes and superfluous public officials.

Of course, the professional politicians will resist any movement of this sort. They will always resist any movement which reduces the number of office-holders and so reduces the number of prizes they can hang up for their partisans to scramble for. But local government ought not to be the plaything of politicians, and the time will come when it will not be.

The Family Garden

TIMELY GARDEN TOPICS

The Corn Ear Worm—The tomato fruit worm, the pest that has been hollowing out and souring the early tomatoes, is about to change its food habits, and attack the main planting of sweet corn, which is just silking out. The adult, a moth, lays the eggs on the silks, and the newly hatched larvae begin feeding, following the silks down to the ear. The damage is twofold; because of the destruction of the silks, a straggly filling out of the kernels results, the worm completing the job by consuming those kernels that do fill out. Even though the entire ear is not consumed, the filth the worm leaves makes it anything but inviting.

On tomatoes, there is no practicable control, but on corn, happily, there is. It consists merely in dusting the silks as they emerge, with the lime, in proportion of 1 to 6 in effective. This method is scarcely feasible on large acreages of field corn, but gardeners who value sweet corn will find it well worth using.

Celery—Now is celery setting time. With the ground dry, it will behoove the gardener to cut back the tops of the transplants to the central bud. No essential part of the final stalk is thus lost, for these leaves drop off early, but before they do drop off they present considerable area through which valuable soil moisture is lost. It may be of interest to know that if the roots of celery transplants are washed clean of soil, they become established more quickly.

Fall Lettuce—Those gardeners who would appreciate having lettuce through the fall, and well into the winter, and who have coldframe equipment may start their seedings now. The seedbed location should be such that the sun strikes it but part of the day, preferably only until 10 o'clock, after which time it should fall in the shade of a building. At about mid-August, the seedlings should be set in a coldframe, shaded by laying brush across it, or by stretching muslin or tobacco canvas across it, but raised above it so that air may pass freely across the frame. Either Grand Rapids leaf lettuce, or Wonderful or New York head lettuce may be used. The spacing for leaf lettuce is 8 inches each way; and 10 inches for the heading sort. The plants reach maturity in about six weeks, after which, the weather having gotten cool, they stand until they are harvested. It goes without saying that the soil should have been well enriched with manure. In addition, it is of advantage to give a topdressing or two with nitrate of soda, at the rate of 1 pound to 50 square feet of frame space.

Now is a good time to begin sowing all vacant garden space that is not to be used for late beans, beets and carrots, with kale. Although this may make more kale than the family can possibly consume, that that is not used will make excellent matter to plow under for humus. One pound of seed will sow an acre; there are few, "cover crops" better adapted to use in a garden than kale. Turnips too, especially the Seven Top variety, so much used for greens.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of WHAS the week of August 3. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

August 3—Cutting dairy feed costs, J. L. Collins.

Poultry pointers for August, C. J. Maupin.

August 5—Black root-rot of tobacco, E. M. Johnson.

High cost of scrub rams, R. C. Miller.

August 7—What farm folks are asking, L. C. Brewer.

The weather the past few days has been very pleasant. Farmers could not stir their ground and rains and hail injured some crops of tobacco and corn in this county.

"THAT LITTLE GAME" By B. Link

RECORD TOBACCO CROP IN UNITED STATES FORECAST

Production of tobacco in United States during 1931 will amount to of 20,000,000 pounds over 1930 according to estimates by the Department of Agriculture. Increases in the use of cigarettes which are attributed by authorities in the industry to the removal of harsh irritants by modern methods of manufacture such as the toasting process including the use of ultra violent rays are responsible for the increase in the leaf tobacco production. Larger quantities of flue-cured tobacco, which is used principally in cigarette manufacture, are being exported and this with the increase in domestic use is bringing additional dollars to the American farmer's pocket. Tobacco production in thte United States this year will set a new record and will be almost 200,000,000 pounds over the five-year average between 1925 and 1929 of 1,357,000,000 pounds.

TOO MUCH WORK STOCK ON FARMS

An over-supply of work stock is a common source of loss on many Kentucky farms, declare farm management specialists at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. It was found in a 3-year farm management study in the Purchase region that work stock was fed a third of the corn and half of the hay produced on the average farm. In south-central Kentucky in 1929 and 1930 it was found that work stock consumed a fourth of the corn and two-fifths of the hay. The cost of keeping a horse in the latter area averaged $82 a year for the two years. This included man labor at 15 cents an hour in addition to feed and pasture, depreciation, interest taxes, housing, harness, shoeing, veterinary and miscellaneous expenses.

The investigators cite an instance where five horses were owned on a 130-acre farm. An examination of the owner's labor record showed that he did not work even four horses a single day in the year; in fact he worked only three of them one day in 12 months. The average age of his horses was 14 years. He was not only feeding them at high cost but suffering a heavy depreciation due to their age.

SHEEP SCHOOLS CALLED OFF

The fourth annual series of schools for Kentucky sheep raisers tentatively scheduled to begin Juy 29th has been definitely called off, Agriculture according to an announcement by Richard C. Miller of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. Circumstances which are responsible for this cancellation are the continued hot weather which has affected a large number of sheep and the fact that farmers are unusually busy. It is hoped that next year the schools can be held as usual.

The calling off of the schools does not affect the annual association banquet or sales to be held at Lexington, Louisville and Madisonville during August.

Warren county farmers shipped 97 carloads of strawberries this year which averaged around $2.70 per crate or approximately $65,000. Shipments are expected to be larger next year due to the increased spring planting.

The Way of Life by BRUCE BARTON

TOO FAST

When I was a student in Amherst College, and my father was preaching in Chicago, I used to go home for Christmas on the Erie Railroad.

The trip consumed two nights and a day; but this was the golden age when some kind hearted railroads were allowed to present free passes to clergymen and their families.

Now the Erie makes fast time, and there are no passes; but the memory of those old slow trips is pleasant. My mother would pack a shoe-box full of sandwiches and hard boiled eggs and bananas and I had a glorious time; never thinking that it was any hardship to travel slowly, but thanking my lucky stars that I was able to get home at all.

On one of the days preceding last Christmas, so I am told, eight sections of America's swellest trains were required to leave New York to hurry the youngsters home from school.

It hurried them home for what? So that they could bestow a running kiss on their parents, shed their day clothes and change into evening clothes, and be off on a series of parties.

This is the world we live in. This is the tempo of modern life. Any of us old folks who decry it are merely dating ourselves as belonging to a passing generation.

Yet, I personally feel a little sorry for these headlong youngsters. Somehow it seems to me that in traveling so fast they miss an awful lot.

I remember the Christmas when my father presented me my first watch—a big silver affair that he himself had carried for years. I was ten years old, and the gift amazed me. It had never occurred to me that I should ever own a watch until I was twenty-one.

I remember how my wife and I saved up patiently to buy our first car—a second-hand Ford. I remember our first antique, which we loved for months before we could finally acquire it. And the joy of seeing a savings account grow slowly; and the thrill of building a library, one book at a time.

Now the kids smash up a dozen watches before they are six. And they start life with cars, and with furniture; and at twenty they have rushed through all the emotional experiences that lasted us leisurely through forty years.

Don't mistake me. I'm a booster for the new generation. They are healthy, direct, and fine. Only sometimes I wonder—I wonder when, on my way home at night, I pass a big house in which lives one of New York's famous neurologists. It's an expensive house, paid for by nerves. Limousines are always stacked up in front of it.

It would seem almost as if the prize of life in America is to own a limousine and park it in front of a nerve specialist's door. Every one seems to be racing to get there.

THE FAMILY DOCTOR By JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

A SUGAR REVIEW

My patient readers may be possibly amazed at some of the ideas here advanced. Let me say at the outset that I very seldom peddle the ideas of others—at least I seldom quote; but much of the thot herein expressed is borrowed from current literature.

An authority from Vienna attributes "strikingly favorable results" in the treatment of heart disease and stomach ulcers, with table sugar. If I had these sort of complaints, I'd consult my doctor as to how to use the sweet. You know, sugar is one of our staples.

The value of sugar "in relieving fatigue and supplying quick energy," also has scientific endorsement. The Vienna authority is believed to be the first to suggest the use of sugar in the treatment of certain, widely prevalent diseases. He, (Dr. Rocht) claims to have used sugar in the treatment of stomach and duodenal ulcers, with good success. He noticed increase of appetite, with better food-tolefance, in an increased supply of mucus, favored by the sugar.

He saw improvement in the habitual constipation in such cases, with notable gain in weight. Too, remarkable increase in nerve forces, less melancholia, and more happy disposition in the gloomy victims.

The relief was not immediate, but gradual and lasting. He says, "sugar is the most important nutritional element of the heart, in that it lowers blood-pressure and stimulates the liver and kidneys." Dr. Donald A. Laird, of Colgate University, contributes to a scientific symposium on sugar; he states that sugar contributes to restful sleep. This argues, almost, for a chocolate at bedtime, doesn't it?

Dr. Laird also declares it to be valuable in curing "vague feelings of fatigue, so common among physicians' patients." A remedy for "that tired feeling" so commonly met. In short, if sugar helps relieve mental and physical tire, and favors restful sleep, then it certainly is among our most valued foods.

The Belleview-Burlington pike is being put in fine condition, and travel over that road is increasing rapidly.

Sunday School Lesson

SAUL CONVERTED

Acts 9:1-9; 17-19; I Timothy 1:12-16.

Rev. Samuel D. Price, B. D.

The greatest man in all human history is presented in this and subsequent lessons during the remainder of the year. We met him first when he voted for the stoning of Stephen and then was caretaker of the garments of those who had part in the killing.

Many others in Jerusalem and vicinity were persecuted because they asserted belief in Jesus Christ as the Messiah Saul was a leader in this cruelty. Learning that there was a growing colony of Christians in Damascus, letters were obtained from the Sanhedrin to the leaders in the Damascus Synagogue giving authority to search out both men and women in that city who were open in their acknowledgment of the new Way of Faith and Practice.

There is plenty of time to think when making a journey of 140 miles in the manner of travel of the first century. Meditations enroute prepared the mind for the wonderful revelation that came from the throne of God to Saul as he approached the city of his destination. Though it was high noon the glory of God outshone the sun and Saul fell prostrate to the earth. Jesus Christ spoke directly to this persecutor and forthwith the man who had been a terror to so many is quiet as a little child and asks for instruction in the greatest subject of life.

This director of men finds himself helpless, for he has been blinded and must trust to a friendly hand for guidance into the city. Three days are given to look at the light of life while the eyes are useless. Then Ananias comes as a messenger of hope and prophecy. Sight is restored by another miracle and a commission is given which makes this Saul the apostle to the Gentiles. It was all new and strange but this converted servant of the Lord says in the Golden Text, "I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision," Acts 26:19.

COLLEGE STUDIES SUCCESS FACTORS

Better crop yields and greater efficiency with livestock were factors in success among the fifty-six Green, Taylor and Adair county farmers whose records last year have been analyzed by the farm economics department of the College of Agriculture, University of

The 20 farmers in the most successful group had better quality crops and larger yields, particularly of tobacco. They also had larger acreages. In the case of the small grains, which are not usually very profitable in that region, they grew smaller acreages than did the less successful farmers.

The more successful farmers got more pigs per sow, more lambs per ewe and more eggs per hen. At the same time they were able to get livestock receipts of $3.19 per $1 of feed expense. This was nearly twice as much as for the low profit group.

CUT LAWN GRASS TWO INCHES HIGH

If lawn grass is cut closer than two inches its vitality is taxed by depriving the plant of most of its foliage and exposing the crown to the hot sun, says Prof. A. J. Olney of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

The frequency of mowing depends, of course, on the rapidity of the growth of the grass. If mowing is done often, the clippings will be short and may be left on the surface of the lawn as a mulch. The short clippings falling around the plants afford protection during hot, dry weather. When the clippings are long and heavy it is necessary to rake them off to keep the lawn neat.

Prof. Olney advises heavy waterings of the lawn rather than frequent waterings. Frequent light waterings accomplish little good and indeed may do harm. It is better to water thoroughly once a week or even once in two or three weeks.

There is a large potato crop in Johnson county this year, which is helping to relieve the food shortage. Fifteen thousand bushels of seed potatoes were sold by Paintsville merchants.

One hundred and fifty acres of korean lespedeza were seeded in Pulaski county last spring and is now making a fine showing.

The weather has been ideal the past few days and farmers are a very busy set.

Roosevelt Boosters Force The Pace In Race For Nomination

Editor's Note: The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Hickman)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

Trainers and experienced jockeys know that it is not well to force a horse into the lead at the start of the race and push him to his capacity in effort to hold that lead with a fairly well balanced field that almost invariably means a draft upon energy which will be needed when the stretch is reached. The experienced jockey permits his more ambitious rival to stay in front and maintain a good position and reserving the strength of his mount for the finish. It will be noted, however, that the said experienced jockey does not neglect to be "on the heels" of the leader, if possible, never permitting the lead of his rival to become too great to be overcome in the last quarter.

Governor Roosevelt's extraordinary early precipitation—with or without his consent—into the 1932 campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination was heralded near and far as a premature expenditure of political energy and tactical force which would be needed during the last few weeks of the campaign and at the convention But those who scoffed at this seeming evidence of inexperience and violation of precedent are beginning to scratch their heads and wonder if the Roosevelt lead is not becoming too great to be overcome in the stretch, even if he should be at that time somewhat winded, and in spite of the reserve strength of his nearest opponents—always barring a "spill."

Steady gains of support in the South and West are claimed by Democrats in Congress who are favorable to the nomination of Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt for President. Talk in Democratic political quarters today is that the tide of Roosevelt sentiment is running strong in North Carolina, Virginia and Georgia. In North Carolina, Representative Robert L. Doughton, veteran Democrat and member of the House for many years, has declared for Roosevelt. Georgia has a candidate of her own, Senator Walter F. George. It is expected that he will have the delegation will be for him after Senator George. Senator Thaddeus H. Caraway, of Arkansas has indicated that he will be for Roosevelt if it develops that his colleague, Senator Joseph T. Robinson, cannot be nominated.

In addition to making inroads on the South, the Roosevelt adherents here maintain that they are getting ahead in the West. Iowa is mentioned as one of the Western States where a strong contingent of the Democratic leaders are bent upon delivering the delegation of that State to the New York Governor. In the far north west, Senator C. C. Dill, of Washington, who is said to have ambitions to be nominated for Vice-President, is leading a pro-Roosevelt movement.

Returning to New York from a trip to the west coast, ostensibly to attend the Elks' convention at Seattle, having visited more than twenty States and met and conferred with Democratic politicians in each, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York Democratic State Committee and 1930 manager for Governor Roosevelt, announced that he had found almost unanimous sentiment for Roosevelt for President among Democratic leaders. Mr. Farley said he had talked with hundreds of party leaders and Democrats while touring the Far and Middle West and sounded out sentiment quite thoroughly without showing preference for any candidate whose name had figured in the discussion of potential Presidential timber for 1932. He found the same reaction everywhere. Interest centered in Governor Roosevelt to the exclusion because of other names on the long list of Democratic Presidential possibilities because of a feeling that he could win.

Of course, Mr. Farley was manager of the gubernatorial campaign which ended in the election of Mr. Roosevelt by an unprecedented majority, and Mr. Farley is the recognized representative of Mr. Roosevelt. To just what extent—if at all—these facts should justify discount of his statements is a matter of individual opinion.

Then came Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic leader of Pennsylvania and in 1924 and 1928 one of the standard supporters of Gov. Alfred E. Smith for the Presidential nomination, who declared himself in favor of the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt in 1932 and said that he would rest his "reputation as a political prophet" on the prediction that Governor Roosevelt will have the support of "not less than sixty-six" last and all the time." Nor for many a long day has there been so interesting or important a Democratic development as this statement by Mr. Guffey, flatly declaring for Governor Roosevelt as the 1932 Presidential nominee. Practical politicians in both parties appreciate its significance. To nearly all of them it was a surprise; to some a shock.

There is no possible question but that it is the greatest boost the Roosevelt candidacy has yet received. It materially changes the situation. The Roosevelt prospects of being nominated are enhanced, the power of the Smith-Raskob group to stop him diminished. Whether you are for Mr. Roosevelt or against him or neutral, there is no gainsaying that fact. The Guffey statement is a political reality the weight of which no one with more than a superficial knowledge of politics will attempt to belittle.

As the first pledge of this character to come from a recognized party leader, friends of Gov. Roosevelt, who were undoubtedly well aware that it was coming, naturally hailed the Guffey statement with great satisfaction Owing to the position taken by the Governor—that he is not a candidate for the nomination — however, they refrained from making any comment. They expect that it will be followed by similar assurances from party leaders in other states, now that the ice has been broken. And it must not be forgotten that Mr. Guffey controls a lot of convention votes. In a Democratic convention Pennsylvania has seventy-two votes—next to New York, more than any other State. In 1920, 1924 and 1928, sixty of these votes were controlled by him, delivered to whoever he wanted whenever he desired. There is no doubt that Mr. Guffey next year will control his usual sixty-odd delegates. Unless something unforseen happens between now and next July, his individual support will count in the convention more heavily than half a dozen Far Western States.

With Pennsylvania and New York lined up, Governor Roosevelt would be even more in the forefront than has been realized. Such a combination would mean uneasiness in the New Jersey, Illinois and New England delegations and a possible stampede toward the winner which the bosses could not stem. In these latter delegates, plus Pennsylvania's majority, was supposed to resident the veto power which ex-Governor Smith was credited with an intention of exercising. Possibly the spirit has departed. In any case, it appears to have been shooed out of Pennsylvania.

Although Gov. Roosevelt has not formally acknowledge that he is a candidate and although no definite organization to advance his candidacy is in existence, his friends consider his position such that if the national convention were to be held in the near future he would be nominated on the first ballot with votes to spare.

Let it be added that when the Presidential nomination campaigns get fully under way next winter and the candidates begin to count their chances, one name that every Democratic aspirant is going to have a lot of respect for is that of Senator Cordell Hull, of Tennessee. Senator Hull does not admit he is a candidate. In fact he is not a candidate, as judged by the like Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Governor Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas. But he is one of the the entire political corral.

A hog in medium condition, gaining rapidly in weight, ordinarily yields the best quality meat. Do not kill a hog t hat is losing flesh. A reasonable amount of fat should add juiceiness and flavor to the mete, but an over-finish produces a high proportion of lard.

Eight of the eleven bureaus of the Department of Agriculture are engaged in research on cotton and its products.

To raise a pound of grain, the farmer also produces about a pound and a half of other material—stalks, straw, and the like. Chemists are trying to convert these "wastes" into farm by-products.

The Food Store of the Future

Artist's conception of future food store, rivaling the smart Fifth Avenue shop in appointments and neatness. It will dispense perishable foods in cartons, quick-frozen by a new process. Inset: Clarence Birdseye, inventor of process.

THE open bins, boxes, barrels, bags and other bulk containers of the old-fashioned grocery store have virtually disappeared, and in their places today we find orderly displays of food products in boxes, packages, bottles, cans and other family-size containers on the dealers' shelves.

The public is getting higher quality foods in much greater variety than ever before, but thus far most of the improvements have been made in the status of non-perishable and semi-perishable items.

Recent discoveries in using 50-below-zero cold for quick-freezing perishable foods will soon make it possible for the public to buy meats, vegetables, fruits and other perishables in cartons and packages, hard-frozen by a new process.

With the development of this quick-freezing process, which keeps perishable foods fresh flavored and fresh textured for months in a frozen state, even porterhouse steaks and strawberries will come in packages and will be dispensed as simply as salt and breakfast foods and tea are now sold.

By putting meats and vegetables and other perishable foods into convenient and sanitary packages, the Birdseye quick-freezing method will make possible spick and span stores such as is shown in the artist's conception of the food store of the future.

In the first interview given to American newspaper correspondents since he began to exchange views with French and British American Secretary of State, emphasized that the sole present mission of Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, and himself to offer their utmost aid toward the finding of a cure for Europe's existing financial emergency. This holds true, Mr. Stimson said, as regards both the meetings here and the London conference. After re-affirming Washington's interpretation that the American delegates' activities in the present circumstances must be confined to the financial, and not the political aspects of the situation. Mr. Stimson commented upon the helpful and hopeful spirit he found dominating the international "conversations" here. He expressed confidence that a solution of the problems would be found.

America, having set its shoulder to the wheel in the financial and economic crisis threatening stability not only abroad but in this country, is not drawing back. President Hoover has followed up his intergovernmental debt suspension fact, with a proposal that the bankers of the nations agree to maintain their present short-term credits with Germany as an essential step to prevent collapse in that country.

The proposal of President Hoover that existing credits to German interests be "frozen" for a certain definite failed to awaken a feeling of responsiveness among New York bankers. The idea that the central European crisis can be ended by any single outside action, however wide its scope, has definitely been given up in Wall Street, bankers say. As a counter-proposal, several bankers suggested that about all that could be done for Germany from the outside to improve the situation would be to scale down or cancel reparations payments. By removing this obligation from the shoulders of future German generations, bankers here believe, more would be done to restore confidence in Germany, both within and without, than by any other method.

The most significant fact about the drama which is being staged in Europe today is that the United States is playing a role in it, perhaps a leading role. To Europeans, this means the end of American isolation, the reversal of a policy that has been pursued for the last ten years. The reversal is probably less profoundly fundamental than it is made out to be. But it will hardly be denied that the United States has in actuality gone to the assistance of Europe.

Congressional seats emptied by death have opened anew in six States the political tug of war begun last November for mastery of the House. Administration forces returned from the last election with a majority of two, but since have seen that margin cut and restored as members of both parties died. Today, House rolls show 214 Republicans, 213 Democrats, one Farmer-Laborite and seven vacancies.

Philadelphia's bid for the Republican National Convention of 1932 was formally submitted when a delegation from Pennsylvania outlined the advantages of the city to Senator Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee. Mayor Mackey, Senators Reed and Davis, Representative Leech and a number of hotel and railroad men from Philadelphia supplied Mr. Fess with details. The visitors said that when the National Committee decided how much money would be necessary, Philadelphia would be prepared to meet the sum.

Invitations have been issued jointly by the Department of Commerce and Labor to miners and operators in the bituminous coal fields for a conference to decide what can be done to stabilize wages and improve general conditions in the industry. The date for the conference was left open, but it will be held in Washington. About attempt of the government to bring order in the coal industry was announced by Secretary of Commerce after an extended conference with President Hoover.

Happiness Through Love

All the rewards of life lie with goodness: health, success, service, wisdom, knowledge, beauty, and scores of other rewards. All the penalties lie with badness: pain, anger, failure, ignorance, and hate and its brood. Love separates the sheep from the goats. Love is the divine arbiter. Love is the most powerful factor in the achievement of mankind's principal pursuit—happiness through service and success.—Exchange.

Early Life Insurance

The earliest life insurance policy of which anything definite is known was issued in 1583 in London, insuring the life of William Gybbons for a twelvemonth. This policy was underwritten by 13 persons acting individually and the premium was $30 a thousand.

Spiced cherries, preserved with vinegar, make a good relish. Here's a recipe. Wash and pit large, sour, red cherries. Add three-fourths of their weight or measure of sugar. Sprinkle the sugar over the fruit in layers and let it stand overnight. In the morning stir until the sugar is dissolved and then press the juice well from the cherries. Tie a small quantity of whole spices in a loose cheese cloth bag, drop this into the juice, and boil it down until it is three-fourths of the original quantity. Pour hot over the drained cherries add two tablespoons of vinegar to each pint. Seal and keep two weeks before using.

M. E. REVIVAL

Revival services will begin at the Florence M. E. church on Sunday, August 9th. Rev. J. H. Lewis, the pastor, will do the preaching.

Attorney John J. Howe was in the county seat Wednesday and made the Recorder office his customary call before leaving town. Mr. Howe was engaged in the taking of depositions in the case of Hensley vs. Casey, a passway case in the Boone Circuit Court. Mr. Howe is attorney for Mrs. Casey, while Edgar Hensley, of Burlington, is represented by Hon. O. M. Rogers.

Winchester, Ky., July 27—Temporary headquarters have been opened here in Winchester for the handling of preliminary details of the $660,000 Kentucky Methodist Education Fund campaign.

The headquarters are located at Kentucky Wesleyan College, one of the Methodist institutions that will share in the fund to be raised in the campaign that will get under way late this summer. Lindsey Wilson Junior College at Columbia also will share in the fund, while some $60,000 will be used in paying off the indebtedness of Logan College at Russellville which was closed this spring.

Preliminary details are being worked out by members of the Joint Board of Education of the Louisville and Kentucky Conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and officials of the colleges. It is the desire of these leaders thoroughly to lay the groundwork for the program now so that everything will be in readiness for the actual launching of the campaign late this summer.

The financial campaign will be conducted throughout Kentucky, in every place where there is a Methodist church. There are 100,000 Methodists in Kentucky, and all Kentucky Methodism will be organized for this campaign.

Dr. C. M. Connelly, president of Kentucky Wesleyan; Dr. R. V. Bennett, president of Lindsey Wilson and Rev. Dr. J. W. Johnson, of Louisville, president of the Joint Board, look upon this campaign as the beginning of an aggressive educational program whereby Kentucky Methodism will build up a senior college and one strong standard junior college for the dissemination of Christian Education.

Hebron Leads League

The Hebron base ball team went into undisputed possession of the lead in the Spinney League by virtue of a victory over the fast Batavia, Ohio, team at the Hebron park last Sunday. The score was 8 to 6.

Next Sunday the Hebron boys will engage Boone county's other entry in the league, the Constance team, in what should be a fast and interesting game.

The Hebron outfield, composed of Joe Aylor, Braun and Hafer, is going at a fast clip and has been of vast assistance to Ellis, Hebron's star boxman. The experience of Doc Goodridge and Garnett on the infield also has been of great help, according to Manager Ray Ernst, who is handling the team ably.

Group No. 2 of the North Bend W. M. U. met Bullittsburg July 23, 1931.

The meeting was conducted by the group leader, Mrs. Estin Snyder, who presided in her usual pleasant and efficient manner.

The program was as follows:

Hymn for the year "Joy to the World."

The welcome address was given by Mrs. H. M. Holladay to which Mrs. Bush responded.

Reading of minutes of last meeting.

Introductory remarks by the leader—Mrs. Snyder. History of the W. M. U. training school, Mrs. McNeely. Reading—"The Window," by Lucy Lee Grant.

Due to the illness of Mrs. Romanowitz, the report on the young people's work was given by Mrs. Highland.

Two very interesting letters received from Mrs. Snuggs, a missionary in South China, were read. Dinner served by the ladies of Bullittsburg church. Various young resented by special programs. Sunpeople's organizations were repbeams—Bullittsburg; G. A.'s Petersburg; R. A's Madison Ave., Covington. In these programs the G. A. and R. A. work was explained. Vocal solo: "Just Because He Loved Me So," was beautifully and impressively rendered by Mrs. Flossie Campbell-Martin. Talk on the training of young people—Mrs. Staffard.

We were so glad to have with us Miss Anne Kirtley, of Marion, Ala., who gave a very interesting talk on the work in Judson College, where she is a teacher, and Mrs. W. W. Gaines, of Atlanta, Georgia, who gave a short talk on the W. M. S. work there.

About 120 responded to the roll call of the churches but over 200 were served at dinner.

A collection was taken for a gift for Mrs. Eliza Broadus for her 80th birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery Plummer and family spent several days last week with relatives at Indianapolis Ind.

Mrs. Mary Craven, of Petersburg, spent several days here last week with relatives.

Benj. Paddack had a new milking machine added to his dairy barn. He is well pleased with the machine.

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Garnett had as their guests last Saturday afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Rider and Mrs. Highhouse, of Cincinnati, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Garnett, of Constance.

Several members of the Bullittsville Christian church attended the convention at Belleview, last Friday.

GUNPOWDER

This scribe and wife spent last Sunday with their daughter Mrs. P. J. Allen and Mr. Allen, of Florence.

L. E. Tanner and wife visited friends in Covington last Sunday.

The wet weather, last week has delayed the work of harvesting, and there is considerable hay to be cut yet.

Ben Northcutt has a field of hay that is so badly damaged by the wet weather that he will not harvest.

Mr. E. H. Surface, who has been confined to his room for several weeks, we are glad to say is improving, and we wish him a very speedy recovery.

A wind storm passed over last week and blew down some trees, and corn is badly tangled in some of the fields.

B. C. Tanner died at his home in Florence last Saturday at eleven o'clock a. m. Mr. Tanner was formerly of this neighborhood and has a host of friends who will be grieved to hear of his death.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

Whereas it hath pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our dear sister, Mrs. Lou Neal, wife of the late P. P. Neal, therefore be it resolved:

That we bow in humble submission to Him who doeth all things well and realize that our loss is Heaven's gain.

That we, as members of the W. M. U. will ever cherish her memory and may her christian influence live on forever in the lives of those who knew and loved her.

That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the two dear daughters, and may the God of all Grace sustain them in their lonely hours.

That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our minutes, a copy sent to the family and a copy sent to the Boone County Recorder.

Respectfully Submitted
Mrs. E. E. Utz,
Mrs. N. H. Clements,
Mrs. K. W. Aylor.

Cooked cucumbers are delicious. Try them peeled, cut in halves or quarters and steamed; or cut in lengthwise sections, stuffed with a broad crumb mixture, and baked.

CONSTANCE

Mrs. Addie Ryle, of Depoy, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. L. Hood.

Everyone is invited to attend the tent meeting held in the school yard by Bro. Milam and Tucker.

Miss Louise Klusmeier returned home after a visit with her aunt in St. Bernard.

Everyone was sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. Henry Kottmyer, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Hood and family, Mrs. Addie Ryle, Mr. E. F. Hood, Miss Leona Hood, and Clevo Hankins visited Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Hood, of Erlanger, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kottmyer, Jr. and family and Mr. and Mrs. Will Zimmer, took a motor trip to Georgetown, Lexington, Dix River Dam and various other places.

We were sorry to hear of Bro. Carter resigning the Constance Christian church.

W. M. U. NOTES

The members of Big Bone W. M. U. met and held their regular meeting at the beautiful home of Mrs. Tom Hamilton Thursday July 9th, there being 39 in attendance, 14 being members.

Everyone had a nice time to say the least. Quite a lot of business was carried on for the benefit of our society, also laid plans for our supper.

Several of our ladies attended the W. M. U. meeting of group 2 which was held at Bullittsburg church Thursday July 23. All reported a fine day. Regular meeting adjourned, hoping to meet as many of our members as possible with Misses Mary and Emma Gloire on Thursday August 13th.

W. M. U. of Big Bone church will announce their ice cream supper which will be given in the church grove Saturday August 1. We are urging people to come and help the cause.

MRS. PAUL AYLOR,
Chairman.

HOST TO UTOPIA CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. O. C. Hafer, and family at their home near Hebron, were hosts to Boone county Utopia club members last Thursday evening. More than thirty members and a number of visitors were present.

Refreshments were served and a number of contests were held following the regular business session. Hebron group was in charge of the program which was in every way a success.

MARKET OUTLOOK NOTES FOR JUNE

Spring pig crop increased 2.5 per cent over same period of 1930. The average June price for beef steers at Chicago was $7.45 or 30 cents above that for May but the lowest June average since 1911.

The lamb receipts for the first six months of this year at the seven leading markets were 6,991,000 head or the largest on record for that period.

Wool mills purchased wool for future needs which was in evidence for the first time in eighteen months.

Cold storage of butter on June 1st was 30 per cent less than a year ago but 1 per cent larger than five year average.

Three and one half million eggs less were imported to June 1st than corresponding period last year.

The tobacco acreage is above that of previous years but the stand is below normal. May exports were 70 per cent greater than last year's.

55,437 POUNDS OF WOOL SOLD THROUGH COUNTY POOL

A total of 55,437 pounds of wool was sold for $11,249.11 through the Boone County Wool Pool the past week. This is one of the largest crops of wool ever sold thru the county organization. Dingelspell and Son of Louisville, were the purchasers, paying 20 cents per pound net for first grade wool and 16 cents per pound net for second grade of wool.

The wool was received at three most convenient points in the county. By receiving points, 20,506 pounds were shipped on Tuesday at Walton; 24,931 pounds on Wednesday at Burlington; and 14,000 pounds at Florence on Thursday. Mr. J. O. Bostwick, of Walton, L. T. Clore, of Burlington and Wm. Stephens, of Petersburg, represented the county in the receiving of the wool at the 110 mill points.

The fleeces were well pleased with the price and grades. The wool weighed unusually heavy this year with a large per cent of the flocks averaging better than seven pounds per head. The local growers received approximately $1,000.11 by not selling on June 8th and holding until July 8th, when the wool was sold at Walton.

NORTH KENTUCKY FAIR TO PRESENT 4-H CLUB WORK

North Kentucky Fair, one of the few fairs to run this year will be held at the grounds in Florence on August 26th, 27th, 28th and 29th. The fair catalogues are bing printed and will be ready for distribution before long. The 4-H club premium lists have been considerably revised this year and members and leaders are urged to check over the lists at the earliest possible date.

4-H club booths representing the work of each community club, a dairy and a poultry judging contest, a 4-H dairy showmanship contest, dairy championship contest and special prizes on project record books represent some of the new premiums. With the exception of the community floats the old entries are also included. Thursday as usual will be 4-H club day and all members are urged to look forward to August 27th.

BLISTER BEETLES DAMAGE GARDENS

Blister bettles, or old fashioned potato bugs, army bugs or a number of other names as they are commonly called, are doing damage to potato and tomato vines as well as other garden crops again this summer. This is a hard pest to kill by poisons and demands quick attention.

The recommended method of control is to dust or spray about four times as heavy as other pests are normally treated. A good arsenate material as calcium or lead arsenate at the rates of one pound or arsenate to from three to four pounds of lime should be used.

Many of the old gardners report that they have secured fair results by whipping them out of the garden with bushes.

TOBACCO WILT

Tobacco in many sections of the county has been seriously affected by the recent heavy rains. A number of fields where water stood for some time the tobacco the last of the past week was seen wilting badly.

Keep Grizzlies

Many poultrymen have made inquiries as to best methods of treating roup in their flocks. The College of Agriculture has cut a new circular by Dr. F. R. Hull on this subject. Those who wish a copy may receive same free on request at the county agent's office.

TO THE TAXPAYERS OF GRANT AND BOONE COUNTIES:

For the first time in the history of the State the farmers are making a fight for themselves, by holding mass meetings and getting public sentiment behind their demands. Seventy-five counties have already filed their protest and five counties have been lowered. Hon. C. T. Thornton has led the fight for the farmers in this county. He was elected chairman of the mass meeting and chairman of the Delegation of thirty-one farmers that went to Frankfort. He is the only farmer in this race. As a Representative he has a good record in the house as a friend of the taxpayers and the farmers. Legislative committee takes pleasure in recommending him to you for your support and you can depend on him.

Yours Respectfully,
W. M. Simpson, Chairman
B. C. Cotton, Secretary.

French toast is an appetizing way to use up stale bread and provide a main dish for breakfast, lunch, or supper. Allow ½ to ¾ cup of milk to 2 eggs. Beat the mixture, salt lightly, and dip slices of bread into it until well soaked. Fry in butter or well-seasoned fat in a heavy smooth skillet. Use moderate heat and let toast become golden brown on one side before turning.

Will Corn at fifty cents a bushel has no trouble in finding purchasers.

No opposing candidate having come to the front, John M. Lassing will tomorrow be declared the Democratic nominee for Circuit Judge in this district, as provided in the order of the district committee calling the primary election. Mr. Lassing already has made for himself the reputation of a good, upright, business judge, and he will be triumphantly elected.

They say that 1800 bushels a day is not a big days work for James Setters machine.

The drought reduced the blackberry crop to such an extent that preserves and jam will be scarce articles of food this winter.

Edson Riddell and Geo. F. Piper caught quite a nice lot of fish down on Gunpowder one day last week. The water was low and the inhabitants thereof were easily taken.

When Bert Sullivan came into town last Thursday morning and said it rained and hailed like fury at his home down on Gunpowder the evening before, some thought he was joking; but not so. Hail as large as a hulled walnut fell in abundance but did little damage.

Charles Coleman, of Clay City, Kansas, came in last Saturday and his western home, taking with him his step-mother, who was boarding with Miss Morris here at the time of her death.

Messrs. Reuben and Peter Hager, of East Bend, were in town Monday. They are extensive farmers and say that in their long experience they never saw such poor prospects for crops in the Bend. Wheat made ten bushels to the acre. Corn will not make a half crop. They have had no rain since June.

Idlewild

Rev. J. A. Kirtley and wife attended the ordination at Big Bone last Friday.

Water scarce, gardens and pastures dried up, dust terrible but we are glad to report very little sickness and no sun strokes.

Big Bone

Little Joe Denigan, who is living with John Lockhart and wife, is very poorly with that painful affliction appendicitis.

There is quite an interesting revival in progress at the Fairview Christian church, near Big Bone Lick. Rev. Edgar Jones is doing the preaching, and Rev. P. H. Duncan is conducting the song service.

Francesville

Mrs. Sallie Calamese and children, of Lexington, are spending some weeks with their family near Bullittsville, her old home.

Lloyd McGlasson and Homer Henry went to Frankfort on the 21st. The former was looking after his matrimonial interests we are told.

Verona

Newton Powers seemed to be unusually happy Sunday morning. Enquiry developed that he had a fine boy at his house.

We have had no rain here, to amount to anything, for five weeks. Gardens are completely burned up, and tobacco and corn are suffering for rain.

Go to the polls next Monday and assist in giving the Democratic ticket a large majority.

Last Monday J. M. Lassing sold his bicycle to E. H. Blankenbeker for his son. The young man got a bargain.

The wheat in the Petersburg bottoms is not threshing out well. 8 or 10 bushels being the yield. Joe Ferris had the best crop in the neighborhood.

The Covington Stars failed to materialize at this place Saturday, and consequently there was no game of base ball as anticipated.

In our last issue we neglected to mention the death of Mr. Frank DeMoisey, the leading druggist of Walton. He had been in bad health for a long time.

James Rogers, of the Belleview neighborhood, was in town Saturday. He is one of the most successful farmers in the county. He knows how to work and have it done. He and his boys, with the assistance of one hand, have cut forty acres of meadow and twenty-five acres of wheat. Outside of the threshing of the wheat, the saving of the hay and grain cost him less than $3.00.

Rabbit Hash

B. C. Calvert and E. T. Holmes spent several days last week with 30 hogsheads of tobacco on the market.

Farmers are through harvesting their grass, and those that have threshed their wheat are shipping it to different points, price ranging from 78 to 83 cents.

Union

Several months back I spoke of Mr. John Hogan being such a worker. Well, I have no reason to take back what I said, for he has hustled about this summer and raised the finest line of vegetables and farm produce, generally, of anyone in the neighborhood. Potatoes that 6 to 15 make a peck, beets and onions in proportion and so on thru the catalogue. Holy Moses, what potatoes!

Florence

There were union services at the Baptist church in Erlanger, Sabbath evening the 19th., inst., to which the congregations of Florence, as well as Erlanger, were invited. Sermon by Rev. Tyler, of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Duncan, of the Christian church, will preach at the Presbyterian church on the first Sunday in August.

FIFTY YEARS AGO

Small grain harvest is once more a thing of the past.

In one week 264 persons died of sunstroke in Cincinnati.

Monday was the 25th of July, the day to sow turnips, wet or dry.

Ed. Rice says that he has the nag that is going to walk off with the walking premium that is to be given at the Florence fair this fall.

Tom Day, who works with Tom Willis, was kicked in the abdomen by a mule some days since and a ghastly wound inflicted.

If business does not get better, we are going to buy a tobacco patch, move this office under a shade tree therein and run the tobacco patch and the paper business together.

While in the city a few days since we met Mr. H. C. Trimble, who assisted us for four years with this paper. We were glad to see him looking so well. His mother-in-law, Mrs. Jeffries, died three days before.

A Hebron Visit

We made a trip to Hebron last week, and although the afternoon was very pleasant, but few people were on the streets.

We first rounded to and cast anchor at the saw mill. Jake Henderson was bossing the saw, Pete Hicks the saw-dust, and took care of the lumber. Uncle John Beall was there preparing to haul away some of the saw mill fruit. This being too busy a place for idlers, we hastened back to the town where we found Robt. Bradford besieged by Jemeson Arlor and Jordon Beall, who were firing jokes at him and having lots of fun.

Geo. Piper and Wm. Davis had just completed a days hard work and had planted themselves on the porch of the store to smother the passer-by with their smiles. They had everything about the house as neat as a pin.

Dave Beall still bosses the drug store and everybody who goes to Hebron goes to see Dave whether he wants drugs or not, for he is one of these companionable old souls that one likes to be with. Dave has a collection of sure enough snakes, preserved in alcohol, among which is a very peculiar looking green snake about 2½ feet long. It is the keenest looking reptile we ever saw and its tail, for about four inches, is about the size of a whip cracker. The snake was captured by Elijah Tanner, over on Elijah's creek.

Mike Clore was bounding about the town with that elastic step, apparently indifferent as to whether the "sun do move," or not. Mike's store building has not recovered from the effects of the heat the night Davis Brothers' store burnt.

The blacksmith's shops of Clayton and Ernst were in full blast, as is always the case.

GOOD TIMES AND OLD TIMES
(A Worth While Editorial Selected by the National Editorial Association)

Notwithstanding the period of depression which has engulfed every section of the country within the past several years, there are still some who can, or fancy they can, catch a glimpse of the silver lining of this dark cloud of business adversity.

Thanks we say, to those citizens, who have faith in the future. These are the folks who keep things moving. Faith is a wonderful virtue and the lack of it would have long since wrecked the nation, yes the world, and possibly the civilization which those who have lived in 1931 to witness would have dropped completely into collapse. Sometime, and possibly it is not many months away, there will be a return to normal conditions, factories will be running full time once more, money will find its back into the channels of commerce and trade, and the dinner pail which has in some sections been empty so long will once more be filled.

Even with the hardships which many have undergone, it is doubtful if there are any who would like to see the order of things turned back thirty or more years and a new start made from a point far back in the past. There has been talk, and lots of it recently, of burdensome taxes, of extravagance in government and lack of confidence in the business world. Yet no one would want to see conditions as they were thirty years ago. Let your memory run back over the period of the ushering in of the 90's. How many automobiles were there in this country? How many miles of improved highways? How many homes had a radio or boasted of an electric refrigerator? How many housewives had vacuum cleaners or prepared meals by electricity or gas?

While there are those who talk of the return of the good old days and times, how many people living today and who have experienced the pleasures of modern inventions would want to forget about those conveniences as tho they never existed, and return to the methods of the so-called good old days? Few, if any, we venture would agree to such a thing. Let us rely all that fair fate hath bestowed the greatest nation in the world to behold to end of the present chaotic conditions and a return to better times as well as good times.—Star, Hitton, Maryland.

Lexington Roller Mills are paying 40 cents per bushel for wheat. This is a bargain for feed.

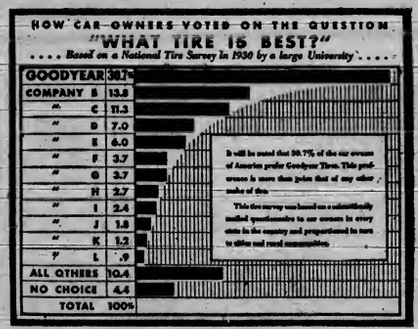
WHAT is the best tire made?

After all, conversation aside, that's what you really want to know, isn't it? For with rubber prices where they are today, you certainly can afford to buy the best.

It's natural, of course, that every tire manufacturer should try to convince you his tire is best.

But if you want to cut through a welter of words to get the real low-down, listen to the 20 million car owners of the country.



They give the palm to Goodyear.

For 16 consecutive years it has been true that "More people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind."

Moreover through an impartial institution, in no way connected with the rubber industry, 205,000 car owners were asked this point-blank question:

QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

HOW CAR OWNERS VOTED ON THE QUESTION
"WHAT TIRE IS BEST?"
.... Based on a National Tire Survey in 1930 by a large University ....

If you are technical by nature and want to know the WHY of Goodyear superiority, call and let us demonstrate. We can quickly dispel your last vestige of doubt.

And best of all, we give you good news on prices. A few of which we quote here.

IT WILL PAY YOU TO BUY THE LEADING MAKE OF TIRE

[illegible] ANNUAL MEETING

The Kentucky Jersey Cattle Club will hold its annual picnic July 30th at the Experiment Station dairy farm, Lexington, featured by a program of entertainment and general interest to dairymen. The morning program at the dairy barn will include results on the abortion control work in the herd, production type judging demonstration, and examination of the breeding records of the last three Jersey sires used in this herd. Lunch in the woods south of the dairy farm will be followed by talks by several men prominent in Kentucky Jersey activities.

Local Jersey enthusiasts are urged to take advantage of this opportunity to meet and get better acquainted with other breeders in the State.

RECOMMENDS LAXATIVE FOODS FOR BREAKFAST

Breakfast for both adults and children should include foods with laxative qualities, such as cereals in some form and fruit, either raw or cooked with little sugar, says Miss Florence Imlay, specialist in nutrition at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky.

When possible, it is a good plan to serve foods at night which can be digested easily, such as creamed soups, creamed or buttered vegetable salads, eggs, cottage cheese dishes, and simple desserts, such as fruits, custards and ice cream. If it is necessary to have a light lunch at noon, and the more substantial meal at night, greater use can be made of rich meats, pastries, cakes, puddings and sauces.

FIELDS TOO SMALL SAY FARM EXPERTS

Small and irregular fields result in inefficiency and tend to reduce profits on many farms, in the opinion of the department of farm economics of the College of Agriculture, University of Ky. They tend to make it difficult to use machinery and often interfere with a plan of rotation which provides uniform acreage of the various crops each year. Of course there are natural conditions which cannot be overcome, such as roads and drains. In many cases, however, fields could be rearranged in such a manner as to make cultivation possible with larger machinery. The department also has found many farmsteads where the arrangement of buildings causes a large amount of needless work in caring for livestock and in milking and other chores.

Letcher county farmers sowed 1,200 bushels of soybeans this year. Nine-tenths of them were inoculated.

John Hall, a Clay county farmer, cut a six-acre field of alfalfa which yielded 187 bales of hay.

Interest in baby beef production is growing in Madison county. Six purebred beef bulls were bought in June.

CISTERN WATER OFTEN UNSAFE

A third of the 1,500 samples of cistern water analyzed in the Public Service Laboratories at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky last year were found contaminated. There is little excuse for this condition, since in nearly all cases the contamination of cisterns may be easily prevented, says the agricultural engineering department of the College of Agriculture.

Contamination of cistern water may occur in four ways: Lack of proper filtration; lack of tight cover; seepage thru leaky side walls, and neglect of regular and thorough cleaning.

By installing a good filter between the downspout and the cistern, protecting the cistern with a tight cover, and making certain that walls and bottom are air-tight, danger of pollution may be avoided.

DISCUSSES CHICKENPOX

Discussing chickenpox, a troublesome disease, the department of animal pathology of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, says that if only a few birds have the disease, they should be killed and burned at once, unless they are very valuable and worth isolation and individual treatment. Give a dose of epsom salts as soon as the disease is noticed. The scabs and exudation on the skin and diseased membranes may be removed and the sore painted with tincture of iodine or treated with an ointment. Affected eyes should be cleaned and two drops of a 15 per cent solution of argyrol placed in each eye and in each nostril. The houses should be cleaned daily. The use of disinfectants is not of much value and may cause the houses to become damp. Drinking utensils should be scaded each day. One of the chlorinated antiseptics, such as zonite or B-K, may be used in the drinking water.

Twelve carloads of limestone were bought by farmers in Graves county in June.

TO THE DEMOCRATIC VOTERS OF BOONE AND GRANT COUNTIES:

Being unable to see all of you before the Primary August 1st, I hope just as many of you, both men and women, will go to the polls and cast your votes for a Democrat to represent you in the next General Assembly of Kentucky.

One who will represent the Agricultural interests of your counties and state and will be fair and just to all other interests.

One who will not betray you or your party.

I stand pledged to use my best effort to get a reduction on assessed valuation on real estate and especially on farm lands.

Very Respectfully Yours,
J. C. B. CONRAD

MAIN STREET LOOKS AT BROADWAY

Police Chandeliers

Every New York policeman has his shoes polished up to the last degree. You can find one without his shield sooner than without a polish. Their uniforms are always pressed and there is not a set of men in the world who present an smart an appearance as the 15,000 men on Commissioner Mulrooney's force.

Naturally, on $60 a week, the pay of a New York cop, they can afford to dress better than they used to when they drew $60 a month not so very many years ago.

* * * * *

Police Wire-pulling

Naturally, with so many on the force, there is a certain amount of inside politics played all the time. One of the choice assignments over which the men battle is the tri-weekly job of policing the crowd at the Goldman band concerts in Central Park. And the way they fight each other for the privilege of getting that job is nobody's business.

Each concert attracts close to 7,000 people, half of whom get seats while the remainder are allowed to drape themselves on the grass or wherever they can find a point of vantage. The police are there to keep them in order—and one pinch a century would be a high average. All the cops have to do is listen to one of the finest concerts on earth and then go home.

* * * * *

A Wonderful Gift

The Goldman band concerts are just one sample of the hundreds of free amusements offered New Yorkers all through the year. The city gives the bandstand and the Guggenheim family, which made a huge fortune in minerals in the Rocky Mountains, pays the musicians, the cost running to many thousands of dollars every year.

The band plays at Columbia University campus on alternate nites, thereby drawing a totally different crowd. In the course of the year probably a million people hear the band, not to count the many millions more who listen in by radio. Even New Yorkers who seem to find it hard to praise anything in especial about their city, admit the Goldman band concerts are wonderful.

The Goldman band is just one more thing that links New York small town. Hundreds of small places support a town band and the tri-weekly summer scene in Central Park differs in size from the happenings in myriad of smaller places throughout the country.

LOOKING BACK ON OLD TIMES

The country was mostly trees and stumps. Wild pigeons, during the spring flights, darkened the sky and are now extinct. Not a single bird is left.....All farm fields were full of stumps, which required cutting the grain with hand scythes and cradles. Oxen were used for all purposes. In winter they were shod by slinging up the animals with a windlass. The covered wagons were still going to the Golden West. It was the exception when overland coaches were not held up in going to the coast. White desperadoes were quite as dangerous as Indians.

For many years buffalo bones were used for making glue and bone charcoal at the American Agricultural Chemical works here in Detroit. Robes, smoke-tanned chased for $5 apiece. All building and of the best quality, were purtimbers were hewed and seored and raised in bents by all neighbors, invited to the bee for the jollification. Neighbors were far apart and work was exchanged where needed. All fires were of wood. A crude stove was in use with a huge fireplace. Stone coal (whichwas hard coal) came into use with the baseburner about 1860. Sleeping rooms were always cold. Ashes were saved and bleached for lye, making soft soap, which was in general use. The only light was tallow dips. Money was in shillings and fractions of shillings. There were log schoolhouses. Homes were comfortable, with inside finish and walls of black walnut. The furniture was horse hair. In the attic were trunks, covered with calfskin and large headed brass tacks, containing old letters that were mailed without envelopes. They were wax-sealed, and 25 cents postage was paid by the receiver. Pens were made of quills. Fine, black sand in pepper boxes was used for blotting paper.

Beds were high-posted, with rope cords. Ticks were filled with corn husks and sometimes straw. Spinning wheels were in use. Socks were knitted at home. Cloth was purchased, and clothes were made by anyone at home. Screens were unknown. The first oval screen was to cover the butter. In case of company, some member of the family with a brush would keep the flies off the table during the meal. Only preserved fruits were enjoyed; peaches they were dried. (Dr. ?) Steel!—W. P. Holliday, in Detroit News.

STOCK RAISING BOARD SAYS OVERPRODUCTION CAUSED LOW PRICES

Washington Chairman Jas C. Stone, of the farm board, recently made a speech over the radio in toll, as he put it, the truth about the wheat situation to farmers who are receiving the lowest prices in generations.

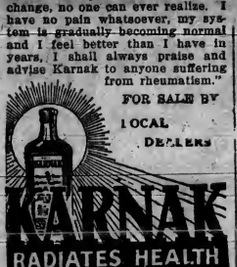
Stone said the "main trouble with wheat prices is that for several years the world has been producing more wheat than it has been consuming."

The charges that the board is to blame are untrue, he said. "But unfortunately," he said, "some persons who are friendly to the farmer's interests are being taken in by this propaganda, and are misled into asking for changes in the board's policies that would work against the farmer's interests."

The grain crop of wheat oat and rye and the fruit crops of the state are said to be good.

A larger tobacco crop is said to have been planted but in many counties the weather conditions have been unfavorable although a larger yield is predicted at the present.

There has been in the United States an increase in crop of oats potatoes, sweet potatoes and condition of these crops at present are good.



The outlook is for higher priced eggs this winter and with cheap wheat and other poultry food a well cared for flock will pay.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years, I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

More corn growers should plow corn land in the fall, says U. S. Department of Agriculture, tho it does not recommend this practice for all soils and localities. Turning under a cover crop or sod in the fall increases the amount of plant food available the next summer. Fall and winter plowing is a good way of combating groubworms, cutworms, and corn rootworms. The surface of fall-plowed ground is drier in the spring, but there is usually more moisture in the subsoil. Where there is much rain in the winter, it is better not to autumn, says the department, esharrow fall-plowed land in the pecially with fine clay soils. Tests of fall and spring plowing preceding a dry summer show that the fall-plowed fields usually yield better.

Principal Or Interest ?

We believe a depositor is more interested in the safety of his principal rather than a PROMISE of high income return.

For that reason this bank joins with the banks of Boone County and the banks of our neighboring Counties in announcing

A Safe and Conservative Rate of

4% ON TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITS

on and after August 1st., 1931

When money rates were high in the open market and City correspondents were able to allow a high rate on daily balances, banks could afford to pay 4% on Time and Savings Deposits. With these rates considerably reduced and it being no longer profitable to make investments that will return a profit on 4% money, we think it a sound and conservative move on the part of the Bankers to pay a rate of interest that will enable the banks to continue a sound banking policy.

We will appreciate having our friends call in and discuss any matter of business with us.

"THE CROSSROADS NEWSPAPER"

VOLUME 69 | Established 1870 | BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, THURSDAY, AUGUST 6TH., 1931 | $2.00 Per Year | NUMBER 36

ONSLAUGHT

OF WALTON BATTERS IN SEVENTH INNING IS TOO MUCH FOR BROWN, HEBRON PITCHER, WHO LEAVES HILL—ROBINSON AND REIBLING IN STELLAR ROLES

An unexpected rally of ferocious intensity broke up a closely contested game between Hebron and Walton at the Hebron park last Saturday afternoon and as a result the hard working Hebron club still is without a taste of victory in the second half of the league season. The final score was 9 to 4 in Walton's favor.

Norman and Braun were the opposing pitchers and, while the score was tied at 2-2 at the end of the seventh, Braun had appeared to have the better of the bargain up to that point. He had held the heavy hitting Waltonians to a measley two singles and seemed to be able to carry on. Whether or not the intense heat was too much for him was not learned, but at any rate Walton opened up with a barrage of hits in the first half of the eighth that sent him to the showers to be replaced by Reibling.

Seven runs was Walton's total for the inning, manufactured on three doubles, two singles, a hit batter, an error and a home run by Robinson. Hebron came back with two in their half of the same inning, but could go no further off the southpaw slants of Norman.

Robinson was a tower of strength in center, where he covered a world of ground, as did his rival center fielder, Reibling, who made several fancy catches. Hartman, Norman, Dudgeon, Hafer and Braun obtained two base hits. Each team made nine hits, but Hebron was unable to spread six into the [illegible] tells the whole story.

Deaths

HARMON BAUERS

Harmon Bauers, aged 56 years, passed away suddenly Saturday night at his home in Florence, after an illness of two weeks. Funeral services were held from the late residence Tuesday morning with requiem high mass at St. Paul's church at 9 o'clock, by the Rev. Herbert J. Egbring, pastor in the presence of a concourse of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Bauer's is survived by one brother Frank Bauer's, two sisters Mrs. Omer Macrander and Mrs. J. C. Brown, besides three nieces and a nephew and many other friends.

Funeral Director Philip Taliaferro had charge of the funeral arrangements.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION ON THE ROAD

Bad manners on the part of drivers are held by many authorities to be the principal cause of automobile accidents.

According to traffic engineers and statisticians, the accident rate would drop to a minimum if drivers would display a little courtesy in operating their cars by giving way when other machines are passing, and would discontinue crowding cars coming in opposite directions, the unnecessary use of loud nors, driving slowly in the midst of fast-moving traffic, etc.

A survey conducted by the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research has shown that the automobile itself is least responsible for accidents. Poor brakes, steering and similar factors cause only a small percentage of mishaps. Human nature has not yet adjusted itself to take advantage of the full efficiency and safe- [illegible] in perfect accord.

Good driving manners can cover a multitude of other failings. The driver who resents passing cars, who attempts to hold an undue share of the road, who has no respect for the rights of the pedestrian or other motorists, is a potential killer and destroyer of property. It is against him that future highway safety campaigns must be conducted if they are to show results.

LARGE NUMBER 4-H CAMP APPLICATIONS

The largest number of Boone county 4-H members in the past five years have sent in applications to attend the District 4-H club camp that will be held at Camp Ernst, near Burlington, beginning next Tuesday, August 11th, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner.

Special classes have been arranged for first, second, third and fourth year members according to the number of camp years completed. County Agent Forkner will be in charge of the crops course given first year boys. Miss Eunie Willis, County Red Cross Nurse will be in charge of first aid in camp and in charge of the health instruction work.

Members who are planning on attending are urged not to report for camp until the afternoon of the 11th. This is important in order that the grounds may be prepared for camp before members arrive.

GOOD TIME ENJOYED BY 4-H ER'S AT SPLIT ROCK

Approximately 100 4-H club members and leaders from the Grant 4-H er's Blue Ribbons, Norbeh Champions and E-Xl-All 4-H community clubs spent an enjoyable day in 4-H meetings and club contests last Wednesday, July the 29th. A general business session was held in the morning followed by games and contests in the afternoon.

Becky and John Webb Dolwick of the Norbeh Champion 4-H club defeated the crack team composed of Ralph Maurer and James Ogden of the Blue Ribbon club in the inter-club horse shoe pitching contest. The Grant 4-H er's and Blue Ribbon combination won both the girls and boys base ball games defeating the Norbeh Champion X-Ll-All teams.

Quite a few people were in town Monday, County Court Day.

APATHY

MARKS PRIMARY RACES LAST SATURDAY—J. C. CONRAD IS EASY VICTOR OVER HIS THREE OPPONENTS FOR REPRESENTATIVE — BASKETT RUNS FINE IN BOONE

As the Recorder goes to press the final tabulations on the Republican and Democratic nominations for Railroad Commissioner in the Third District have not been made.

However, the final results have been learned for the Democratic nomination for Representative. These were the only three races voted upon in Boone county last Saturday in what is being called one of the quietest primaries in her history.

J. C. B. Conrad, of Williamstown, made a run-a-way race of what many thought would be a close one. His total vote in the two counties comprising the district was more than that of his three opponents combined. C. F. Thornton was second, C. W. Burton third and John Clark fourth. But since they don't pay off on place and show tickets in a political race Mr. Conrad was the only one of the four who was rejoicing after the count was completed.

The vote in Boone county in the three races follows:

DEMOCRATIC PARTY

For State Representative—

C. W. Burton 107, C. F. Thornton, 138, J. C. B. Conrad, 466, John S. Clark 2.

For Railroad Commissioner—

James M. Clay, 94, Walter J. Bailey 33, James Hatcher 20, Albert A. Brandenburgh 29, James E. Underwood 21 Elihu Reynolds 5, Jesse S. Basket 303, Wm. "Bill" Back 11, Edward T. Ewan 4.

[illegible]

L. M. Ward 10, Lewis M. Miller 2, Thomas H. Lauhon 2, E. C. Kash 6, Colonel Ike Wilder 21, Phillip Helf 11, Arthur J. Daly 5.

The final vote in Grant county for Representative is as follows: Conrad 611, Thornton 329, Burton 277, Clark 137.

The total results in the district follow: Conrad 1,079, Thornton 467, Burton 384, Clark 139.

ORCHARD FIELD MEETING

Packing, grading and marketing of apples and peaches will be discussed at the late summer orchard-ing field meeting to be held in Boone County on Thursday week August the 20th, according to County Agent H. R. Forkner. The assistance of Mr. W. W. Magill, field agent in orchard work from the College of Agriculture has been secured for the meeting. A number of commercial concerns have also promised to exhibit orchard equipment at the meetings.

The best known methods of packing the fruit for the market and the marketing of the prepared product is of most importance in a year when the fruit crop is unusually large. All growers who are interested in this meeting are urged to make plans to attend.

The place of meeting and time will be announced in a circular letter sent out by the county agent the last of this week. If for any reason some grower does not get his letter he is requested to call the county agent's home at Burlington.

STOCK JUDGING TEAMS START WORK

A number of Boone county 4-H club members have begun training on dairy and poultry judging team work. Special prizes are being offered at Florence fair for highest scoring members in this work. The poultry judging teams will compete on Thursday, August the 27th and the dairy team on Friday, August 28th at Florence fair. The winning dairy judging members will represent the county in the state contest held at Louisville.

CLOSE TILT

TAKEN BY PETERSBURG OVER BELLEVIEW — BOEHLER AND ROGERS ENGAGE IN EXCITING BATTLE — BRADBURN'S TRIPLE TURNS TIDE IN FIRST

Battling thru nine of the toughest innings any pitcher ever pitched, Big George Boehler bested Bill Rogers, his more youthful opponent, last Saturday afternoon in a game that long will be remembered by the followers of both the Belleview and Petersburg teams.

And to say that Rogers was bested is hardly fair at that for he made a most courageous and remarkable stand after a disastrous start in the first inning, for it was in the opening stanza that Petersburg won the game and then subsided for the afternoon, apparently confident that Mr. Boehler would hold the opposition.

Boehler did the job to a queen's taste in spite of the intense heat which caused him to retire for several minutes in the sixth when it seemed that he would be unable to continue. However, while Manager Ruth was warming up to take his place in the box, he "came to" sufficiently to carry on. He had walked the first two batters to face him, but recovered to the extent of retiring the side without a score.

As mentioned before Petersburg started off with a bang when they scored twice in the opening session, while Belleview counted one run in the fifth to bring the final count to 2-1. Lowe cast the jinx on Belleview when he started the game with a strike-out.

The ancient hoodoo sign of the first batter striking out fails sometimes, but this one time it worked. Mahan followed Lowe with an infield out, but Boehler poked a lazy single along the right [illegible] to [illegible] center.

With Bradburn on third Klopp hit a tough bounder toward third and was safe on a close play, Bradburn scoring. Matthews then singled sharply to center and Klopp tore for third where Harold Rogers' accurate throw beat him by an eyelash to save further trouble.

But Rogers put on the brakes and held his opponents to two scattered singles during the remainder of the contest. He certainly pitched a masterly game after his unfortunate start and followers of both teams were unanimous in their praise of his fine effort. This boy has pitched some of the best base ball in the league this season, but has been unlucky enough to lose many of his starts, sometimes thru poor support in the field at other times on account of a lack of sustained punch at the bat by his teammates.

In Belleview's fifth Stephens led off with a nifty single, but Boehler braced to strikeout Bucky Rogers and Hensley. Stephens then pilfered second and rode home when Bill Rogers took matters in his own hands and shot a hot single into left. But that was all, tho they threatened at several stages, one being when Boehler walked the first two men to come up in the sixth. However, he extricated himself from this hole.

Again in the eighth the visitors threw a score into the home fans when Mutt Rogers drove a long double into left with no one down only to be left when Boehler bore down to retire the side. A clever play by Bradburn when he threw Rogers out at third on the next batter helped a great deal.

While Rogers allowed six hits as against Boehler's four, he struck out eleven men and Boehler ten. Boehler walked two and hit one, but Rogers control was as good that he committed not a single faux pas of any kind. It truly was the kind of a pitcres battle "that you read about," but seldom witness.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Blythe and daughter Martha, returned Tuesday afternoon from a three week's tour thru the West and Middlewest. Their visit, a greater portion of which was spent with Craig Baldon and family, at Woodman, Colorado, carried them thru numerous points of interest, including Yellowstone National Park and others. Their speedometer registered 5,000 miles on their trip.

Edson Maurer and Ted Cress spent Sunday afternoon with friends in Rosedale, Kenton county.

ELECTION FRAUD

IS CHARGE HURLED AT MAYOR HARRISON BY RIVAL REPUBLICANS AFTER LOUISVILLE PRIMARY — COURT FIGHT LOOMS

Charges of "wholesale fraud" were made against the Republican faction led by Mayor Harrison following the primary at Louisville last Saturday. Harrison's accusers were Senator Charles W. Ryans and Sheriff Hubbard Petty, leaders of the opposing faction in the same party. The clash between the two wings of the party in Jefferson county is gaining state-wide notice and a court fight looms as a result of the so-called "goings on" in the party scrap Saturday.

Senator Ryans, in serving notice that his wing of the party would contest the Harrison victory, said: "I am collecting evidence of wholesale fraud," Ryans said. "I shall gather affidavits to show that Harrison workers went into voting booths with voters, stood near the booths and marked ballots, and in other ways engaged in illegal practices and generally violated the provisions of the Brock-Gilbert law. We will take our evidence into court."

Monday detectives arrested four men on charges of abducting by force three precinct workers in Saturday's primary. An attorney for the four engaged in a fist fight with the chief of police, a member of the Harrison wing, while the defendants were being questioned.

SHELBY STREET

IN FLORENCE WILL BE [illegible]

DAY AFTERNOON AND EVENING DEMONSTRATIONS AND ELECTRICAL DISPLAY

For years Shelby street, in Florence, has been a burden to the town and at times a source of great worry to the travelling public. On account of the exceptionally heavy traffic over this thoroughfare it has been difficult, if not almost impossible, to keep its macadamized surface in good repair. Consequently the expense of its upkeep was a great drain on the city treasury and the surface of the street not always conducive to the traveller's comfort.

But now its going to be different. A new concrete street, connecting the Dixie Highway with the Burlington pike, has been completed and will be formally dedicated next Saturday evening, August 8th. The churches of Florence will serve a chicken supper from 5 p. m., until 9 p. m., with a charge of 75 cents per plate attached. There will be music, bazaar, soft drinks, sandwiches and ice cream. Auto demonstrations and electrical display also are included on the program.

The Florence Industrial Club, which will sponsor the dedication, invites you to attend the festivities, enjoy a good chicken supper and spend the evening with the enterprising and sociable citizens of Old Stringtown on the Pike.

MT. ZION 4-H CLUB HOLDS MEETING

The Mt. Zion Eagles held its July meeting at the school house July 8th.

The morning was spent in visiting the boys and girls club projects. All projects were growing nicely and expect to win many prizes during the fair.

At the noon hour a delightful lunch was served to the leaders and members. The afternoon was spent in playing games and plans were made for club camp to be held at Gunpowder August 11-15.

The club is doing splendid work this year and hope to win the cup for the coming year.

SEVEN STORIES

PASSED IN FALL DOWN ELEVATOR SHAFT—BOONE COUNTY RELATIVES RECEIVE NEWS OF SERIOUS INJURY TO JOSEPH MAURER, 13, OF LOUISVILLE

Relatives of Edward Maurer, of Louisville, were concerned at the news of the serious accident which befell his son, Joseph, when he sustained a broken arm and limb in a fall down an elevator shaft in an abandoned distillery warehouse last Wednesday.

The lad, who is 13 years of age, was playing in the warehouse with a chum and was on the seventh floor when his foot slipped and his unlucky descent started. His fall was checked twice, once when he grabbed a rope and again when he fell across a beam.

His left arm was broken just below the shoulder and left limb just above the ankle. An operation was necessary before the bone in the arm could be set with the aid of silver wire and screws.

Reports received here early this week indicated that the boy was resting fairly comfortably and that he would recover without noticeable injury.

"TOBACCO TOPPING" CROWS

C. W. Portwood, who lives near Waterloo, is more fortunate than most tobacco growers hereabouts. This is "tobacco topping" time and Mr. Portwood has discovered two crows that are lending a helping hand. One day last week Mr. Portwood states that he noticed two crows, which had alighted in his patch, suddenly hop from the ground to the top of two tobacco plants. Again they chose two other plants, he said, and repeated the operation. He hurried to the spot and to his utter consternation saw the results of as neat a job of topping as any man could do. Mr. Portwood should cultivate the acquaintanceship of these birds and teach them the more difficult art of pulling "suckers."

MEETING TO BE HELD

A series of meetings will begin at Bullittsburg Baptist church on August 9th, and will continue ten days. Everyone invited.

RADIO ADVERTISING

We wonder if everybody is as tired of listening to advertising over the radio as we are. We wonder if the people who are paying for radio advertising are getting their money's worth out of it. But at the same time we wonder how we could get many of the really wonderful programs that we hear over our radio if advertisers didn't pay for it.

Somebody has to pay for radio broadcasting. That goes without saying. Some broadcasting is paid for by political and other propagandists, and most of that sort of stuff we have listened to is pretty dreary.

In Russia we understand people cannot hear anything but propaganda through their radio sets. In France the government owns all the radio stations but leases time on the air to advertisers who, we understand, do not make any very successful attempts at entertainment. In England there is a fairly liberal system of government control of broadcasting. Only one company is licensed to broadcast and it operates all of the stations in the British Isles. It gets revenue from an annual tax of ten shillings, or about $2.50 on each receiving set. You cannot have a receiving set in England without paying this tax. The government collects the money and divides it with the broadcasting company which develops and puts on its own programs of entertainment and education, but there is always a government censor listening in and there is a decided limitation of free expression of ideas and opinions over the radio.

The last thing we want in America is any kind of government censorship. Freedom of speech and of the press is one of the fundamental principles of our democracy. There is always a bureaucratic clique in control not only all radio broadcasting but the newspapers and all public speakers as well. The worst thing that could happen to American liberty would be to let government or any part of the government prescribe what people may think or say.

Probably, on the whole, our American system of letting advertisers pay for our entertainment is the best. We certainly get better entertainment over the radio than they do anywhere else, from all reports, just as we have better newspapers in America because our newspapers make them possible. But we do wish these broadcasting advertisers would use a little more restraint and a great many fewer words in telling us about the merits of their wares.

The Family Garden

Timely Garden Topics

Chinese Cabbage—To the many gardeners who have not previously included it in their fall gardens, Chinese cabbage will prove a welcome addition. It may take the place of late cabbage, for it can be stored at least for a time, in the same manner as standard late cabbage. Used fresh from the garden, it is very fine indeed, in that its quality is equal to, or superior to, the succulent spring cabbage varieties.

The seed may be started in a prepared bed now, or it may be sown in groups of 3 or 4 where the final head is to stand, the seedlings thinned to one. Because of its upright habit of growth the spacing in the row need be only 12 inches and the rows no wider than 24 inches, if garden space is at a premium.

The ground should be fertile. Although manuring may not be necessary, it is well to work into the row a good garden fertilizer, as for example 3-8-6 or 4-10-4, at the rate of one pound to 25 feet. The fertilizer should be scattered over a strip 12 to 15 inches wide. In addition, nitrate of soda should be sown about the plants when they have definitely become established, at the rate of one pound to 100 heads.

Cultivation should be thorough, but not deep, close to the plants, for the feeding roots lie near the surface. No ridging should ever be done. Chinese cabbage needs no tying up; the heads form themselves.

The insects that trouble Chinese cabbage are plant lice, and sometimes the blister (the "old-fashioned potato bug") and the cabbage worms cause considerable injury. For the lice, spraying with tobacco extract is effective. So are the several pyrethrum sprays that have recently come on the market. The chewing insects may be poisoned by dusting or spraying with the same mixtures previously recommended for use on standard cabbage, but if poison applications are made close to harvest, it is recommended that the heads be closely trimmed.

There are two varieties of Chinese cabbage. They are Pe Tsai and Wonk Bok. The latter is to be preferred for use in Kentucky for it makes firmer heads in warm weather than Pe Tsai.

Brussels Sprouts—This is a fall delicacy well worth the effort it takes to grow it. The seed should be started now, in the same manner just suggested for Chinese cabbage. The cultural directions throughout are the same, except that the spacing in the garden should be wider; 18 inches in rows 30 inches apart, is recommended. The lice may be particularly troublesome, but they can be controlled in the manner described above. In the early part of the season, the cabbage worm is some times troublesome, but because the "sprouts" do not form until the cooler weather comes, there is little likelihood of danger of poison to the consumer.

The variety is Perfection.

STILT BUG CAUSE OF TOMATO FAILURE

Failure of tomatoes to set fruit this year is due to attacks of the stilt bug, according to Prof. W. A. Price, state entomologist at the Experiment Station of the University of Kentucky. This insect causes the blossoms to blight and drop off.

The bug is brownish in color, has long slender body and legs, and is about five-eights of an inch long when grown. It develops on wild plants and migrates to tomatoes.

Control consists of applications of nicotine sulfate and bordeaux mixture to protect the foliage. One application should be made as soon as the bug is seen and the second early in August.

Dead spots of grass in bluegrass lawns are caused by the sod webworm, according to Prof. Price. This pest is brownish in color and about an inch long when grown.

Tests made at the Experiment Station indicate that a kerosene emulsion will control the worm. This is made by dissolving a half of a pound of laundry soap in a gallon of boiling water. Remove from the fire, and add two gallons of kerosene while the mixture is still hot. Agitate the solution vigorously. A good plan is to use a spray pump and pump the mixture back into itself through a fine nozzle, for a period of 10 to 12 minutes. When this solution is thoroughly mixed, set it aside to use as a stock solution for sprinkling the grass. When ready to use, bring the mixture up to 24 gallons by adding water, and then sprinkle this solution on the grass at the rate of one gallon to six square feet. Late afternoon is the best time to make this application.

The McCracken County Fruit Growers' Association shipped 224 carloads of strawberries. The average price received was $4.09 per 24-quart crate. Dewberries and raspberries also are adding materially to farmers' incomes in that county. "The small fruit industry has been the salvation of the county," says County Agent W. C. Johnstone. "Most farmers did not need a government loan, and those who did have already paid it back from the proceeds of their fruit crop."

Three commercial peach growers in Letcher county expect to harvest 2,000 bushels of peaches.

SAFE SEWAGE DISPOSAL AN IMPORTANT SUBJECT

Even though the well may be protected by watertight curbing and cover against surface drainage and pollution from above, the only way to assure purity of one's own and his neighbor's water supply is by disposing of the home sewage in a safe and sanitary manner, says Howard Matson, an agricultural engineer at the Kentucky College of Agriculture.

In the case of a home in which there is neither running water nor a sink in the kitchen, some form of outdoor privy must of course be used, and this should be the concrete vault type and which permits no liquid sewage to seep into the ground.

Where there is a sink in the kitchen but no flush closet in the house, the most sanitary and convenient means of disposing of the sewage is to build a septic tank under the privy, connecting it to a drain tile disposal system. The waste water from the kitchen sink flows into the tank and insures a sufficient supply of water for its efficient operations, and the use of the septic tank avoids the need for frequent cleaning of the privy.

If the home is equipped with running water and a flush closet, the only satisfactory and sanitary means of disposing of the sewage is by the use of a septic tank and tile disposal system. Such a layout may be installed at a very reasonable cost without it being necessary to employ skilled labor.

Plans for these three forms of sewage disposal systems and advice on sewage disposal problems of any kind may be obtained from versity of Kentucky, Lexington.

SANITATION TENDS TO PREVENT ROUNDWORMS

Roundworms are a common parasite of poultry. Badly infected flocks are unprofitable. The bird becomes emaciated and often so weak that they seem to be paralyzed.

The common roundworm is yellowish white in color and from 1½ to 3½ inches in length. Cecum worms are slender roundworms about one-half inch in length, located in the closed end of the blind gut.

Sanitation will aid in the prevention of these parasites, says the department of animal pathology at the Experiment Station, University of Kentucky. For individual treatment use capsules containing nicotine sulphate. These capsules can usually be purchased from your dealer. A tobacco mash is best for flock treatment. Use one pound of ground or finely chopped Steep the tobacco for two hours in stems for each 100 adult birds. enough water to cover. Mix into 4 quarts of mash, using both the tobacco and the liquid. Feed wet, between 2 and 4 o'clock, to birds that have been held off feed since the previous day. Two hours later feed one pound of epsom salts dissolved in water and mix into 3 quarts of mash, for each 100 birds. Take care that each chicken gets its share. Clean and disinfect the house the following morning.

The finest crop of alfalfa in Monroe county more than paid for the liming, seeding and fertilizing. The average yield was 2,500 pounds to the acre.

Logan county farmers have received two good cuttings of alfalfa. Spring sown alfalfa did well.

The Way of Life

IF

JOHN GOLDEN, who is a well fellow as well as a smart one, told me that when he was in Chicago producing Turn to the Right one of the theatre attendants came to him and said a visitor wanted to see him.

"What does he want?" asked John.

"He wants to read you a play."

John threw his hands in the air. He was having enough troubles putting on one play without letting some unknown author inflict another.

The author returned two or three times, but John refused to see him.

When the job in Chicago was done, he boarded a train and shut himself in a drawing room, tired out. There came a timid knock; the door opened, and through it walked a young man with bushy hair, who looked fresh from the farm.

"Mr. Golden, my name is McAvoy," he said. "You were too busy to see me in Chicago, so I found out what train you were taking and I bought a ticket and want to ride with you as far as Cleveland. I want to read you my play."

John fussed and fumed, but finally surrendered. The young man started to read, but John's tired mind absorbed nothing.

After a while the young man said: "Any time you are not interested, I'll stop."

"You can stop right now then," John answered.

With a pained look, the young man put away the manuscript and started for the platform. The train was pulling into Gary. He stepped off, took another train, and rode patiently back to Chicago.

When the next theatrical season opened in New York, John saw in the papers the advertisement of a play called The Potters. The author's name struck him—McAvoy. Could it be the same young man who had bored him from Chicago to Gary?

It was the same young man. The play ran for months. If John had listened to McAvoy he would have added another big hit to his list

If, when I was editing a magazine, I had taken time to glace at of successes, a certain manuscript which came in from an unknown writer, I should have had the satisfaction of publishing The Sport of Kings, the story that started Arthur Somers Roche on the road to fame.

If I had listened carefully to what the president of a certain big company was saying to me one afternoon I might have made a great many thousand dollars.

If....if.....if we all have these bothersome little words in our record. It's folly to waste time regretting them. The only intelligent attitude is to say: "While I could have done much better, still I have had my share of good luck, and shall not grumble. Only, in the future, I'll try a little harder to keep my eyes and ears open."

For it is difficult to tell when some wild and annoying visitor may be trying to force fortune upon us.

POULTRY SCIENTISTS TO MEET IN KENTUCKY

Scientists from practically every state and Canadian province will be in Kentucky August 10-12 attending the 23rd annual meeting of the Poultry Science Association at the University of Kentucky.

Dr. J. Holmes Martin, head of the poultry department at the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture, is in charge of the program and other arrangements. Among the speakers are many noted scientists and investigators, including Dr. M. A. Jull of the United States department of agriculture; Dr. E. W. Benjamin of New York, manager of the Pacific Coast Cooperative Egg Producers' Association; Prof. W. R. Graham of the Ontario agricultural college, and Dr. W. R. Hinshaw of the University of California.

Graduates of the University of Kentucky on the program include T. R. Bryant, assistant director of agricultural extension work, who will deliver the address of welcome; Dr. G. Davis Buckner and Dr. P. R. Edwards, of the Experiment Station and College of Agriculture; Dean W. S. Taylor of the College of Education; C. L. Morgan and P. H. Gooding of the South Carolina Experiment Station, and Berley Winton of the University of Missouri.

PLAN BIG 4-H CLUB FAIR FOR KENTUCKY

Seven thousand farm boys and girls from 26 central Kentucky counties will participate in a district 4-H club fair to be held at the Bluegrass fair grounds in Lexington August 24-25. This will be one of the largest junior fairs in the United States. More than $2,000 in cash prizes will be distributed among boys and girls showing hogs, beef and dairy cattle, sheep, poultry, clothing, canned fruits and vegetables. Six hundred dollars appropriated by the State Legislature will be awarded on dairy cattle alone. There will be numerous features in addition to the exhibits. J. Ed. Parker, Fayette county farm agent, is in charge of arrangements.

KENTUCKY FAARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of W-H-A-S the week of August 10. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

August 10—Let's have a picnic—Miss Edith Lacy.

The type of rams for commercial flocks—R. C. Miller.

August 12—How to select good butter—J. O. Barkman.

August 14—What farm folks are asking—L. C. Brewer.

PHILIP'S MISSIONARY LABORS
Acts 8:26-40
Rev. Samuel D. Price, B. D.

It may be safe to be farmed aside from present activities to undertake some new work but very often this change is a blessing in disguise. The changed field may produce far larger results than the one in which we are contentedly established. Philip was making great progress in Samaria with his revival. It was just the situation that most people would say needed the attention of the evangelist from Jerusalem who had already accomplished so much. God has the whole field in view and often needs an active worker for another location. It works that way in business and the system is not different in the spiritual realm.

He traveled south about 100 miles before any indication was revealed of the work for which he had left the company in Samaria. Then a man was observed in a chariot who was reading aloud. Again there is a direction from the Holy Spirit and Philip accosts the treasurer of Candace, queen of the Ethiopians. This man had been to Jersusalem and while enroute home ward was reading from Isaiah 53-7. This referred to the Messiah. Now the treasurer was a master at finances but poor in interpreting Scripture. Philip asks a question which each pastor and other teachers of the Bible should propound: "Understandest thou what thou readest?" His offer to expound the Scriptures is accepted and Philip now enters upon an active ministry by the roadside.

Again there was a call to proceed northward and the convert is left that a work of evangelizing may be followed as far northward as Caesarea. The Golden Text sets forth the activity that should be performed by every believer: "They therefore were scattered abroad went about preaching the word," Acts 8:4.

Nut Chocolate Bars

Whites of three eggs, 7 ounces powdered sugar, one and one-half squares of chocolate, one-quarter pound Jordan almonds.

Beat the whites of eggs until stiff and add gradually, while beating constantly, powdered sugar. Fold in melted chocolate, cooled slightly, and three-fourths of the almonds, blanched and chopped. Spread to one-fourths inch in thickness in a buttered dripping pan, sprinkle with remaining chopped nut meats and bake in a very slow oven three-quarters of an hour. Cut in finger-shaped pieces and remove from pan.

Pie Plant Pie

Take the yolks of two eggs, one cup sugar, two heaping tablespoons of flour, butter size of a walnut.

Put in a saucepan and mix thoroughly, beating the eggs up light, then thin to the consistency of thickening; now take one cup of pie plant and pour boiling water over it and let it stand while you get the first mixture and pie crust ready; then pour off the water from the pie plant and stir it in crust and bake without a top crust, the mixture, then turn it into your then take the whites of two eggs and make into a meringue and spread over the top.

It is important that they make the required gain in flesh, most of which should be put on in the last half of the summer. Beginning at this time and continuing until they farrow, the feed sows will ordinarily need some grain or other concentrated feeds. With legume forage crops these should be largely home-grown. With ordinary pastures, a small amount of some protein feed, like tankage, linseed-oil meal, shorts or middlings should be fed with the corn or other grains. The amount of grain to feed, or the necessity of feeding grain at all will depend entirely on conditions, and will be shown by the condition of flesh the sows are in. The judgment of the feeder, consequently, must always be relied on to determine how much to feed at any time.

NOT SO HERE, MY BOY

But shed a tear for those of us who must have the old one overhauled again! I took my Patriarchal chariot in for its fourth spring tuning up last week.

"What do you think she'll need done to 'er this year?" I asked the chief mechanic as I race the motor for him.

He cocked his ear appraisingly, took a look under the hood, jumped up and down on the running board a few times and considered.

"Sounds pretty darned good to me," he said. "Just a little tightening up here and there and she'll be O. K."

"Fine!" I exclaimed with relief. "You fix 'er up."

Yesterday I got the bill:

Relining brakes.
Grinding valves.
Thirty-two piston rings.
Adjusting carburetor.
Rewiring dome light.
Straightening body panel.
New universal joint.
Replace oil filter.
Grease and oil job.
General tightening up.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

President Hoover, supporting on a new study of unemployment in anticipation of another hard winter, summoned John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, to the White House for a discussion on bringing about closer cooperation among all Federal, state and private agencies dealing with the situation. The President's move had hardly been revealed before Secretary Doak came out flatly in favor of a six-hour day and a five-day week for workers in industry as well as in the government.

A few hours after President Hoover had summoned John Barton Payne to the White House to propose a further study of unemployment conditions, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued a statement, predicting that the coming winter will be the worst since the depression began. Mr. Green said that the prospects were that 7,000,000 industrial workers alone would be idle, which is 700,000 more than in January last when unemployment reached its peak. To meet this condition he proposed a program, the outstanding feature of which is a systematic shortening of work hours.

Much speculation in regard to what further efforts, if any, the administration may make to have industry maintain existing wage levels resulted from the publication in part in dispatches from Pawtucket, R. I., of a letter by Secretary Lamont to Representative Condon, in which Mr. Lamont discussed the government's relation to the problem. The Lamont letter, which was in reply to one Representative Condon had sent to President Hoover, stated that while conclusions reached at the White House conferences late in 1929 had succeeded remarkably in sustaining wages, some industries were now "faced with the prospect of closing down altogether and thus creating more unemployment, or alternatively, seeking temporary wage reductions." The latter declaration was being interpreted in some news dispatches as a suggestion by Mr. Lamont that wages might in some instances be temporarily reduced to prevent increased unemployment.

Allied Printing Trades Council of New York State, in convention at Niagara Falls, adopted a resolution citing the unemployment of "millions of wage earners of the United States," and urging President Hoover to call Congress in extraordinary session immediately for the purpose of issuing bonds and appropriating funds for a system of public works and improvements. The council suggested that the projects be of a character so varied as to provide employment for every adult citizen seeking work. It urged a method of procedure that would abolish delays occasioned by "red tape."

In a series of articles in the Saturday Evening Post Senator Geo. H. Moses, of New Hampshire, in discussing the greater readiness with which the Senate now yields to organized pressure, tells a story that is not calculated to increase respect for that body's courage. He calls an occasion when a dozen Senators were gathered in the cloak room just prior to voting upon a measure which was on final passage. All expressed their opinions of the bill. Without exception they were hostile. But when the bell rang and they trooped into the Senate Chamber ten of the twelve voted for it. He adds that this is not an isolated instance though he remembers none where "the percentages were so astounding." This is a satisfactory explanation of the growth of organized propaganda in favor of good, bad and indifferent bills before Congress.

The battle between Republican and Democratic leaders over the tariff took on new phases when chairman of the Finance Committee, in an open letter to Senator Walter F. George, Democrat, of Georgia, challenged him to specify his objections to the tariff law. At the same time, there was a clash of statements between Senator L. J. Dickinson, Republican, of Iowa, and Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the Finance Committee. Senator Dickinson also called on Senator Harrison to name the rates to which he objected and charged Mr. Harrison with inconsistency in his tariff votes. He asserted that the Mississippian was willing to allow the industrial rates in the measure to go through if he got a tariff on long staple cotton. The statements of Senators Smoot and Dickinson were given out through the Republican National Committee.

If, as is reported, Vice President Curtis has decided not to be a candidate for his present office again, it is not at all improbable that Senator Jim Watson, of Indiana will be President Hoover's mate in 1932. Mr. Hoover probably will not want Jim Watson as his colleague on the ticket, but a President does not always have his way about who shall run with him. Watson is now an avowed candidate. He is a shrewd politician and he has many friends in the Old Guard of the Republican party. There is probably no one whom that element in the party would delight more to honor with a vice presidential nomination.

Chairman Fletcher of the Tariff Commission has been persuaded by President Hoover to remain two additional months at his post to complete important tariff adjustments. The former American Ambassador to Rome previously announced that he had planned to terminate his services with the commission September 16. At that time, he said, he had nothing in view. A White House statement says President Hoover believes that the commission, under the chairmanship of Fletcher, had proved "it can and will make all proper and necessary adjustments" in tariff rates. "The President appreciates the willingness of Mr. Fletcher to remain another two months" the statement said, "thus giving the commission the benefit of his fine abilities."

The Department of Commerce will occupy its new $17,000,000 building on next January 1, it was definitely announced by Malcolm Kerlin, executive assistant to Secretary Lamont. The moving of equipment will be in charge of Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant, 3d, director of public buildings and public parks, and Mr. Kerlin estimated that the tremendous task will not be completed for at least two months. All bureaus of the department, with the exception of the Bureau of Stanards and Census Bureau, will be moved in to the new building at the beginning of the year. The greatest task in the moving line will be the transferring of the Patent Office equipment. Mr. Kerlin believes that this will not be accomplished within sixty days. The building is understood to be about 93 per cent completed.

The Woman Voter, edited by Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, of Chevy Chase, in its August issue endorses William Gibbs McAdoo for the Democratic nomination for President in 1932. "Nearly every State has many capable citizens able to fill the highest office in the nation with credit, and it would be difficult to mention a candidate that would not be preferable to Alfred E. Smith and superior to Franklin D. Roosevelt. Both can be defeated for the nomination," an editorial says.

The veterans administration and the Treasury, the two Federal agencies immediately concerned with loans to World War veterans under the Adjusted Compensation act, have declined to be brought into a controversy with the American Legion concerning the operation and effects of the act as amended by the last Congress. Officials of both departments said they preferred not to comment on an article in the current issue of the American Legion Monthly, in which it is asserted has cost the taxpayers nothing, but actually has saved them about $14,000,000 in the current fiscal year.

The article was written by Mr. Ralph T. O'Neil, national commander of the Legion, in reply to charges of critics that the loans to exsoldiers under the new legislation already has cost the taxpeyers about a billion dollars. It is well known, of course that the Treasury, which has the job of raising the money for the loans, does not hold the Legion commander's view of the operation of the plan and feels his argument is fallacious in numerous respects, but it also is unwilling to get into another bitter controversy over the matter like those which raged throughout the country both in 1924 and 1931 when legislation on the subject was before Congress.

While no final decision will be reached until the last of August as to government's financing program, which will involve the retirement of $634,387,000 in bills, the general market situation is now being considered by acting Secretary of the Treasury Mills. The principal question to be decided is whether the short-term securities will be replaced with long-term bonds. Mr. Mills said that it was too early to venture a prediction as to what form the new issues would take.

Secretary of War Hurley expressed the opinion that the United States should get out of what he termed the "Panama mess," wherein the United States pulled Panama from bankruptcy, although admitting that part of the Panama government stood with the insurrectionists during the country war of the "mess," Hurley contended, as a matter of some doubt. Secretary Hurley maintained that the exercise was under negotiation between the State Department and Panama, but the State Department went said that although negotiations had been under way they had lapsed some time ago and had not been renewed, while officials of the Panaman Legation said that the negotiations concerned only a part of the city of Colon anyway and would not remedy the situation which exists in the red light districts.

Next Saturday Mrs. Hoover will be in Akron, Ohio, to christen the huge new Navy dirigible Akron, and instead of the new lilliett beverage smashed over it, or as in case of the giant Graf Zeppelin when liquid air was used, Mrs. Hoover will set in flight a flock of white pigeons, pronouncing the words, "I christen thee," as she does so. With her ardent love of nature this seems a fitting and unique method of giving the Akron to the air.

A week later Mrs. Hoover will christen two steamships, the Talamanca and the Sergovia, to be launched at Newport News. The plan is for her to motor to Newport News and after the christening continue to the President's camp. Just what unique methods Mrs. Hoover will evolve for this ceremony is not known, but as the vessels were built for the United Mail Steamship Co., a subsidary of the United Fruit Co., unfermented grape juice—from the luscious white California grapes—might do.

The Wickersham Commission's condemnation of the American prison system was met by a statement from Sanford Bates, director of Federal prisons, that the Government had put into effect all the major improvements it suggested. Mr. Bates reviewed one by one the commission's recommendations that "cruel and inhuman" discipline be banned by law; that fortress-like and unhealthy prisons be superceded; that the insane, diseased and drug-addicted be segreted; that the systems of parole and probation be extended; that idleness within prisons be overcome, and that prison officials be especially trained and above politics. His answer was that under the reorganized prison program instituted by the Government before last July almost every one of these steps had been or was being made effective.

GOVERNOR FOR PUBLISHER

TO PUBLISH STATEMENT

A striking example of the soundness of the new banking statutes so quickly a complete statement of receipts and disbursements was disclosed last week when the Kenton county Fiscal Court was indicted for failure to publish such a statement. Four other counties were lodged against the court, misappropriation of public funds, payment of illegal claims, exceeding the revenue derived from taxation and failure to guard against waste and extravagance.

The Kenton Fiscal court is alleged to have entered into a bond deal with Caldwell & Company with the agreement the $30,000 to be paid for the bonds was to remain on deposit with the banking firm, resulting in its loss upon the failure of the firm. The indictments say

A TREE SITTER

A tree sitter up in Middlesboro claims he will remain up a tree long enough to break the 1,341 hour record held by two boys in Oklahoma.

Last year there were many tree sitters. It became necessary to give daily accounts of how long each had been up, what they were eating, what comments they had to make on the world's affairs.

There never was a sillier fad but like other things of this kind it obtained a wide vogue. This year most of the boys and girls seem to realize that there is no sense in spending an enjoyable summer on the limb of a tree.—Lexington Herald.

Principal Or Interest ?

We believe a depositor is more interested in the safety of his principal rather than a PROMISE of high income return.

For that reason this bank joins with the banks of Boone County and the banks of our neighboring Counties in announcing

A Safe and Conservative Rate of
3% ON TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITS
on and after August 1st., 1931

When money rates were high in the open market and City correspondents were able to allow a high rate on daily balances, banks could afford to pay 4% on Time and Savings Deposits. With these rates considerably reduced and it being no longer profitable to make investments that will return a profit on 4% money, we think it a sound and conservative move on the part of the Bankers to pay a rate of interest that will enable the banks to continue a sound banking policy.

We will appreciate having our friends call in and discuss any matter of business with us.

President Orders Expense Cut In Governmental Departments

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Heimes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

While not so spectacular as his moratorium pronouncement, President's Hoover's "cut to the bone" order to his Cabinet officers and the hands of all independent bureaus and commissions "strikes closer to home" and should receive the enthusiastic support of every tax-payer in the United States.

It requires no Einstein to convince the dumbest of us that in the matter of Federal expenditures we have reached the dead line'—possibly already we may have somewhat overstepped it — and while the President's sharp demand that the cost of running the Government must be materially reduced was addressed, primarily and ostensibly, to his heads of departments, as a matter of fact it was directed to the American people and to Congress. It was his way of serving notice that an era of unprecendented and still growing extravagance must come to an end.

It is conceded on all sides that the task of sharply curtailing expenditures for the current fiscal year and bringing estimates for the 1933 fiscal year within the limits fixed by the President is a mighty big undertaking, and probably never before in the history of this country has so drastic an economy order been issued from the White House. Mr. Hoover implies in his letter that if his warning is not heeded the Bureau of the Budget, to which the depaartmental estimates go before being sent to the President for transmission to Congress, will use the paring knife without mercy.

In the fact that while estimates for the next fiscal year are mounting higher the revenues continue to fall off lies the immediate reason for the President's recent demand for economy of the strictest kind. At the close of the last fiscal year, June 30, the Treasury was faced with a deficit of more than $800,000,000, and that does not tell the whole story of our public finances. Among the receipts not available to the Treasury during the next fiscal year will be the $250,000,000 heretofore paid on the war debts and applied, in the year's budget, to current accounts. That is very much the same thing as at once adding so much more to the deficit.

The President has evidently come to the conclusion that the onward march of Federal expenditures must come to a halt. In recent weeks he has repeatedly gone over the situation in conferences with heads of the executive departments. Nevertheless, in his letter now made public, Mr. Hoover calls attention to the fact that the estimates as of July 1 are higher than those of June 1, and higher, also, than the estimates of expenditures actually made during the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1931. In view of the repeated demands for economy in the Government service this seems incredible.

On top of all this is the declining yield from taxes and the maturing debts to be met. No wonder there is said to be every prospect that before the end of the year the Government will be compelled to make another issue of bonds, to the amount, it is conservatively estimated, of at least $500,000,000. Except as a makeshift in an emergency, this is a most unsatisfactory way of meeting the needs of the Government. In one way or made equal to the expenditures, and there is no way in sight at this time to do this except by raising the rate of old taxes or levying new taxes. It would require political courage of a high order for the President, on the eve of a Presidential election, to lay the unpalatable truth before Congress and recommend higher taxation. But in spite of the unpopularity of such procedure, unless something is done by way of retrenchment—and very material retrenchment—it may become necessary.

Furthermore, the attitude of Congress is another thing which it is necessary for the President to take into consideration. It is just as hard for Congress as it is for the average individual to come down to strict economy after an orgy of frenzied extravagance. And there will be politically powerful groups and blocs aplenty clamoring for more and more. An insistent demand at the present time is for the issue of bonds to the amount of five billion dollars for the purpose of providing work for the unemployed and relieving distress. Ignoring all the other proposals, present and future, the interest on such a loan, added to the present cost of Government, would necessitate additional taxation. Generous as Congress is inclined to be with the people's money, it has just as little desire as has the President to increase taxation—particularly at a time like this.

At the same time, Congress will not look with favor upon the President's plan to cut down existing appropriations as well as to oppose new ones. Therefore, undoubtedly there are squalls ahead no matter which way the wind blows.

While calling for strict economy in the new budget estimates, President Hoover has ordered a re-examination of all Federal activities to determine whether it would be practical for the Government to undertake further public-works projects to relieve unemployment. During the past few weeks, as the depression showed no signs of early abatement, the Administration has received complaints that the Government was not creating as much work as it could. Most of the protests included a call for additional projects, and the President's response in many instances has been to ask the complainant to suggest wherein the Government could do more than it is doing.

There has been no official announcement on this subject, but it is understood that there were various resulting proposals. One is said to be for the creation of a system of four transcontinental motor highways; another for "cleaning up" the national parks; still another for a national home-building movement. The four way highway project was studied, it is said, and found to be impracticable. The clean-up of national parks is understood to involve changes which park authorities submit would destroy the nature of the parks. Whether or not final judgment has been passed on the home building project, high Administration officials are said to have declared that it would not be economic. Some of these officials believe a project of the kind proposed is to impede permanent recovery rehabilitation.

In the meantime, the President is pressing his examination of the general field of governmental construction activity in order to be sure that the Administration is overlooking no possibilities for more. Mr. Hoover has ordered a complete check-up of the progress on all projects authorized in the Government's $700,000,000 emergency program. The President wants to know whether there has been any unjustifiable delays, and if any, the reasons therefor. His action followed criticism, in which joined even such stanch Administration supporters as Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, that much of the work of Congress and the President authorized has been slowed up by Government red tape, so that all the additional employment that was expected has not materialized.

It is reported that the President intends to cut through much red tape wherever possible.

O. D. Bertram, a Wayne county farmer, reports a yield of 2,250 pounds of alfalfa from five-eights of an acre at the first cutting.

Alfalfa averaged a ton to the acre at the first cutting in Montgomery county, and many second cuttings were nearly as good. Korean lespedeza and sudan grass are doing well.

Twenty Grant county farmers have purchased purebred cattle this summer. County Agent J. E. Wilson is conducting a purebred sires campaign.

THE HITCH-HIKING MENACE

The hitch-hike p is becoming more and more unpopular. And there is small wonder, especially in Kentucky, where motorists have had so many sad and costly experiences with these thumb tourists. It often seems selfish and hard-hearted to turn down the ride beggars, but that is the only safe and sensible thing to do.

How is one to know whether the hitch-hiker is an innocent pedestrian, merely looking for a lift, or whether he is a prospective criminal seeking an opportunity to rob or even murder the motorist who befriends him? The hitch-hiker, darting out on the streets and highways to beg is a traffic menace of the worst sort. Then, too, if he is given a ride and the car is wrecked he usually loses no time in suing his benefactor for damages.

Three States have passed laws prohibiting hitch-hiking and similar legislation is being considered by a number of others. Whether the hitch-hiking nuisance can be successfully controlled by law, remains to be seen. But, there is one sure way to end it. If every motorist will consistently pass up persons who loiter along the streets and roads begging rides the nuisance will be eliminated in a hurry.—Paris Kentuckian-Citizen.

Renew Your Health by Purification

Any physician will tell you that "Perfect Purification of the System is Nature's Foundation of Perfect Health." Why not rid yourself of chronic ailments that are undermining your vitality? Purify your entire system by taking a thorough course of Calotabs,—once or twice a week for several weeks—and see how Nature rewards you with health.

Calotabs purify the blood by activating the liver, kidneys, stomach and bowels. Trial package, 10 cts. Family package, 35 cts. All dealers. (Adv.)

Prospects for red fruit this fall in Owen co., are declared as "unusually favorable." Peaches will make a heavy yield.

Small grain yields in Pulaski county were the largest in the history of the county, wheat making as high as 45 bushels and oats 70 bushels to the acre.

Many farmers are topping tobacco and will cut in August. Tobacco cut in warm weather usually makes better and will be ready for sale earlier.

Let's cut through this welter of words
WHEN you set out to buy tires, don't you really want the most miles and the utmost in safety at the lowest possible price.
That being your objective, which tire should you buy?
If the experience of 20,000,000 motorists means anything, you should certainly buy Goodyears.
But if you try to puzzle through the welter of statistics on thicknesses, weights and diameters you lose the main issue and are as much at sea as ever.
The one and only reliable guide for you to follow is the seasoned preference of the public.
And that preference is overwhelmingly for Goodyear.
This fact expressed year after year by Goodyear's great leadership is concretely told again in the findings of an impartial investigation made by an unbiased dependable institution that asked 205,000 car owners this simple question:
QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

There's the only buying guide that means anything to you car owners.

GOODYEAR ALL-WEATHER

THE EVIDENCE

My readers may possibly wonder why I am so frequently deprecating the six o'clock dinner; this, when so many of our foremost citizens indulge the feast as a sort of triumph of civilization! and, when so many of our leading physicians and dieticians patronize it without saying anything about it."

(1) From a study of aged men and women, I find the longest-lived to be those who are hearty breakfast eaters and who do not load the digestive tract at the evening meal.

(2) From a study of vital statistics, I find that, six o'clock dinner devotees succumb to "heart disease" of cerebral hemorrhage, never later than the middle sixties. These are city dwellers, who are too busy to eat necessary meals until the day's business is done.

(3) If I were to inject the expressed juice of the average six o'clock dinner into a patient's veins I feel sure I would kill him instantly! Well—the six o'clock glutton gets those juices into his veins more slowly, hence he is "saved about dying of "heart disease" than he'd be with my intravenous injection.

(4) The tired body—the tired, half-exhausted nervous system cannot supply the necessary gastric and pancreatic fluids to digest a heavy six o'clock feed; hence the juices of the "gorge" are taken into the system by absorption, and in a shape that cannot be utilized in the repair of bodily tire—not all, nor half of it can be said to be fit.

(5) Hence, it is carried with the blood-current, an active poison, unfit for the human systemic repair. Hence the eater does not want breakfast next morning—has a feeble appetite at noon—but is ready for the disappointing overfed at the following six o'clock. The very arteries of the heart become poisoned slowly. The vessels of the brain give way in their walls. Short breath and apoplectic symptoms develop slowly, insidiously. They finally kill:

From Our Early Files

THIRTY YEARS AGO

Local News

Typhoid fever is reported from two or three neighborhoods in the county.

Edson Riddell has invented a switchboard for the Boone County Telephone Co. It was put in yesterday and worked to perfection.

Clinton Weaver has been suffering considerably with sciatica for several days.

Mrs. Geo. Blythe was visiting Mrs. F. P. Walton, at Norwood, O., a few days last week.

The first load of watermelons of the season was brought to town from the Belleview bottoms, last Thursday. They were delicious and sold readily at good prices.

J. H. Clore, of Florence neighborhood, was whetting a mowing scythe, one day last week, when his hand slipped and the blade of the scythe severed the leader in his thumb. Dr. Rouse dressed the wound.

Stock for the Lawrenceburg fair has been arriving for several days, and the secretary writes that they have the promise of more stock than has been on the grounds for many years. Present prospects, he says, are that every race will fill, and persons attending the Lawrenceburg fair this year will be well satisfied.

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court convened Monday with Judge John M. Lassing presiding and Circuit Clerk James W. Duncan and his handsome deputy, his daughter, Miss Ella, ready to keep the record, while Sheriff Elmer Beall and his deputy, B. B. Allphin, and Jailer Adams were in their places to obey the court's commands.

The sheriff and his deputy were sworn in regard to summoning grand and petit jurors, after which the grand jury was organized as follows:

James Hind, foreman, Verona.
W. C. Rouse, Limaburg.
Geo. E. Rouse, Limaburg.
James Snyder, Petersburg.
O. P. Phipps, Burlington.
James D. Mitchell, Burlington.
James Loder, Petersburg.
Courtney Walton, Petersburg.
W. G. Rouse, Beaver.
John Hodges, Rabbit Hash.
James M. Holmes, Rabbit Hash.
Harvey McGlasson, Bullittsville.

Judge Lassing's charge to the grand jury was not lengthy, but was clear cut, and embraced all the offenses to which the statute refers, and the charge made a most favorable impression on all who heard it. Judge Lassing appears to be at home on the bench, and disposes of business like a veteran.

Attys. Joel C. Clore, of Cincinnati, and Elijah Greene, of Covington, were the only attorneys from a distance, who took part in the proceedings the first day. Attorney Dyas arrived by the evening bus.

The court convened Tuesday morning the following well known attorneys, in addition to the above named, were present: Commonwealth's Atty. M. D. Gray, H. Clay White, B. F. Menifee, O. M. Rogers, F. E. Curey, John S. Gaunt, Parker Dickerson.

Petersburg

Everett Helm's little boy has flux.

Joe McWethy has 1,200 bushels of old corn on hand. R. J. Akin has 500 bushels.

Miss Mae Evans, the handsome and accomplished daughter of W. T. Evans, is said to be the best performer on the piano in Northern Ky.

Capt. Billy Hartman caught a floater, last Thursday. His name was Milligan from papers found on his person. It is supposed he lived at Detroit, but had registered at a Cincinnati hotel as from Carrollton, Ky.

Walton

Chas. H. Lermond is at work in the car repairing shop in Ludlow.

A bridge over the Short Line road where the Southern crosses that road, was on fire Saturday night, but was discovered in time to be extinguished before any great damage was done.

Gasburg

Born to Al Mann and wife, a 10 pound boy.

Melons are going to market in considerable numbers, but are very small.

Bud Moreland has returned from Illinois. He reports the crops in much worse condition than here.

John Url Lloyd and wife were viewing Split Rock and the knobs and cliffs on Earnest Grant's farm last week. He will visit this section again this week and investigate the curious formation of rocks near your correspondent's house.

A great deal of wheat is being hauled through here to the flouring mill in Petersburg. Cisterns all empty and stock water on some farms very scarce. Peak's branch, which runs through this place, is furnishing most of the water for the surrounding country.

From present indications there will be more moving among tenants next spring than for many years.

Two months ago every farmer wanted to buy hogs, now they all want to sell.

Union

Miss Mary Hedges has returned from Carrollton.

Miss Martha Lassing is home again. Do you want to know how I know.

Mr. and Mrs. John Url Lloyd, of Cincinnati, spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Voshell, last week.

As John Delehunty and Miss Ella Norman were on their way to the club Friday evening, the horse became unmanageable, turning the buggy over and doing considerable damage to both the occupants and vehicle.

Hathaway

W. G. McElroy has typhoid fever.

David Clements was quite ill last week.

Rev. John McAtee preached at Beech Grove last Fridaynight.

Mrs. Fannie McNeely and little son spent last Monday with Mrs. Sarah White.

Farmers are getting scarce of stock water. Many are driving their stock to Gunpowder.

Robert Clements is making preparations for the erection of a new house this fall on his place near Grange Hall.

Rev. O. M. Huey, of Carrollton, spent last week visiting his brother R. L. Huey, and other relatives in the county.

Verona

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Powers entertained quite a number to dinner last Thursday.

The extended drouth is causing forrage to sell very much and prices is up for dried fodder, I notice.

Wheat is becoming scarce. Wagon and delivered are asked 100 per bushel. Everybody is hauling water. Fruit is drying on the trees, corn will not make anything; tobacco dying badly.

The 11 o'clock train set fire to W. M. Whitson's farm last Friday, and it looked for a while as though every thing on the place would burn. Luckily Mr. Whitson had just finished threshing, and a lot of hands were at his assistance. A plow was procured and a furrow made which prevented the fire from reaching any of his buildings. Fencing and grass were destroyed.

Flickertown

John Baldon and family, and Willie Worford were visiting in Aurora a few days last week.

Hugh Arnold, of Belleview, is a frequent visitor to this neighborhood.

Woody Sullivan caught a bass last Friday, that weighed over 3 pounds.

Woody Sullivan has moved in the house recently vacated by Egbert Nichols.

Old men say that such a drouth was never before known in the history of Boone county.

Francesville

Mrs. Bruce Henry is somewhat better.

Manlius Goodridge has had another severe attack of stomach trouble.

A number of our citizens attended the Grange picnic at Harvest Home grounds on Saturday, and reported a delightful time.

FORTY YEARS AGO

Local

The Harvest Home picnic will be held two days again this year.

The barbecue at Walton last Saturday, closed the campaign in this part of the State.

One day last week Huey & Blythe of this place sold to parties in Ohio twelve very fine lambs for $72.

Richard White, who lives near town on the Belleview pike, threshed 210 bushels of wheat from ten acres. He sold some of it at 85c per bushel.

Mr. Erastus Huey's little boy who was injured by the falling timbers of the barn destroyed by the storm has improved very little since he was hurt.

Miss Kitty Riggs, who has been visiting Judge Riddell and wife, returned home Sunday.

Limaburg

Geo. Straffer, of Louisville, was visiting S. J. Rouse last week.

Owen Aylor gave the young people a dance Saturday night, and all present had a very enjoyable time.

Union

J. M. Lassing's smiling face was seen on our streets Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. John Presser preached to a large audience at the Baptist church on Sunday. Rev. Presser is quite young, but judging from the earnest energetic and logical manner of his speaking he promises to become quite prominent as a minister.

J. W. Watt's crop of 14 acres of wheat averaged 31 bushels to the acre.

Marce Riddell is handling a stallion the property of a Mason county gentleman.

Mr. Dan Lawell, of near Rabbit Hash, was in town last Saturday. He received from England, one day last week three very fine Oxford-down sheep—a buck and two ewes, the buck weighs 285 pounds and the ewes 155 and 157 pounds—they are yearlings.

The bugs played havoc with the willows in the Belleview bottoms this season. These pests have been very little trouble for several years, and the willow crop was increasing, but the appearance of these bugs will give it another setback.

Allie Corn, of Bullittsville, had a crop of over 30 acres of wheat that averaged 25 bushels to the acre.

One more sermon will close Rev. Penn's labors at this place for the present conference year.

J. M. Lassing made a business trip to Indianapolis last week.

Limaburg

Owen Aylor had a fine colt to get killed one day last week by falling in a sink hole.

Work has begun on the new pike from this place to Anderson's Ferry.

Union

Spencer Smith is again seriously ill with stomach trouble.

The corn crop in this precinct promises to be a large one. Tobacco also looks fine.

Dr. Crouch has added more shelves to his drug store and has increased his stock of drugs accordingly.

The Shelbina, Missouri, Democrat publishes a trade review of its town, and with it gives the pictures of its leading business men, and among them we find the familiar face of T. Ford Hughes, a native of this county. Of him, the Democrat says:

"T. F. Hughes, whose hunt of the Waverly, was born in Boone county, 'Old Kentuck' April 9th, 1856. The most important step in his career, in fact the one that made him, was his marriage in 1882 to Miss Fannie C. Carter. Next in importance to his marriage was his migration to Missouri. As the great Stephen A. Douglas said of Vermont, so we say of Kentucky, 'It is a grand place to be born, provided you emigrate young.' The fact that so many Kentuckians have been of the same opinion is confirmation of our statement. Look over Missouri, Southern Illinois and nearly everywhere else and see them by millions. The subject of this sketch left his native State in '65 and settled first near Tulip, Monroe county, but again he showed his good sense in coming to Shelby. After farming awhile he bought a place in Hunnewell, named it the National Hotel; this he and his better nine-tenths kept for the accommodation of the traveling public. This is where the wisdom of his marriage came into view.

"Some five years ago Mr. Hughes disposed of his Hunnewell hotel, and took charge of the Waverly here, which he has so conducted as to make for it and himself an enviable reputation. Four acts have clearly demonstrated Mr. Hughes' wisdom: 1st and most important his marriage, 2nd his migration to Missouri, 3rd his settlement in Shelby, and last but not least his final choice of Shelbina as a home."

FIFTY YEARS AGO

While trying to move a large stone the other day George Hughes let it fall and catching his leg and came near crusing the bone.

Esquire Baker was in town one day last week and says that his district has the poorest prospect for a corn crop that he remembers for years.

Prof. Johnson taught two classes in penmanship at this place, giving entire satisfaction. He formed many acquaintances while here, and they all entertained a high opinion of him.

Mr. L. H. Dills has just completed a large and well arranged barn on his farm near Bullittsville.

Davis Bros., made their semi-annual invoice of stock at this place last week.

Miss Sophia Finch and Timothy Westbay attended the Loveland Camp meeting last Sunday.

F. Riddell has repaired the street in front of his residence.

The ferry-boat at McVille has been completed and a good one. You can cross the river again at that place.

The Katie-dids and the Katie-didn't's have arrived.

No election watermelons in town Monday.

Mrs. Laura Martin left last Saturday for Somerset, her future home, her husband having been given the position of engineer on that end of the Southern Road.

Elder E. Stephens, the Lord willing, will preach at the Speedwell Grange Hall, at 10 a. m., the 2nd Sunday in this month, and that evening at Florence X-Roads.

The first watermelons of the season came to town last Friday. They were raised by Henry Hall in the Belleview bottoms.

A Louisville mule kicked a negro on the head a few days since. The negro still lives but the mule—has not been heard from.

The annual sale of the Western Kentucky Harvest Breeders' Association at Hopkinsville made an average of approximately $60 for 93 cows and heifers and 16 bulls. The top price for bulls was $125 and for females $100. Breeders consigning cattle to the sale included F. E. White, Pyle Bros., R. L. Woodard, Jr., and Gaither & Rosebrough, all of Hopkinsville; and W. B. Newton, Howard Brame, Brame Bros., and G. J. Giles, all of Oak Grove. Five new herds were founded as a result of the sale. R. J. LOCAL NEWS

Some of the displaced folks being moved from the Burlington-Belleview path, J. D. Baldon, who has been foreman, will go to Long Ridge, Owen county, where the State Road Department has another road under contract. Mr. Baldon has had quite a long experience in road building and in making the state a good man. A few of the present crew on this road will be left to put in culverts.

Miss Bunie Willis, Public Health Nurse for Boone county, has returned from her annual vacation, most of which she spent in the taking of a post-graduate course in Public Health work at Western Reserve University, Cleveland. She reports the "high spot" of her visit was attained in an air plane ride from Detroit to Cleveland.

Sheriff Herbert Snyder again was called to the scene of an auto wreck on the Dixie Highway last Friday night about 11:30 o'clock, when a small passenger car collided with a large freight truck near Green Lawn farm. The driver of the car was slightly scratched, but otherwise he was unhurt. His car was not damaged, but the truck was turned over on its side against a bank on the roadside. The truck, which was enroute from Chattanooga to Cincinnati, was loaded with hemp. It was necessary to transfer the contents to another truck before it could be righted.

THE CHIGGER

The chigger is a pestiferous varmint because he bores into the skin and refuses to be dislodged. He pulls the hole in behind him and access to his abode defies all human ingenuity.

And here's where the rub comes. In endeavoring to reach the source of the irritation, the average person is very likely to produce a secondary infection which might prove serious.

There is nothing serious about the chigger bite, according to the doctors, if you can stand the strain. Mrs. Chigger—and strangely enough she is the one who does the excavating, bores obliquely with her long proboscis in the skin and builds her nest. She invariably picks out a tender spot such as under the knees or around the waist.

If you follow the best medical advice, when Mrs. Chigger is safely nestling under your skin, you will grin and bear it. You may use ammonia water or salt and grease or you may try to dig her out, but the latter is never attended by very gratifying results.

The only encouraging thing to be found on the subject of chiggers is that they don't live long. Their average life in temperate climates is about twenty-five days, which is too long. But there is consolation in the fact that the chiggers of the tropics are as large as mosquitoes and live as long as Methuselah.

Swear at the chiggers if you must, but above all things, don't try to dig them out with your finger nails.

Winchester, Ky., August 3.—With the return of Dr. C. M. Dannelly, president of Kentucky Wesleyan College, from Europe on Tuesday there will begin increased activity in the laying of preliminary plans for the Kentucky Methodist Education Fund campaign that is to get under way late this summer.

Kentucky Wesleyan is one of the two Methodist colleges which will share in the $660,000 fund to be raised in the financial program to be conducted among the 100,000 Methodists of Kentucky. The other institution is Lindsey Wilson Junior College of Columbia.

Dr. Dannelly went to Europe as the delegate of the Winchester Rotary Club to the International Rotarian with him the proxies of 28 of the 51 Rotary Clubs in Kentucky.

Dr. Dannelly, with Dr. R. V. Bennett, president of Lindsey Wilson, and members of the Joint Board of Education of the Louisville and Kentucky conferences will enter actively into the laying of the ground-work for the statewide campaign. Dr. Bennett has been spending this summer in taking advanced work at the University of Kentucky.

Officials of the two schools also will begin shortly the making of preparations for the opening in September of the 1931-32 college sessions, and the entertainment of the Louisville and Kentucky conferees to be held at Columbia, and the latter at Winchester.

Established Precedent

This story is told of the late Senators Spooner of Wisconsin and Allison of Iowa. They were leaving the Capitol one evening and it was raining heavily. "Do you think it will stop?" asked Spooner. "It always has," answered Allison.

"THE VERDICT OF MANKIND"

There appears on this page today a cartoon republished through the courtesy of the Dayton Daily News, the newspaper of former Governor James M. Cox, of Ohio. The quotation, "He Stands Like a Mighty Mountain As Eternal Light Pierces the Clouds," is the heading given by Harry Brenzler, the artist, to this picture.

There is quoted also from Woodrow Wilson a paragraph from an address made by him in his gallant fight to have the United States live up to her obligations to other nations.

"The whole peace of mind of the world depends upon America. The world will not be reassured..... The world will be absolutely in despair if America deserts it. But the thing is inconceivable... America is not going to desert it. For America now is in the presence of the realization of the destiny for which she has been waiting."

The realization of the destiny for which she has been waiting!

It was 12 years ago when Woodrow Wilson uttered those words.

He had returned from Versailles where the treaty of peace had been entered into. Europe looked to the United States for assistance, for guidance, for sympathy and cooperation.

But the Campaign of Hate was on.

Henry Cabot Lodge was working out the plan to discredit the idol of another party.

Philander C. Knox had introduced his resolution for isolation.

Albert Bacon Fall, then a senator, now imprisoned due to the shameless sale of a position of high trust from the President, introduced into the senate of the United States a resolution that this country should withdraw all troops from European soil, desert the allies in the critical hours of reconstruction and repudiate her own debts made as a result of the World War.

* * * * *

That verdict is well on the way to being written.

* * * * *

Those who claimed that the U. S. had no interest in the affairs of other countries, that this nation was self-sufficient, that it could enjoy a "splendid isolation" flanked by mighty oceans, now are blaming "world conditions" for an unprecedented debacle.

France is called "Uncle Shylock" now, for an attitude not dissimilar to that of which the leaders of a political party that gained power through its vicious attacks on Woodrow Wilson proclaimed and boasted.

What would it mean today to have the friendship of all nations based not only upon treaty agreements but upon mutual understanding and commerce? The picture of the United States as a nation with unlimited opportunity, her ships on the seven seas, her salesmen in every port, unable to produce in field and factory a surplus great enough to meet the demands of the whole wide world which is her market, seems faded.

The plan of the isolationists has been weighed in the balance—The Lexington Herald.

HEBRON DEFEATS CONSTANCE

In an exceptionally well pitched game at Hebron last Sunday the Constance team met defeat in a Spinney league contest. Ellis deserved a shut-out, allowing but four hits and striking out ten. A two base drive from the bat of Bob Hafer was the contributing factor in the Hebron victory.

Chemists Find Refuge in Dreamy Spanish Isle

Spain may pass through troublous times but there is one community in that country which is not likely to be disturbed whatever happens. This is the strange colony of wild camels which have made a home for themselves in the lower reaches of the Guadalquivir river. Many years ago an attempt was made to introduce camels for agricultural work in southern Spain. The plan was not a success and these camels whites and all strayed off to fend for themselves. A few of them found a retreat in the vast alluvial plain through which the sluggish stream of the river winds its way to the Gulf of Cadiz.

One could hardly imagine a situation more unlike that to which a camel normally is accustomed. The land is largely water-logged and covered with a dense growth of reeds and rushes many feet in height. From the human point of view, the district is extremely unhealthy, although animal life flourishes.

At the least sign of danger the animals retreat to the swamps, where the ground is so soft that it is impossible for a man to follow. Of course, the broad feet of the camel, which help the creature to walk on loose sand, have also stood it in good stead in these marshes, where a horse or a cow certainly would never be able to travel safely.—Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Diggers Uncover Grave of Bronze-Age Chieftain

The 4,000-year-old grave of a Bronze age chieftain is among the many interesting relics discovered in the course of digging pits for brick works at Schleinbach, near Vienna. Twenty-one different caches, graves and living caves from the Second century, B. C., have been laid bare. The chieftain's grave has been reconstructed as it was first discovered and placed on exhibition in the Lower Austrian museum in Vienna. It contains two skeletons lying face upwards, stretched out close together, in contrast to the skeletons of ordinary tribesmen found in 11 other graves. These were placed in a crouching position, the legs being drawn up and bound in chains weighted with stones, owing to the fear of the resurrection of the bodies. The second body in the grave was without that of the chief's wife, believed to have been buried alive.

He Had His Reason

He is cook on a schooner. Very timidly we poked our head inside the door. He was chopping some meat for hash.

"Come in," he said in broad Hungarianese. We went in. His name is Charley.

"How long have you been a cook, Charley?"

"Fift' year."

We whistled with amazement.

"How old are you, Charley?"

"Sixty-eight."

Fifty years a cook. Apparently the height of ambitionlessness.

We left him to interview the captain.

"Charley, back there—why does he stick to cooking?"

Taciturnly the captain replied:

"Darn good reason—cook gets $80 a month, sailor get $60."—Philadelphia Record.

Penguins Prefer Ice

When eight penguins arrived recently in Europe to be transferred to a Continental zoo, they caused great trouble because they found the climate too warm. The penguin, whose home is in the Antarctic, loves cold weather, and officials tried to devise a means of keeping them cool. All plans failed until a big "ice box" was built for them, and a "house" of heavy planks, with a roof of heat-resisting tar paper, was erected in the box. Each day, 500 pounds of ice, cut in layers, was spread on the floor, and then the birds were quite happy. They slept on the ice—standing up, as is their way! Shrubs and greens surround the "house," and there was a lake where the birds could satisfy their natural love for water.

Study of Languages Old

It is a great error to think that schools for foreign languages are a modern innovation. In almost prehistoric times, some 4,000 years ago, such a school existed on the shores of the eastern Mediterranean, the cross-roads between Asia, Europe and Africa. As many as six languages considered modern by the students of the Fifteenth century B. C. were taught in the university of a town called Zapuna, which was unearthed by two French archeologists. Clay tablets, which served as school books to the philologists of ancient times, and one of the world's first dictionaries, were among the outstanding finds made.

American Postal History

Samuel Osgood was the first postmaster general, appointed by Washington in 1789, after the Constitution was adopted. The first postmaster general in America, however, was Andrew Hamilton, appointed in Colonial days, in 1691. He was succeeded by his son, John Hamilton. Following him, there were four postmasters general, then in 1753 the American colonies were divided into two postal districts, with a postmaster general for each. Benjamin Franklin served as one of these from 1753 to 1774. In July, 1775, the Continental congress made Franklin again postmaster general, and he served until the following year.

BANKERS SUGGEST BANKING REFORMS

Economic Policy Commission of American Bankers Association Recommends Aids to Progress in Banking Business.

FOLLOWING a nation-wide survey of banking conditions and opinion among bankers, the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has made the following recommendations for banking betterment:

"Under the category of improved bank management specific improvements we might summarize are:

"(1) Liquidation or consolidation of banks where changed local economic conditions render this desirable;

"(2) Wider affiliation among state banks with the Federal Reserve System;

"(3) Development of limited branch banking where economic conditions and legal authority make this expedient;

"(4) A more general practice, especially lacking among country banks, to analyze the cost of carrying accounts and other operating details and the establishment of proper service charges to make all classes of function profitable;

"(5) A more general application of the theory and practice of secondary reserves;

"(6) Avoidance by banks of undue borrowing merely to increase their own profits by relending at higher rates, or to over-expand credit to local business in order to increase their own business;

"(7) Cooperation among bankers in local communities through city, county or regional clearinghouses so as to promote mutually beneficial conditions and practices;

"(8) The insistence upon higher educational effort and qualifications among employees, especially those to be trusted with executive duties.

Legislative Measures Proposed

"There are some external measures along moderate legislative and supervisory lines, that we also believe would help strengthen banking. Among these are:

"(1) The broadening in the states of branch banking laws where conditions warrant an extension of this type of banking service to the public;

"(2) The establishment of sound minimum capital funds under which banks will be allowed to operate, which should be materially higher than now prevails in most states; specifically, we believe that the minimum capital with which any new bank shall be chartered, whether state or national, should be at least $50,000;

"(3) The provision of funds and regulations to keep the official staffs of all supervisory departments up to a level of ability and integrity that will universally inspire confidence among bankers whose activities they are empowered to review, and will supply real added defenses to the public interests they are appointed to protect.

"(4) In connection with the policies of bank chartering departments, we would recommend that, even to a greater extent than is now the practice, the greatest care and moderation should be exercised in granting new charters, so as to guard against overbanking or the launching of new banks by unqualified persons, which have doubtless been serious factors in the bank failure situation in the past.

"(5) Also, referring to Federal Reserve practice not requiring legislation, we believe that the Federal Reserve Banks should exercise more freely their rights to examine banks and use their discretionary power to refuse rediscount facilities to banks indulging in objectionable banking methods."

Banker-Farmer Plan

An editorial in Southern Cultivator says: "Favorable comment is being made upon the wisdom and promised results of the farmer-banker agricultural program in Georgia. Industrial leaders and publicists, noting that 115 of the 161 counties in the state have pledged prosecution of the 'live-at-home' farm reform, are regarding the working out of the plan this year as of more interest to American farmers than any developments of the Soviet five-year plan in Russia. Agricultural actuaries are of the opinion that if Georgia farmers, backed by our cooperating bankers and supply men, demonstrate the expected economies and profits of this home-support plan, it will quickly become a contagious custom all over the agricultural areas of the nation. It will be the writing of a new 'declaration of independence' for the individualist farmers of the country, putting them upon solid terms of credit and prosperity without need of recourse to federal or state financial relief measures. The man of the soil who lives year in and year out 'on his own' will stand up in his community an economic freeman, making his own terms with the world of finance and trade."

A meeting of farmers, bankers, and newspaper men of St. Croix County, Wisconsin, recently organized a drive to promote the growing of alfalfa in such quantity as to save the dairyman the expense of commercial feed, and insure greater dairy profits. It is planned in this campaign to have, within the next three years, at least one acre of alfalfa produced for each dairy cow in the county, or a total of about 40,000 acres.

SHARE IT WITH THE FARMER

Declining milk prices have become an increasingly serious problem to American dairy farmers.

The price declines, of themselves, do not necessarily menace the farmers' economic standards. The fault lies in the fact that farmers have been forced to take all of the loss. When milk sold at 16 cents a quart, the distributor received 6.5 cents. With milk selling at thirteen cents or less, the dealer still has his 6.5 cents margin, the farmer absorbing the loss.

The farmer cannot continue to bear the price cuts alone. Reductions in milk prices are a natural part of the drop in commodity prices of all kinds—but now the dealer must bear the burden. He must follow the example of the farmer, who has raised his efficiency and reduced his operating costs to adjust himself to changed conditions.

Out of the 6.5 cent dealer margin, about one-half cent is profit, and about three cents goes for the driver and wagon expense. It is not probable that these items can be appreciably reduced. The cut must come out of the other three cents which goes to overhead. Dealers and farmers must work together in living through the present period of low price levels. Each is necessary to the dairy industry and their difficulties must be shared in common.

TALL PITCHER

FROM BELLEVIEW TAKES VICTORY AFTER MANY WELL PITCHED GAMES. BRAUN, OF HEBRON OUT OF GAME BY ILLNESS

Belleview's mound ace, Bill Rogers, turned in another sterling box effort last Saturday at Hebron and this time, receiving good support from his backers, turned in a brilliant winner. As a result there are still more fans in Boone county willing to predict a future on the diamond for this long boy from the "sand bottoms."

Braun's place in the box was taken by Wilson and he twirled a capable game, six errors behind him doing enough damage to beat any hurler. Belleview made eleven hits off his delivery, six of which were amassed by the bats of Mutt Rogers and Miller, the former socking a home run and two singles.

The game was fairly fought until a three run rally by the visitors in the eighth made the final score 6 to 3. All but one run off Wilson were scored after the side should have been retired.

Although Hebron has played in tough luck during the second half and have failed to win a game, yet they have avowed that they will take the measure of the dashing horde from Petersburg next Saturday afternoon at the Hebron park. Manager Garnett hopes that his star boxman, Braun, who was ill last week, will be able to take his place in the box. Braun has been very effective this year and, with decent support, may turn the tables on Boehler, et al.

Belleview will encounter their age old boodoo, the Walton club, at the Belleview park and, with Rogers working at his best, might bring home the bacon. We shall see.

SAND RUN REVIVAL

The annual revival services of the Sand Run Baptist church started on Tuesday night of this week. The services will be conducted by the pastor, Rev. Avery. Everyone is urged to attend.

LETTER CARRIER EXAMINATION

Ten applicants for the position of letter carrier to fill a vancancy on Grant rural route took the examination for that post here last Saturday. Those who stood the examination were as follows: L. R. McNeely, Bernard McNeely, George Walton, Joe Walton, Wm. Rogers, Kenneth Berkshire, Thos. B. Cason, James Wilson, Joe Brady and Maynard Bodle. Elijah Stephens, examiner for this district and carrier on route three, Burlington, conducted the examination. This was the twelfth examination given by Mr. Stephens.

AND NOW POLLECATS!

Podge Alloway, of Waterloo, read last week in the Recorder about those crows down in his section that were learning the art of topping tobacco and so now he comes across with this one: He says that one day last fall he found a skunk in his barn tearing off the leaves from one of his prize stalks of tobacco. His first impulse, he said, was to take the life of the brute that was taking such liberties with his cherished weed, but, knowing full well the dangerous propensities of the pole cat when attacked by man, he "checked." He watched the animal, which seemed very intent in its work, and to his amazement saw that it was tying the leaves in grades. Podge tells this for the truth and it sounds like it.

Local News

Quite a few ladies are attending court this term.

The weather has been ideal the past few days.

Wanted—Lot of good, clean rags. They must be clean. The Recorder will pay 5 cents per pound.

Miss Mary Phillips is spending a few days with her cousin, Miss Elizabeth Kirby, of Cincinnati.

Mrs. David Wallace Miller and daughter spent Tuesday with Mr, and Mrs. B. E. Aylor.

Miss Katie Kirkpatrick, of Cincinnati, spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Lavania Kirkpatrick.

This office is engaged in printing the Harvest Home catalogues. A day and night force have been busy getting them off the press.

Miss Margaret Skahen, of Cincinnati, was the week-end guest of Miss Mary Furlong.

Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Barlow and Misses Laura and Etta Beemon, of the Pleasant Valley neighborhood, spent Monday with Mrs. Ora Ross.

Milward Stewart, of Ludlow, is spending a few days with his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Hickman.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Peeno, of St. Bernard, Ohio, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Walter Arnold, of the Belleview road.

Elza Poston and family entertained at dinner last Sunday Paul Poston and family, of Hebron, and Mr. and Mrs. King, of Dayton, O.

Little Frank Walton Dempsey, of Erlanger, spent Sunday night and Monday with his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. M. Riddell.

Mrs. Tom Hogan and daughter Sue, Tom Jr., Master Pat, and Miss Fannie Hogan, all of Price Hill, were guests of Miss Mary Furlong last Sunday. Miss Fannie enjoyed the day in the old home town, but thinks there has been many improvements.

E. E. Walton and O. N. Scott, of Petersburg, made the Recorder office a business visit while attending court Monday. Needless to say one of the principal topics of conversation was base ball, as these eminent gentlemen are all steamed up over the chances of their base ball team horning in on the Little World Series next month with Walton.

Twenty Year Sentence Meted Out By Court For Florence Hold-Up

Jury Is Out But Few Minutes In Robbery Case—Russell Clarke And Earl Giezentaner Will Be Taken To Reformatory This Week—W. H. Rucker Appointed To Defend Mills And Case Is Continued To December Term

The August term of the Boone Circuit Court opened its first days session here Monday with a crowded docket in prospect.

When court convened Monday it was predicted that jury trials in criminal cases might occupy the greater portion of the first week. Continuances, however, proved to be the order of the day and as a result the trial docket was relieved hurriedly, the actual time spent in trial by jury when court adjourned Tuesday afternoon having occupied a space of but a few minutes.

These few minutes, however, proved to be fateful ones for Russell Clark and Earl Giezentaner, of Detroit and Canada, who were charged with the robbery of the Florence Deposit Bank on June 8. These two men were jointly indicted early Monday by the August grand jury with two other men, Oscar Jackson and Fred Agee, neither of whom were tried with Clark and Giezentaner.

Clark and Giezentaner were represented by Detroit counsel and each entered a plea of guilty after a special agreement with the Commonwealth by which an agreed state of facts was presented to the jury in statements from defense attorney and Ward Yager, Commonwealth's Attorney. No sworn testimony was heard by the jury, so that the trial of the case was practically shortened [illegible] jury was [illegible] court and returned in record time with a verdict of twenty years in the penitentiary, thus putting an abrupt end to Boone county's most daring hold-up in her history.

The facts in the case will be recalled by most readers of the Recorder . They will remember that on June 8th, at noon two men entered the Florence Bank and at the point of a gun ordered Mrs. Eva R. Miller, the only cashier present, to turn over the cash. They will recall that she handed them $4,984.00 and that they made away in a car alleged to have been driven by Fred Agee, who has not yet been been apprehended, and that Gietzbaner and Clark were arrested a few days later in Detroit by Sheriff Herbert Snyder and Deputy Sheriff W. B. Cotton, aided by Covington police. Covington officers wanted them for other jobs in Covington and they later were identified as having been parties to two robberies there.

The car used in the robbery is alleged to have been returned to Jackson's garage in covington and the loot was said to have been divided at his home next door.

Clark and Gietzentaner will be taken to Frankfort by local officers later this week.

Mills Case Continued

Appointed counsel in the case of the Commonwealth against Jeff Mills having surrendered the case it became necessary for the court to appoint a new attorney to defend the man charged with the killing of Charley Young near Big Bone last November.

Judge Vallandingham appointed Harper Rucker, Cincinnati Attor- [illegible] defendant and Mr. Rucker, pleading his ignorance of the facts in the case, obtained a continuance until December so that he might prepare a defense.

Mills was tried at the April term and also at the last December term each trial resulting in a hung jury.

Historic Old Bullittsburg Recognized As Oldest Church

By PAUL H. GARBER
(Kentucky Times-Star)

In 1797, the year George Washington was finishing his second term as President of the UUnited States, a hardy band of pioneers in Boone County, Kentucky, were building a church.

The same church still stands and remains a place of worship. It has survived the elements, Indian warfare and all destructive influences. Today it gives promise of rounding out another century as a house of God. The pioneer workmen built better than they had any idea. Its thick walls are just as sturdy as they were in the infant days of the Republic.

The structure is located seven mi elsnorthwest of Burlington, in the midst of a community known as Bullittsburg. To members of the Baptistt faith in Northern Ky., it is known as the "mother church." From it sprang all Baptist congregations in Northern Kentucky. To the majority of Baptists, Bullitt's Botomts, where the church was founded in 1794, is known as North Bend.

The Bullittt's Bottoms settlement was one of a few scattered throughout Northern Kentucky. It was, perhaps, the first one to erect a church.

The "mother church" was constituted as the "Baptist Church of Christ," according to Mrs. George Kreylich of Burlington, a member of the congregation and an authority on its history. It apparently is the oldest church left standing in Kentucky. As far as is known the churches erected at about the same date or prior to it, have been torn down for one reason or another.

Records Guarded Carefully

Records of the church are guarded carefully in a vault at the Boone County Court House at Burlington.

A persual of these records reveals that Joseph Redding and William Cave were the ttwo men who had the most to do with organizing the church in 1794. Elder John Taylor of Virginia moved to the settlement with his family and was ordained as its first minister in 1797.

The first members of the church according to records, were Lewis Deweese, John Hall, Eliza Hall, Chichester Mathews, Joseph Smith and Lennah Smith. Whether the descendants of these pioneers still live in Northern Kentucky could not be ascertained.

The settlement was known as "Bullitt's Bottoms," according to Mrs. Kreylich, because a Mr. Bullitt owned the greater portion of the land in that section. Doubtless this is Thomas Bullitt, who surveyed and laid out a town on the site now occupied by the city of Louisville in 1773. A Kentucky historian, Ed. Porter Thompson, relates how Bullitt negotiated with the Indians at a point on the Ohio opposite old Chillicothe. Bullitt told the Indians of the plan of white men to settle in Kentucky and apparently obtained their consent to proceed. It appears likely that while he was in this section he staked off a portion of the land in Boone County for himself.

The new settlement of Bullittsburg, or Bullitt's Bottoms, was exposed to Indian depredations, Mrs. Kreylich points out in her discussion, but there are no records to prove that the church or members of its congregation were ever attacked.

After the church building was constructed things went along very smoothly. Other pious men made their way to Kentucky and the new settlement. LLate in 1797 Elder George Eve of Virginia arrived and united with the church. He assisted Pastor Taylor in spreading the Gospel until 1800.

"During the years following," Mrs. Kreylich states, "many able men were active in the church. Among them were Chichester Mathews, Philemon Vorter, Wm. Cave, Absalom Graves, Wm. Gaines, Jeremiah Kirtley and Thomas Henderson. The last named, Henderson, was a minister of considerable repuattion.

Served by Two Ministers

Ministers were more plentiful in those days than at present, it seems, as the records show that two or more pastors served the church at the same time.

Eager to see the Gospel spread to other sections, the Bullittsburg folk went to adjoining settlements to organize churches. It was thru the zeal of these pious men and women that the early Northern Kentuckians owe their religious training. Many churches were established by them in Southern Indiana as well.

Beginning in 1822, Elder Robert Kirtley served as pastor, assisted by Elders James Dicken and Absa- [illegible] years thereafter Elder Kirtley was the sole pastor. Such a situation had not existed since the second year of the founding of the church.

In 1862 Elder Kirtley's son, J. A. Kirtley, became assistant pastor of the church. He continued in this capacity until his father's death, in 1872, when he took over the pasman.

In March, 1913, Elder J. W. Campbell became pastor. He still serves the old "mother church" in this capacity and hopes to continue for many more years.

Established As Needed

According to R. S. Cotterill, author of "History of Pioneer Kentucky," the early Kentuckians were not distinguished for their religious piety. Despite this fact it appears that churches were established as rapidly as they were needed.

Cotterill states that as late as 1792 only one-third of the population of Kentucky were members of torato. He served until his death, in 1808. Thus a father and son served the church as pastors for seventy-six [illegible]

After this the church had a number of pastors for short periods. Among the [illegible] Elders Hoover, Sprouts, Clary, Brooks and Skillchurches. At this time the creeds in the State were the Presbyterian, Methodist, Baptist and Catholic. In 1787 he says there were but fifty Catholic families in the State, and these were grouped together in Marion and Nelson counties. There were no priests in the state at that time.

The early Presbyterians centered around the Rev. David Rice, who, like teh early Baptists, migrated from Virginia here. In 1783 the Rev. Rice organized three congregations at Danville, Cane Run and Lick's Run. The church had a slow growth, there being but 90 members in 1786, according to Cotterill.

Methodism came in with a boom in 1783. Several circuits were formed in rapid succession between Lexington and Danville and Madison, and the Limestone.

Baptists Outnumber Others

The Baptists outnumbered all denominations from the beginning. Squire Boone, whose fame is known to most Kentuckians, was a Baptist preacher and did much to spread the faith.

The Rev. William Hickman is generally regarded as having been the first Baptist minister to enter the State. His closest contemorary was the Rev. Peter Tinsley. Some authorities give Tinsley credit for

VICTORY

FOR PETERSBURG TEAM IS DELAYED UNTIL NINTH INNING IN WALTON GAME — GLENN OPPOSES BOEHLER ON MOUND

Fighting an uphill battle the flying Petersburg squadron backed up the fine pitching of its veteran boxman with substantial batting rallies to take an important game from the hard working Walton team last Saturday in the down-the-river village. The score was 5 to 4.

As on other occasions this season the Walton boys touched Boehler rather freely, but the big boy generally was effective when he had to be—at least enough to grab the decision. Walton started its veteran twirler, Roland Glenn, and before the first bat cracked this humble servant of yours openly predicted trouble for the "Pete" team . Petersburg had plenty of trouble with "Rol" and were trailing thru the entire game except for the one final, big moment when the winning run cantered over.

The winning run was scored off the hurling of Benson, who relieved Glenn with the winning run on third base and no one out. So technically, the loss no doubt should be charged to Roland, although he worked intelligently and capably over the whole route, pursuant to his usual custom.

Petersburg accumulated an even dozen bingles off Glenn's delivery, Benson not allowing a bingle during his stormy seance on the hill, while Walton went the home team one better and built up a baker's dozen off Boehler. The latter fanned nine, Glenn doing the same, and Benson one.

The hitting honors of the day went to Lowe and Norman, both of whom did some artistic and effective driving. Lowe hit a single and two doubles, while Norman went him one better with three singles and one double. Lowe's drives play- [illegible] "Irish's" hits counted in the Walton scoring.

Walton drew first blood in the third when three runs came dashing across, which same three runs sent the Petersburg hopes "dashling" against the rocks—at least for a time. Hartman started the trouble with a single and Shearer followed wiht a scratch hit past Bradburn at short, which the crack infielder could have handled. Bradburn who was suffering from a lame back, again came in for a serious miscue on the next hitter, Dudgeons' hard smash starting right a thim for what Bill ordinarily would have turned into a double play. However, instead of the expected double killing, it developed into a triple killing for Walton in the way of a sun scoring, for Robinson followed with a single which scored Hartman and Glenn immediately took a hand with a fine smash to right that counted Shearer and Dudgeon.

Petersburg came to life momentarily in the fourth when Jarrell singled and Matthews scored him with a fine double to right after two were out. But Walton apparently clinched the game with another counter in the fifth to make the score 4-1. Shearer walked and Norman's double to right center sent him riding home.

But Petersburg was not yet thru and awakened the home town hopes with another run in the 6th. Boehler hit a hot single to left to start the inning and Klopp followed with another safe drive. Jarrell's fielder's choice counted Boehler, and a second double by Matthews made things look bad for Walton, but Glenn applied the brakes without further trouble.

In hte seventh Petersburg, still fighting an uphill scrap, added another . It was Lowe's first double, which cleared the barrier in right, followed by Mahan's single that brought in the third run. The eighth was uneventful.

On the willed end of a 4-3 count the home team came up with the top of their batting order in the last of the nint h. It was Lowe again who led off with a double that missed by inches bouncing over the fence in right center for a homer. But Mahan immediately repeated his feat of the seventh with a second single, scoring Lowe with the tying run. The ball was played to the plate to catch Lowe and bounced away from Shearer allowing Mahan to make it to third.

Benson then went to the hill and was ordered by Manager Lowe to walk both Boehler and Brashears.

A GOOD CODE FOR ANYBODY

Mahatma Gandhi, the leader of the revolution against British rule in India, told newspaper men the other day the rules of conduct which have governed his own life. He would not presume to lay down rules for anybody else, he said, but he had a code which he had consistently followed. These are the rules of life, as Gandhi observes them:

Love.
Truth.
Chastity.
Fearlessness.
Service to others.
Control of appetites.
Belief in the equality of all mankind.
Abstention from alcohol, tobacco and drugs.
Belief that all great religions are equal of worth.

Taking nothing that is not paid for by one's own work.

Valuing possessions not for themselves but for their usefulness.

It is not easy to live in a world which professes, in the main, such a code, and to obey it literally. For while these rules of conduct as laid down by Gandhi differ in no important respect from those laid down by Jesus Christ and before Him by Buddha and other great religious teachers, vey few human beings have had the hardihood to even attempt to live up to them. Gandhi himself, even his enemies admit, comes about as close to it as any man in modern times.

It seems to us that one of the causes of the trouble in which the world finds itself today is that most people have forgotten these ancient rules of life, which have always been sound and still are. We have been carried away, all of us, both in America and elsewhere, by the idea that there is some magic in material possessions which will make us happy in spite of ourselves. Nothing was ever farther from the truth.

VEGETABLE STORAGE

It is quite too early actually to now, but it is not a bad idea to be- store vegetables for winter use gin making preparation.

Every year some of us have trouble in keeping vegetables because some requirement or other has been overlooked. Successful storage depends on maintaining the temperature the several kinds of vegetables need, on furnishing humidity or withholding it, as the case may be, and on giving proper ventilation.

Vegetables fall into two classes with regard to temperature, namely, the "warm" crops, and the "cool" crops. As it happens, those vegetables that grow best in the cooler weather keep best at lower temperatures. For the cool vegetables, the best storage temperature is 40 degrees, and for the warm vegetables, it is 50 degrees. The first requirement of a storage place is that the walls are of such construction as to maintain an even temperature regardless of what the outside temperature is. This does not mean that special building must be done, for often existing structures may be made to serve with surprisingly simple changes and at surprising small expense.

Those of us who have house cellars are fortunate, for any cellar may be made suited to keeping either the "warm" crops or the "cool" crops successfully. If there is a furnace, it is necessary to partition off a corner for the cool vegetables, but the warm vegetables may be kept perfectly in the rest of the cellar.

The partition should be built of 2 by 4 studding, with one thickness of sheeting inside and out, than a layer of building paper or 5 or 6 layers of newspapers, and board and batten, or tongue-and-groove siding finish. The door should be made of the same construction, and it should be framed to fit tightly. One layer of siding nailed on the floor joints makes an adequate ceiling.

If the cellar is without a furnace such a room as has just been described will be the place in which to store the warm vegetables, for the construction described will retain heat, as well as keep it out. Some means for warming the room should be provided.

Whether this room is meant to store "cool" or "warm" vegetables an efficient system of ventilation should be installed. This is not so complicated as it sounds. Air moves in just the same way as water, that is, warm air rises, and cool air settles to the bottom. If means for escape of warm air is provided, and if an intake for cool air is arranged, circulation will take place.

A ventilation system for a storage room would consist merely in providing an opening to the outside at the ceiling line, and one at the floor. In the case of a "cool" room the intake might lead to the outside; in the case of a "warm" room, preferably to the rest of the cellar, so as not to introduce excessively cold air. This is important, because it is conceivable that the room may need ventilating at a time when outside air might be entirely too cold for safety, the heating system for the room notwithstanding.

Next week, this discussion will continue.

EASTERN KENTUCKY FRUIT CROP GOOD

One of the best Eastern Kentucky fruit crops in years was inspected at three meetings held by the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, the College of Agriculture, and county farm agents and growers in Fleming, Rowan and Pike counties.

Eight counties were represented in the attendance at the orchard of V. C. Razor and the Browning orchards in Fleming county. Good crops of apples and peaches will be marketed in Fleming and adjoining counties. The fruit will be held on the trees until properly ripened, and thus sold with a flavor that can hardly be obtained in fruit shipped long distances.

Fruit growers were interested in how cross pollination affected the set of fruit in the orchard of Dr. Van Antwerp in Rowan county. Solid blocks of trees of one variety had a light set of fruit, but where varieties were intermingled the set was heavy. The construction and operation of a storage plant on the Antwerp farm was of much interest. Fifteen thousand bushels of apples produced in this orchard will be marketed at roadside stands.

Three hundred persons attended the meeting at the Fordson farms in Pike county, where 5,000 fruit trees and Red Latham raspberries are being grown under the management of R. E. Cullen. The Fordson orchards were the first in the state to install a pipe line system of spraying to replace the portable power sprayer. Several commercial orchard owners have adopted the pipe line system.

Garrard county wheat made 25 to 30 bushels and barley 45 to 55 bushels to the acre.

One hundred and three Leslie county farmers are growing soy beans for the first time.

Knox county farmers expect to harvest 50 per cent more hay than they did last year.

Proper nutrition requires eating two fruits and two fruits and two vegetables every day, exclusive of potatoes and dried beans, says a 40-page circular on home canning, issued by the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky. The circular deals with all phases of canning fruits and vegetables, including equipment, methods, time tables, budgets and other information of value to housewives interested in the preservation of food. Copies may be secured from county farm and home agents or by writing to the College of Agriculture.

REPORT STRESSES BALANCED FARMING

The importance of well-balanced farming is stressed in a report which the farm economics department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, makes a study of the returns from forty-seven farms located near North Middletown in Burbon county.

"It is not merely good crops, or high-yi elding livestock or high-priced tobacco which determines profits, but a combination of these and other factors," the report points out. "Often a farmer overemphasizes or makes a hobby of one factor and neglects other vital factors."

The farms were studied as to labor efficiency, receipts per acre, total acreage, rate of stocking, and percentage of crop acreage devoted to tobacco.

The farms were studied as to labor efficiency, receipts per acre, total acreage, rate of stocking, and percentage of crop acreage devoted to tobacco.

The 27 more efficient farmers secured about one and one-third times as much work per man as did the 20 less efficient farmers.

Gross receipts per acre averaged $25.47 for the 47 farms. On 25 of the more successful farms, however, the receipts were in excess of this amount, while on twenty-two farms they were less.

While the average size of the 47 farms was 251 acres, the larger the farm the larger the net income, as a rule. The labor incomes on the 22 larger farms was nearly twice as much as the labor incomes on the 25 smaller farms.

All farms were well suited to tobacco growing. The average acreage of tobacco was 19.4 per cent of the total crops per farm, but farmers growing relatively more than this amount had considerable higher incomes than those growing less.

All farms were well suited to tobacco growing. The average acreage of tobacco was 19.4 per cent of the total crops per farm, but farmers growing relatively more than this amount had considerable higher incomes than those growing less.

The well stocked farm returned the best profits. The average number of animal units was 12.8, compared with 8 on the less profitable farms.

The most profitable 10 farms returned net earnings averaging $3,426 in 1929, compared with an average loss of $1,379 for the least profitable farms.

Five Casey county farmers are planning to start herds of pure-bred beef cattle this year.

Sudan grass on the farm of P. B. Gaines in Carroll county was ready to pasture in four weeks after seeding.

Legislation to protect the dairy industry was discussed at the annual picnic of the Kentucky Jersey Cattle Club at the Experiment Station farm at Lexington. Senator P. B. Gaines, president of the club, urged farmers to question candidates for the Legislature regarding their attitude toward the regulation of the distribution of butter substitutes. Among the speakers was O. E. Van Cleave, field agent for the American Jersey Cattle Club of New York. One hundred men and women attended the picnic.

The Way of Life — BRUCE BARTON

LOOK AT THE AVERAGE

One of my friends, who now occupies a high position, started life as a salesman for the National Cash Register Company.

He thought if he could sell cash registers to Marshall Field it would be a big feather in his cap, and the example of this leading store would have influence with smaller merchants all over the country.

So he called at Field's and made his talk, but received no encouragement. The next year he called again . . . and the next . . . and the next. The tenth year he came away with an order for $150,000.

In telling me about it, he remarked: "I said to myself, that's $15,000 worth of business for each of the ten years. Not a bad average at all."

In 1929 when stock prices were crashing and even the richest men were feeling poor, a New York banker met a capitalist whose fortune, on paper, had shrunk many million dollars. He was in a blue funk.

The banker said: "You ought to have learned better than this. You remember back in 1920 how worried you were, and how you sent for me to reassure you? Even at present prices you must be worth ten times what you were then. If so, your average is mighty good. What are you kicking about?"

A young man and a young woman were married. After the ceremony the bride's father, a business man who had fought hard for his fortune, took them into his study. "I want to say just one thing to you," he remarked. "You must not expect that all your years will be good. You'll go along for a while without seeming to get ahead, but at the end of every year you'll own a little more furniture and have a few more dollars in the bank. Then there will come a year some time when you'll have a stroke of luck and make a lot of progress. You must expect to average the good with the bad."

It seems to me that much of the worry and fretting in life grows out of the fact that people do not take a long enough look.

Every human life, at some point, has seemed handicapped and doomed to disappointment. At forty, Henry Ford had never saved a cent. At forty-five, Lincoln was a disappointed politician. For twenty-five years, Charles Darwin worked day after day without the slightest recognition. Then, for each of them, there came a few great years that amply made up for the rest.

The law of compensation works for those who keep their industry der discouragement are selling out and their faith. Those who quit unat the bottom. For a majority of courageous lives, taking all the years together; the average is good.

POULTRY RAISERS RE-ELECT PYLES

The board of directors of the Kentucky Poultry Improvement Association announces the re-election of W. E. Pyles, Maysville, as president and Strauter Harney, of Paris, as vice-president, to serve until July, 1932. The program of the association will continue in the interests of improving the poultry industry of the state, cooperating with the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky and other agencies in improving the breeding of poultry and educating farmers and poultry ralsers in better practices.

The association a year ago passed a resolution urging higher tariff on dried eggs. Notice was recently received of a 50 per cent increase in the tariff on this product. Dried eggs have been imported, especially from China, where eggs are produced on a price basis with which Americans cannot compete.

Plans now are being made in some parts of this country to convert fresh eggs into dried form. A better dried product can be produced in this country than is being received from some foreign countries. Small, odd shaped eggs would be used for drying, which should tend to improve prices for better quality eggs.

Fulton county growers report the best fruit prospects in years, especially of peaches.

Ten times as much orchard grass seed will be harvested in Fleming county than in any one previous year, it is estimated.

KENTUCKY JUNIORS TO MICHIGAN CAMP

Ten outstanding Kentucky 4-H club members will receive 2 weeks of training in Christian leadership at Camp Miniwanca on Lake Michigan as guests of C. N. Manning of Lexington and the American Youth Foundation. The Foundation offered five scholarships to Kentucky 4-H club members, provided a similar number could be secured within the state. These were arranged by Mr. Manning.

The following 4-H club girls will attend the camp August 10 to 23; Sara Margaret Land, Fayette-co.; Veda Burnside, Marion county; Elizabeth Wilson, Jesamine county; Rosalin Barlow, Harrison-co., and Ruth Clary, Fleming county. Miss Susan D. Wallace a volunteer club leader in Fayette county, will accompany them.

The boys to attend the camp from August 24 to Sept., 6th are Cornellus Hager, Jessamine county; Julius Atkerson, Nicholas county; Guy Arnold, Franklin county; Chlorin Gravett, Clark county, and Roger Burris, Bourbon county. C. C. Shade, farm agent in Jessamine county, will act as their leader.

Lawrence county farmers did not have enough strawberries to meet local demands, and plan an increase of 50 per cent in their acreages.

R. A. Chaney, a Montgomery-co., farmer, has reduced the cost of producing eggs to 7½ cents a dozen, through good feeding of high laying hens.

Sunday School Lesson

SOWING AND REAPING

Galatians 6:1-10

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

This quarterly temperance lesson also suggests a profitable study for these summer days. One of the epistles of Paul furnishes the lesson text. Search out all the thirteen or fourteen letters that he wrote and relate them to the historical account in the Acts.

Moral problems faced the people in that day and these letters deal very directly with human affairs. Since the same difficulties are with us today we find even greater help in these same writings for Paul. Read the entire letter and note how the grace of God was superseding the hard and fast laws under which the Old Testament of Hebrew sought to live.

Everybody makes mistakes and the apostle tells that those who are making the fewest mistakes should be most kindly disposed toward those who sin to a greater extent. There are certain burdens that we must bear for ourselves, such as the kit that the traveler or soldier carries for his daily necessities.

The Golden Text is just plain common sense as well as spiritual truth: "Whatsoever a man soweth THAT shall he also reap." That is certain in the material world and not the less positive in the spiritual realm. Wild oats take nourishment from the soil and produce their own crop. Alcoholic liquor is habit-forming and death dealing, no matter how slowly the poison may work. A single glass has its effect on the brain cells and lessens the power of self-direction. Turn to the newspapers for this week to get more illustrations than can be presented during the class session. Big business will have nothing to do with it. Alcohol takes away personal liberty and is destructive of body and soul.

Hints for the Home

by Nancy Hart

Rice Pudding

1 cup milk.
1¼ tablespoons rice uncooked.
1½ teaspoons sugar.
Few grains salt.

Wash rice and put in double boiler with scalded milk, sugar, and salt. Cook over hot water 2½ hours, stirring occasionally. Serve warm or cold, with a little additional milk if desired.

Bread Pudding

1 cup milk.
½ cup dry bread crumbs.
1½ teaspoons sugar.
1 egg yolk (optional)
Few grains salt.

Scald milk and combine with other ingredients and put into slightly buttered baking cup and bake in a pan containing 1 inch hot water in a slow oven for one hour, or cook in double boiler for 2 hours. If egg yolk is used mix with sugar before adding and cook the pudding 30 minutes.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios f W-H-A-S the week of August 17. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

August 17—4-H Club State Fair plans—J. W. Whitehouse.

August 19—4-H Club girls at State Fair—Anita Burnam.

Controlling erosion—Earl Welch.

August 21—What farm folks are asking—L. C. Brewer.

I. F. Jewell, a Spencer county farmer, cut 18 tons of alfalfa from 13 acres at the first cutting, and had prospects of nearly as heavy second crop.

Jack Lynch, a Fayette county farm boy, was one of the speakers in the August national 4-H club radio program, sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture. He discussed 4-H club work from the studios of W-E-N-R in Chicago. Jack was a gold medal 4-H district camp, and has won camper at this year's Bluegrass 4-H district camp, and has won many honors in his seven years in club work. J. Ed. Parker, Fayette county farm egent, also spoke during the national 4-H club radio program.

Washington Snap Shots

Recurring reports that individuals and organizations claiming that they represent or have the approval of the George Washington Bicentennial Commission are going about the country promoting commercial projects in connection with next year's Washington Bicentennial Commission are going about the country promoting commercial projects in connection with next Washington celebration were dealt with in bristling terms by the associate director of the commission. It is declared that all such activities are wholly fraudulent and hope is expressed that the public will not be misled and duped by the persons responsible for the frauds. It is pointed out that such operations could only cause great embarrassment to the commission and irreparable harm to the national celebration which the duly authorized congressional commission is arranging.

Farm problems and allied difficulties of marketing agricultural products have been bearing down heavily in three sections of official Washington. While the White House and the Department of Agriculture were searching for means of meeting the emergency created by drought and grasshoper destruction in Central and Northwestern Stats, the Federal Farm Board was bearing debate in a controversy affecting the future of the cooperative wheat-marketing program. President Hoover stepped into the drought and grasshopper problem with an announcement that he had directed officials of the Department of Agriculture, in cooperation with local and State authorities, to undertake whatever organization is necessary to cope with the situation. He said the department already was engaged in a resurvey of the situation in the light of changes in the last two weeks.

Federal Farm Board troubles, instead of diminishing, appear to be multiplying. The controversy with the Kansas and other Western wheat growers over the disposal of the board's huge holdings of last year's wheat has now been followed by a feud with a group of powerful Northwestern cooperatives. This is essentially a family quarrel in the sense that the cooperatives in question in the past have been strong supporters of the board and some of them have received generous financing at the hands of that body. It has just come to light that these organizations now bitterly protest that they are about to be eliminated in order that the Farmers' National Grain Cooperation, a board subsidary, may set up a centralized marketing agency in the Northwest having the earmarks of a monopoly and through it wipe out competition for the business of the farmers.

Senator Walter F. George, Democrat, of Georgia, invited by Senator Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, to be "specific" in his attacks upon the Smoot-Hawley tariff bill, replied with another general attack upon the bill as a whole and Republican economic policies, with particular reference to sugar rates. Senator George carefully avoided reference to schedules of particular interest to the South. He attacked the sugar schedule because of the best industry of Utah, the home of Senator Smoot.

The action of the Bank of France and the New York Federal Reserve Bank in granting huge credits to the Bank of England was characterized in government financial circles here "as a fine example of cooperative international banking which should be regarded as an indication that the central banks of the world are working closely together for the common good of all." These credits were held to be a recognition of the fact that London could not carry the German financial load singlehanded and temporarily at least must contract its international short-term banking by transferring a portion of the burden to New York and Paris.

Senator Borah, among his many claims to fame, enjoys the most unique distinction of a member of Congress who rarely, if ever, recommends anybody for high Federal office. If he does, it's generally a routine affair of securing the usual senatorial O. K. of an appointment already decided upon. Once upon a time a nephew of the Idahoan was a candidate for an important position in the gift of the Department of Justice. The Attorney General expected that "Big Bill's" indorsement would head the list of the young man's credentials. Uncle and nephew were the best of friends, but Borah refused to use any influence on his kinsman's behalf. He got the job anyway.

With all unemployment reports received by President Hoover indicating that the need of relief will be "more acute next winter than last," various forces are being mobilized for an attack on the American Red Cross, which, according to John Barton Payne, its chairman, cannot relieve unemployed or striking workers because its charter permits it only to alleviate the effects of "pestilence, famine, floods and other national calamities." Maintaining that the Red Cross was the political tool of the Administration, Senator Caraway, (Dem., Ark.) said that legislation would be introduced in the next session of Congress to take the Red Cross out of politics by making it independent of any appointive or elected officer of the Govern ment.

Regret that the last report of the Law Enforcement Commission had not spoken more favorably of the Government's improved penal machinery was expressed recently by Chairman Wickersham in a note to Sanford Bates, Federal prison superintendent. Making no differentiation between Federal and State institutions, the commission's report lashed out at the "present system" as antiquated, inefficient, as failing either to reform the criminal or protect society and as contributing to crime through brutal treatment of prison inmates. Bates' answer, given to newspaper men, was that his bureau during the past year had put into effect nearly every one of the commission's 22 recommendations.

"It could not be otherwise, with from six to eight millions of men and women wanting work and needing work, but unable to get it.

Joseph F. Guffey, formerly Democratic National Committeeman from Pennsylvania, predicts that sixty-six of Pennsylvania's seventy-two delegates to the Democratic National Convention will be for Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt, of New York. If there is not effective opposition to Mr. Roosevelt soon, most of the delegates from Pennsylvania will be for the New York Governor, as well as most of the delegates from everywhere else, for delegates flock to the candidate who is in the lead. But Mr. Guffey is no longer National Committeeman from his State. Sedwick Kistler is. And Mr. Kistler and several of the local bosses will have much to say as to who will get the support of the Pennsylvania delegation provided there is going to be any real choice of candidates offered to them.

Secretary Adams has announced that a new naval policy, by which the United States resolves to maintain a navy "second to none" and which lays down the plans by which that navy shall be attained, has just been formulated. This is the first official announcement that, despite economy plans, the Hoover Administration intends to build up the entire limit of the London naval treaty and finally fulfill the hope of every naval officer to have "absolute parity" with the fleet of the British Empire.

Movie Stars Must Make Their Cigars Fit Costume

Edward Robinson acquires part of his day's supply of cigars

IN the face of one movie company's ban on cigars as "uncinematic," a rival company recently discovered that three and four boxes of cigars were being used daily in the production of Edward G. Robinson's new hit, "Smart Money." Robinson, who has been faithful to his personal smoking preference through five previous productions, pictures the American feminine movie goer's first and lasting love—the strong, he-man hero whose steely eyes appraise the wiles of a succession of blondes over the glowing end of a rich colorado maduro.

Inquiry about the heavy consumption of cigars brought investigators to Robinson's dressing-room where they found the star, his vest pockets stuffed with cigars, smoking industriously in the midst of a circle of neatly graduated ends, laid about his dressing table. Five other male stars were also smoking their favorite brands and carefully saving ends of various lengths.

Robinson himself volunteered the explanation. "We're burning them to proper lengths between scenes. After each scene a careful check is made on each cigar smoker to see what length his smoke "has reached. If, a day or two later, a following scene is made, a fresh cigar of the proper length is available without delay.

"It would look curious on the screen to see a small end suddenly become a new cigar."

As each scene is made, a script girl, with a synopsis of the action and a catalog of cigar lengths, visits the dressing rooms and shows each actor just which cigar is to be a part of his costume for the action indicated. Unromantic or not, the actors have been extremely philosophical about their part in maintaining motion picture realism.

THE MARKET BASKET

The Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture, The Woman's Division of the President's Emergency Committee for Employment

FAMILY FOOD GUIDE

Every meal—Milk for children, bread for all.

Every day—Cereal in porridge or pudding.

Tomatoes (or oranges) for children.

Potatoes.

A green or yellow vegetable.

A fruit or additional vegetable.

Milk for all.

Two to four times a week—

Tomatoes for all.

Dried beans and peas or peanuts.

Eggs (especially for children).

Lean meat, fish or poultry, or cheese.

Try serving the ordinary green varieties of vegetables in new and different ways is the timely cooking suggestion from the Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture.

August is the month when so many different vegetables appear on the markets and it is perhaps the month when so many of them are cheapest, the bureau points out. Instead of preparing vegetables in the routine fashion the bureau suggests some new combination dishes that will add zest to flagging appetites.

More than 30 different ways of serving inexpensive vegetables are listed in the bureau's new publication, "Aunt Sammy's Radio Recipes Revised," which may be had free on request to the bureau. This is not intended to be a complete cook book, but it contains 400 recipes which, if not all in the low cost group, are concerned mostly with moderate rather than with high priced foods.

Carrots, for instance, are one of the foods which nutritionists recommend for children. But many mothers find that their offspring do not share the same enthusiasm for this attractive looking vegetable. The bureau suggests serving them fried with apples—a way in which all members of the family are sure to enjoy them. If properly cooked, all but very young may enjoy this dish. Then there are mashed carrots, in which evaported milk may be used if rich fresh milk is not available.

Cucumbers are inexpensive and plentiful right now. Most persons serve this succulent vegetable only as a salad but it is delicious when baked or fried. Egg plant is another vegetable that usually appears in only one form—fried. Stuff it some time, and serve it as the main dish of the meal, or scallop it with tomatoes and green pepper, the bureau suggests.

Potatoes, which are cheap this year, needn't always be fried, baked or boiled. In tomato sauce they take on quite a new air and the combination is particularly good from a nutrition standpoint. Raw potatoes may be scalloped with cheese, and left over cooked ones may be utilized in an au gratin dish.

As for the sweet potatoes, sweetpotato puff is new and not at all difficult to make. Scalloped with green apples the sweetpotato is very different from the baked or candied sweetpotato.

Sweet corn is at its best in many sections of the country during August, but it need not always be served on the cob. And even if it is, a little different flavor can be achieved by leaving the last layer of husk on the ears while cooking. This is a little culinary trick of the creoles, whose enviable reputation for fine cooking has traveled far afield from the bayous of Louisiana. Left over corn on the cob may be mixed with tomato and cheese and served on toast—a dish as tasty and easy to prepare as one could wish for on a hot day.

There is also a mixed vegetable loaf to be found in the bureau's cook book that utilizes little odds and ends that may be left over and which are not enough in themselves for another meal. Such vegetables may be similarly utilized in an au gratin combination.

RECIPES

(These recipes serve five persons)

Tomatoes, Corn and Cheese

3 tablespoons flour

3 tablespoons melted butter or other fat.

2 cups canned tomatoes

1 onion, sliced.

2 cups canned or fresh corn.

¼ pound sharp cheese, shaved thin.

Brown the flour in a heavy skillet, remove the flour from the skillet and blend with 2 tablespoons of the fat. Brown the onion in the remaining fat, add the other ingredients except the cheese, and cook for about 10 minutes. Stir in the cheese when melted serve on thin crisp toast.

Sweetpotato Puff

5 or 6 medium-sized sweetpotatoes.

2 eggs.

1 teaspoon salt.

2 tablespoons melted butter.

2 tablespoons hot milk.

Boil the sweetpotatoes. When tender remove the skins and any discolored parts, and press the sweetpotatoes through a ricer. Have should be about 1 quart of the pulp. Beat the yolks and whites of the eggs separately. To the sweetpotatoes add the yolks, the milk, and salt. Beat well, and fold in the well-beaten whites. Pile the mixture lightly into a greased baking dish and bake in a moderate oven (350°F.) for 25 minutes, or until light and fluffy and brown on the top.

Chocolate Cornstarch Pudding

6 tablespoons cornstarch.

4 tablespoons cocoa, or 1 square unsweetened chocolate melted in the milk when heated.

½ cup sugar.

½ teaspoon salt.

1 quart milk.

1 teaspoon vanilla.

Mix thoroughly the cornstarch, cocoa, sugar, and salt. Pour into this mixture the milk, which has been heated in a double boiler. Return to the double boiler, stir until thickened, cover, and cook for 30 minutes. Remove from the fire, beat well, and add the vanilla. Pour into a wet mild, chill, and serve plain or with a custard sauce.

Fried Carrots and Apples

6 medium-sized carrots.

6 tart apples.

2 tablespoons fat.

1 tablespoon sugar.

¼ teaspoon salt.

Scrape the carrots and cut them lengthwise into thin slices. Pare the apples or leave the skin on, as preferred, core, and cut into slices about a fourth of an inch thick. Place a single layer of the apples and the carrots in a large skillet with the fat. Cover tightly and cook until well-browned, turn, and brown the other side. Just before the cooking is finished, sprinkle with the sugar and salt. Serve on a hot platter, first a layer of carrots, then a layer of apples, so the two can be lifted together.

Potatoes in Tomato Sauce

1 quart potatoes, sliced.

1 onion, sliced.

3 cups strained tomato juice.

4 tablespoons butter or other fat.

2 teaspoons salt.

Pepper.

Cook the potatoes and onion in the fat for 20 minutes, add the tomato juice, salt, and pepper, cover and simmer for 30 minutes, or until the potatoes are tender. The potato thickens the tomato juice so that no other thickening is necessary.

Revolutionary Pensions

On August 26, 1776, congress offered pensions equal to half pay to the officers and enlisted men who were disabled in the Revolutionary war, with proportionate pensions in the case of partial disability. An act granting pensions to invalids was passed in 1785, but the first service pensions were granted by the act of March, 1818.

De Leon in Porto Rico

Ponce de Leon arrived in Porto Rico in 1508, and immediately proceeded to annihilate the native Arawaks. The next year he was made governor of the island, and two years later he founded the city of San Juan, the full name being San Juan Bautista (St. John the Baptist). It was from here that he set forth to find the fabled fountain of youth, in search of which he discovered Florida.

"Patent" Medicines

A patent medicine is a medicinal formula on which a patent has been secured. It is very difficult to secure a patent on such a formula. It is necessary to show invention to be present and that the medicine represents something other than a doctor's prescription.

The "Big Four" tobacco companies have simultaneously advanced the price of cigarettes 45 cents per thousand. This means an additional profit of $40,000,000. These companies are buying tobacco cheaper than ever before and have reduced wages and overhead expenses. This does not appear fair to the consumer and the producer of tobacco. The Big Four companies buy 95 per cent of all tobacco produced and manufacture it. They control both ends, the buying and the selling. The U. S. Government is expected to start an investigation at once to find why the four companies raised prices at the same time. This proves conclusively that the Big Four companies are nothing less than the American Tobacco Trust.—Falmouth Outlook.

Almost every State, county and city in the country is overburdened with high taxes, and at the same time these governments are working "in the red." The money spenders cannot wring enough money out of the taxpayers to pay running expenses and are deeper in debt every day. New schemes are being devised every day to collect more revenue in a roundabout way to keep the machines greased. Indirect taxation is just as great and oppressive to the people as direct taxation. Coffers are empty but the spending continues at a lavish gait. Taxpayers are alarmed and becoming excited, and

A temperature between 50 and 80 degrees is best for goldfish. Avoid any sudden change in temperature. If water is above 85 degrees in summer watch the fish and if they seem distressed reduce the number of fish in each aquarium and be sure the water is aerated. Do not put ice in the water. Cooled water may be fed in gradually if temperature is dangerously high.

preaching the first Baptist sermon in the shade of a great elm at the big spring, now in the corporate limits of Harrodsburg.

It is claimed that the first organized Baptist church was that of the Rev. Lewis Craig, at Craig's Station, on Gilbert's Creek, in Garrard County, a few miles east of Lancaster. This church was organized in Spottsylvania County, Virginia, and the members traveled together to Kentucky. It was a church on the road, literally speaking.

Ralph Balsly, of Riverside, Ohio, was hobnobbing with friends in the court day crowd last Monday here.

Daniel Lawell, of Lexington, and a number of years ago a prominent Boone county farmer, is spending a few days with his niece Mrs. Karl Rouse and family.

Mrss. Myrtle Offutt is ill at her home here with flu.

Mrs. C. H. Bridgewater and son, James, of Akron, Ohio, are visiting Mrs. Bridgewater's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Fowler.

Mrs. Eliza Walton, of this place, was called to the bedside of her niece, Mrs. Missouri Rice, at Belleview the first of the week. Mrs. Rice is improving.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Fryman, of Cynthiana, and Mr. and Mrs. Claude Stewart, of Ludlow, spent Sunday with Postmaster Everett Hickman and family.

About one hundred members and guests of the Burlington Methodist Sunday school enjoyed their annual picnic at beautiful and historic old Split Rock on the Ohio river last Thursday.

E. A. Martin recently threshed a crop of rye for F. H. Rouse near Burlington and which averaged almost 27 bushels per acre. Mr. Martin said that it was the largest rye yield that he ever had threshed.

Cooler weather this week brought renewed zeal to the revival services being held at the Baptist church and aided materially in the attendance. Rev R. D. Martin, of Erlanger, is delivering a series of such interesting and forceful sermons that everyone who hears him unhesitantingly stamps him as one of the most able ministers ever to grace a pulpit in Burlington. Those who have united with the church up to and including Tuesday nite's services are: Mr. and Mrs. Robert Snow and A. J. Walton, by letter, and by confession Misses Leola Vice and Virginia Stephenson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McMullen entertained last Sunday Mrs. Rybern Williamson and son, of California, Mr. and Mrs. O. Adams, of Lockland, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Ryle, of Waterloo.

Mrs. John Dickerson, of Union, spent Friday of last week with her sister, Mrs. Manley Ryle.

filling the bases. The plan worked like a charm—for a brief spell—for Benson fanned Klopp. With Jarrell at bat Norman signaled for Shearer to throw to first, with the evident intention of either trapping Bradburn off first or catching Mahan when he broke for the plate. But Norman's throw to Shearer was wide and high and Mahan was across with the run that made it a victory for Petersburg.

"THAT CERTAIN PARTY"

The Latest Summer Fashions for Musicians as Conceived by Armando, Internationally Famous Caricaturist.

ARMANDO explains the whimsical attire which he has used in his pen portraits of some of the many stars now shining so brightly in the new Lucky Strike Summer Party Orchestra, as the only appropriate "dress" for musicians during the hot months, and insists that any way you look at "it" summer parties would be dull affairs without little girls (the continental viewpoint). Reading, or looking, from left to right, we behold, B. A. Rolfe, dainty leader of the orchestra; Andy Sanella, guitarist extraordinary, and orchestra leader in his own right; Ross Gorman, who plays twenty-seven instruments (one at a time); Phil Napoleon (the little girl with the big mustache), who yields to no one when it comes to breaking your heart with a trumpet, and last, but by no means least, Nana Bryant, famous stage actress, who is one of the program's distinguished announcers.

Principal Or Interest ?

We believe a depositor is more interested in the safety of his principal rather than a PROMISE of high income return.

For that reason this bank joins with the banks of Boone County and the banks of our neighboring Counties in announcing

A Safe and Conservative Rate of
3% ON TIME AND SAVINGS DEPOSITS
on and after August 1st., 1931

When money rates were high in the open market and City correspondents were able to allow a high rate on daily balances, banks could afford to pay 4% on Time and Savings Deposits. With these rates considerably reduced and it being no longer profitable to make investments that will return a profit on 4% money, we think it a sound and conservative move on the part of the Bankers to pay a rate of interest that will enable the banks to continue a sound banking policy.

We will appreciate having our friends call in and discuss any matter of business with us.

Cupids Find Refuge in Swampy Spanish Plain

Spain may pass through revolutions and fail there is one community in that country which is not likely to be disturbed whatever happens. This is the strange colony of wild camels which have made a home for themselves in the lower reaches of the Guadalquivir river. Many years ago an attempt was made to introduce camels for agricultural work in southern Spain. The plan was not a success, and those camels which did not die strayed off to fend for themselves. A few of them found a retreat in the vast alluvial plain through which the sluggish stream of the river winds its way to the Gulf of Cadiz.

One could hardly imagine a situation more unlike that to which a camel normally is accustomed. The land is largely water-logged and covered with a dense growth of reeds and rushes many feet in height. From the human point of view, the district is extremely unhealthy, although animal life flourishes.

At the least sign of danger the animals retreat to the swamps, where the ground is so soft that it is impossible for a man to follow. Of course, the broad feet of the camel, which help the creature to walk on loose sand, have also stood it in good stead in these marshes, where a horse or a cow certainly would never be able to travel safely.—Manchester (Eng.) Diggers Uncover Grave of Bronze-Age Chieftain

The 4,000-year-old grave of a Bronze age chieftain is among the many interesting relics discovered in the course of digging pits for brick works at Schleinbach, near Vienna. Twenty-one different caches, graves and living caves from the Second century, B. C., have been laid bare. The chieftain's grave has been reconstructed as it was first discovered and placed on exhibition in the Lower Austrian museum in Vienna. It contains two skeletons lying face upwards, stretched out close together, in contrast to the skeletons of ordinary tribesmen found in 11 other graves. These were placed in a crouching position, the legs being drawn up and bound in chains weighted with stones, owing to the fear of the resurrection of the bodies. The second body in the grave was doubtless that of the chief's wife, bestowed to have been buried alive.

He Had His Reason

He is cook on a schooner. Very timidly we poked our head inside the door. He was chopping some meat for hash.

"Come in," he said in broad Hungarianese. We went in. His name is Charley.

"How long have you been a cook, Charley?"

"Fift' year."

We whistled with amazement.

"How old are you, Charley?"

"Sixty-eight."

Fifty years a cook. Apparently the height of ambitionlessness.

We left him to interview the captain.

"Charley, back there—why does he stick to cooking?"

Taciturnly the captain replied:

"Darn good reason—cook gets $90 a month, sailor get $60."—Philadelphia Record.

Penguins Prefer Ice

When eight penguins arrived recently in Europe to be transferred to a Continental zoo, they caused great trouble because they found the climate too warm. The penguin, whose home is in the Antarctic, loves cold weather, and officials tried to devise a means of keeping them cool. All plans failed until a big "ice box" was built for them, and a "house" of heavy planks, with a roof of heat-resisting tar paper, was erected in the box. Each day, 500 pounds of ice, cut in layers, was spread on the floor, and then the birds were quite happy. They slept on the ice—standing up, as is their way! Shrubs and greens surround the "house," and there was a lake where the birds could satisfy their natural love for water.

Study of Languages Old

It is a great error to think that schools for foreign languages are a modern innovation. In almost prehistoric times, some 4,000 years ago, such a school existed on the shores of the eastern Mediterranean, the cross-roads between Asia, Europe and Africa. As many as six languages considered modern by the students of the Fifteenth century B. C. were taught in the university of a town called Zapuna, which was unearthed by two French archeologists. Clay tablets, which served as school books to the philologists of ancient times, and one of the world's first dictionaries, were among the outstanding finds made.

American Postal History

Hugh Osgood was the first postmaster general, appointed by Washington in 1789, after the Constitution was adopted. The first postmaster general in America, however, was Andrew Hamilton, appointed in Colonial days, in 1691. He was succeeded by his son, John Hamilton. Following him, there were four postmasters general, then in 1753 the American colonies were divided into two postal districts, with a postmaster general for each. Benjamin Franklin served as one of these from 1753 to 1774. In July, 1775, the Continental congress made Franklin again postmaster general, and he served until the following year.

Wide Case Gulfers of Community Social Life

Church activity does not contribute to the growth of the Lawless Magazine:

"Two or three generations ago, the only way a village community met was the regular meeting place for all classes and conditions of men. It was no uncommon thing to ride 30 miles to mill and camp two or three days while waiting a turn. The horse ground slowly and quite often the output did not exceed two or three bushels an hour. This gave opportunity for amusement and social contacts. It was a great place to play marbles, pitch horseshoes, to play rude pranks, swap news, stories and jackknives. Sometimes there were fights, for bill blood is fighting blood, but, for the most part, the men fought fair.

"At midnight on Saturday night the watergate was closed and not opened until the following Monday morning. The closed gate formed an excellent fish trap and often the catch was good. It was the custom at one mill to auction off the fish that might be caught over the Sabbath to the highest bidder. The auction was held on Saturday afternoon before the gate was closed and if no fish happened to get in, the successful bidder paid just the same.

"Sometimes the mill floor was used for the dance when the day's work was done. Or if no fiddlers were present, the young folks stepped to the tune of 'Buffalo Girls' or 'Old Dan Tucker,' singing as they danced. Many an old mill was the scene of this beautiful custom that has today lost out in competition with the modern dance."—Detroit News.

Odd Thanksgiving Held in Old City of Kyritz

Kyritz, ancient city in the northwest part of Brandenburg province, has a Thanksgiving celebration which is different.

Every year on the last Monday in February each citizen who attends the traditional morning church services receives a loaf of bread in memory of the defense of the city against destruction by the duke of Mecklenburg and the repulse of Mecklenburg's riders.

The feud between Mecklenburg, and the nobility of Prignitz, of which Kyritz is the capital, began in 1381. Mecklenburg's chief lieutenant, Von Bassewitz, made two unsuccessful attempts to capture the city. He was killed in the last one when he tried to enter the city by tunneling under the walls to the church, whence he planned to attack.

His calculations miscarried, however, and the tunnel ended in the market place, where the burghers promptly slew him and all his men.

"The Glory That Was Rome"

On the heights above Monte Carlo stands, as it has already stood for centuries, La Turbie, the crumbling ruin of one of Rome's greatest and finest towers. It has stood by the wayside for more than 20 centuries, and seen the Greeks, the Romans, the Alpine tribes, the Goths and the Moors fight beneath it. So massive is it that Marshal Berwick, son of James II of England, failed to destroy it with his gunpowder. Tales tell us it was a most glittering sight in the days of Augustine—built of polished granite and Luna marble, dominating the sea like a Roman guard far from Rome. It had its doric colonnade, its fluted tower, also doric and on the sides of La Turbie were engraved the names of the tribes it had seen fall before Rome's power.

Origin of "Fore" Obscure

The origin of "Fore!" is veiled in antiquity, says an article in the New York Times. No satisfactory explanation can be found as to the time and method of its entrance as an accepted expression in "the Royal and Ancient Game of Golf," which received its first notice as a trouble maker in the Scotland of 1457. "Fore!" is defined in Jamison's Scottish dictionary, published in 1820, as "a cry of golfers to persons standing or moving in the way of the ball." Probably, according to present-day authorities, the word began as "Before!" and, with proper Scottish regard for economy, was shortened to its present form.

"Milk Snakes" Myth

The United States biological survey has stated with regard to the silly belief that snakes can suck milk from a cow: "Anyone who has ever milked a cow knows that the suction required to obtain a flow of milk is much greater than could be exerted by any snake. Furthermore, a snake has two rows of sharp recurved teeth in the upper jaw. If the mouth of the milk snake were closed to permit suction, the teeth would sink into the teat and the snake would find itself fully occupied in efforts to avoid injury by the cow."—Detroit News.

BANKERS SUGGEST BANKING REFORMS

Economic Policy Commission of American Bankers Association Recommends Aids to Progress in Banking Business.

FOLLOWING a nation-wide survey of banking conditions and opinion among bankers, the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has made the following recommendations for banking betterment:

"Under the category of improved bank management specific improvements we might summarize as:

"(1) Liquidation or consolidation of banks where changed local economic conditions render this desirable;

"(2) Wider affiliation among state banks with the Federal Reserve System;

"(3) Development of limited branch banking where economic conditions and legal authority make this expedient;

"(4) A more general practice, especially lacking among country banks, to analyse the cost of carrying accounts and other operating details and the establishment of proper service charges to make all classes of function profitable;

"(5) A more general application of the theory and practice of secondary reserves;

"(6) Avoidance by banks of undue borrowing merely to increase their own profits by relending at higher rates, or to over-expand credit to local business in order to increase their own business;

"(7) Cooperation among bankers in local communities through city, county or regional clearinghouses so as to promote mutually beneficial conditions and practices;

"(8) The insistence upon higher educational effort and qualifications among employees, especially those to be trusted with executive duties.

Legislative Measures Proposed

"There are some external measures along moderate legislative and supervisory lines, that we also believe would help strengthen banking. Among these are:

"(1) The broadening in the states of branch banking laws where conditions warrant an extension of this type of banking service to the public;

"(2) The establishment of sound minimum capital funds under which banks will be allowed to operate, which should be materially higher than now prevails in most states; specifically, we believe that the minimum capital with which any new bank shall be chartered, whether state or national, should be at least $50,000;

"(3) The provision of funds and regulations to keep the official staffs of all supervisory departments up to a level of ability and integrity that will universally inspire confidence among bankers whose activities they are empowered to review, and will supply real added defenses to the public interests they are appointed to protect.

"(4) In connection with the policies of bank chartering departments, we would recommend that, even to a greater extent than is now the practice, the greatest care and moderation should be exercised in granting new charters, so as to guard against overbanking or the launching of new banks by unqualified persons, which have doubtless been serious factors in the bank failure situation in the past.

"(5) Also, referring to Federal Reserve practice not requiring legislation, we believe that the Federal Reserve Banks should exercise more freely their rights to examine banks and use their discretionary power to refuse rediscount facilities to banks indulging in objectionable banking methods."

Banker-Farmer Plan

An editorial in Southern Cultivator says: "Favorable comment is being made upon the wisdom and promised results of the farmer-banker agricultural program in Georgia. Industrial leaders and publicists, noting that 115 of the 161 counties in the state have pledged prosecution of the 'live-at-home' farm reform, are regarding the working out of the plan this year as of more interest to American farmers than any developments of the Soviet five-year plan in Russia. Agricultural actuaries are of the opinion that if Georgia farmers, backed by our cooperating bankers and supply men, demonstrate the expected economies and profits of this home-support plan, it will quickly become a contagious custom all over the agricultural areas of the nation. It will be the writing of a new 'declaration of independence' for the individualist farmers of the country, putting them upon solid terms of credit and prosperity without need of recourse to federal or state financial relief measures. The man of the soil who lives year in and year out 'on his own' will stand up in his community an economic freeman, making his own terms with the world of finance and trade."

A meeting of farmers, bankers, and newspaper men of St. Croix County, Wisconsin, recently organized a drive to promote the growing of alfalfa in such quantity as to save the dairyman the expense of commercial feed, and insure greater dairy profits. It is planned in this campaign to have, within the next three years, at least one acre of alfalfa produced for each dairy cow in the county, or a total of about 40,000 acres.

THE MACHINE AGE APPLIED TO CRIME

Methods Employed by Criminals Demand New Police Methods, Bankers Association Official Declares.

URGED by criminals of modern technical (mechanical) developments such as automobiles, machine guns and airplanes have given them advantages which old-fashioned local and disconnected police systems are powerless to combat and the situation demands the broader modern protection of State police systems, James E. Baum, deputy manager American Bankers Association in charge of its crime investigating department, declares in the protective section" of the American Bankers Association Journal.

"The Association's Protective Committee has repeatedly urged the advantages of extending state police systems beyond the nine eastern States which have enjoyed this protection for many years," Mr. Baum says. "The time has passed when we can safely rely upon the disconnected and oftentimes ineffective methods of local and county police. The advent of automobiles and better roads, to say nothing of machine guns and airplanes, demands the same wide latitude in authority and field of operation be given the police no less than the criminal."

Statewide Police Plans Best.

He quotes a Kansas judge as saying that "our system of sheriffs and constables was not designed to meet present-day conditions. As a system of law enforcement, it is as out of date as old common-law pleading, both evolved about the same time. The semi-military, highly trained State police officer, owing allegiance only to State laws, is the most effective agency for order yet brought forth."

"Every year the robbery experience of banks in the nine States having State police proves the merits and urgent need of State-wide police protection," says Mr. Baum. "Last year, for example, there were 88 bank holdups in Connecticut, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island and West Virginia where State police forces are operated," he continues. "Although this total is exceptionally high due to an unprecedented number of robberies in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, it is little more than half the number of daylight bank robberies suffered in 1930 in Illinois alone. Furthermore, this total of 88 robberies in the nine eastern States was exceeded in California, where there were 42 bank holdups, and in Ohio where banks suffered 40 similar attacks.

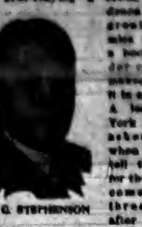
Holdups Fewer Under New Plan

"If we extend the comparison of the robbery experience in these States enjoying State-wide police protection to the record in eight central and far western States, we find a total of 204 bank holdups in the latter group. The odds, therefore, continue to be not less than 5 to 1 against the banks in these western States, where they are denied the speedy, coordinated action of State police and their modern means of transportation and communication. The same comparison holds true of the farmers' losses through robberies of livestock, poultry, produce, etc.

"Moreover, these State police forces invariably yield an operating profit in the amount of fines collected and the value of stolen property recovered. Bankers interested in cutting down the cost of robbery insurance might well consider this job of extending State police systems as a timely, co-operative service to be undertaken alongside the farmers."

BANK EMPLOYEES SENT TO SCHOOL

Modern Scientific Financial and Management Methods Taught Throughout Country.



THE American Institute of Banking Section of the American Bankers Association conducts 223 chapters, or local banking schools in as many cities throughout the country. One large city chapter has almost 6,000 students, who are combining formal theoretical and practical banking studies with their daily working experience and other places have these schools with a thousand to two thousand students. In addition there are fifty study groups in small communities with some 6,000 enrollments. All told over 42,000 bank people are taking these courses—not only clerks, but junior officers and even senior officers in some of the more advanced work.

The work of the institute has been declared to be "a dynamic economic force, pouring into banking a broadening, deepening stream of better qualified bankers than could be developed merely by the daily workings of banking itself," and it has been suggested that every bank worker should be compelled to combine institute courses with his work. A good many banks now make it a part of the contract of employment that an employee shall undertake to render himself proficient and trustworthy in banking by taking institute work and others make successful progress in this educational aspect of banking a pre-requisite to promotion. Plans are being developed to make the benefits of banking education through this organization more generally available in the rural districts.

GETTING BUSINESS GLOOM BEHIND US

By ROGER G. STEPHENSON
President American Bankers Association

THERE is such a thing as overstaying a boom. Overspeculation makes the great majority sell the bear in a boom, and under confidence makes them sell it in a depression. A leading New York banker was asked recently when he could tell that a turn for the better had come. "About three months after it has happened," he candidly replied.

R. G. STEPHENSON

There is more significance in that remark than appears on the surface. As more and more manufacturers and business men realize that the turn has already come and that they are overstaying the time to adopt constructive policies, they begin cautiously to press their selling campaigns, to speed up their production, to enlarge their working forces and increase their commitments for supplies. It is the gathering weight of their influences that finally raises the pressure of confidence to the dynamic power of recovery.

The surest way to bring the nation out of the business depression is to raise the pressure of public confidence to the point of becoming such a dynamic force. It has invariably been the push of that force which has started recovery in the past, and it is the gathering power of this force which will start recovery from this present depression.

It is a favorable sign of the times that there seems to be general agreement that the bottom of the depression has been reached and all eyes are peeled and looking ahead for the first indications that the turn for the better is in sight. Who knows but what the first thing we know we will find ourselves looking backward instead of forward as we realize that the turn has already come. It is a rough and rocky road that runs across the bottom of the valley of business depression, and most of us are too busy steering the old Ford from bump to bump to be able to take in all the scenery. So who knows but what some important changes in the landscape are already taking place.

BANKERS FAVOR GRADUAL CHANGE

National Commission Believes Local Sentiment Should Govern Evolution in Methods of Conducting Banking.

IF substantial changes are to be brought about in branch banking in the United States they should originate within the states rather than from Washington on inter-state lines as proposed in "trade area" branch banking plans, a recent report of the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association declares. Such changes, it adds, "should develop by evolutionary rather than revolutionary stages."

"The extension of branch banking through state action would mean that states not now permitting state banks to have branches or else closely restricting them, would individually liberalize their laws as an expression of changing local desires and conditions, and this doubtless would insure a deliberate, evolutionary process," the report says. "The other method, that is, through Federal action, would mean a sweeping change for the country as a whole, for legislation granting branch banking powers to national banks in all states, regardless of local sentiment, would, of course, induce equivalent branch banking enactments in every state in the Union not now permitting or really wanting state banks to have branches, in order to keep them on a competitive equality.

Upholds State Privileges

"We find some bankers who feel that a proper stimulus to the development of branch banking would be given by the Federal Government taking the initiative through granting broader privileges within state lines to national banks than they now enjoy. It is argued that state governments could then follow suit as to state banks and that in this way a more progressive branch banking attitude might be promoted by the national banks taking the lead. While we do not deny that there may be some merit in this view as to some specific localities, we stand firm nevertheless on the principle that no such grant of powers to national banks should cross state lines, or exceed the privileges that state legislatures could and would grant to their state banks.

"Moreover we believe that if the choice between these two possible courses of extending branch banking were put up to bankers they would be generally opposed to any forcible imposition of branch banking on the states through the medium of the national bank system. We believe it would be preferable for any change to come about through the more gradual and democratic method of the states granting their banks branch banking powers state by state where, if, and as local conditions and sentiment might be ready for a change."

"Silence—And Little Of That" Is Featuring At Washington

Editor's Note—The opinions expressed by the writer of this story each week are not necessarily concurred in by this newspaper.

(By Fred Holmes)
Washington Cor. for The Boone Co. Recorder

"I want nothing in this court but silence," screamed the judge, "and darn little of that."

And Scotland's famous poet, Campbell Campbell, was lead to remark:

"There was silence deep as death; And the boldest held his breath, For a time."

Just now silence is causing more perturbation in political Washington than anything else, and the boldest is holding his breath—"for a time."

Of course, the present silence of the ever silent Coolidge was discounted long ago. That in any ordinary circumstances the ex-President would joust with Herbert Hoover for the Republican Presidential nomination next year is inconceivable, and doubtless Mr. Coolidge considers his position too well known and assured to make necessary any comment whatsoever from him. But the name Coolidge simply will not down.

The latest pronouncement in connection with the dim and hazy Calvin Coolidge candidacy comes from Colonel James F. Coupal, former White House physician and close personal friend of the ex-President—a source of information not to be lightly considered. Colonel Coupal is spending a vacation at Lake Minnetonka, in Minnesota, and the St. Paul Dispatch quotes him as foHows:

"Mr. Coolidge will run for President in 1932 if the people of this country evince an unmistakable and unquestionable desire to 'draft' him to pull the country out of this period of depression and he can have the Presidency without any political or other obligations attached to it."

With respect to former President Coolidge, it is fully recognized that he has a strong following and that many of his admirers would like to see him nominated. Possibilities of drafting him have been discussed a great deal in political quarters. But while Republican political leaders here are interested in the interview of Colonel Coupal, it is not looked upon as changing the outlook for the next Republican national convention. The predominating view of these political chiefs was summed up a few days ago by Senator Geo. B. Moses, of New Hampshire, who said that it was not "in the cards" for anyone" to take the nomination for President away from Mr. Hoover. As things stand today, Mr. Hoover's strength in next year's convention should be very similar to that of Mr. Coolidge in the convention of 1924, when the latter, serving as President and seeking nomination for another term, received on the first ballot 1065 votes out of a total of 1109.

Here it is not seriously believed that Mr. Coolidge will let his name be used in the presidential primaries. But the Sphinx of Northampton and Plymouth remains silent.

Another contributor to the harrassing uncertainities of silence is one Alfred Emanuel Smith, and the same deathlike stillness pervades whatever neighborhood may enconce his friend and advisor, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National Committee. Does Al Smith intend to run for the Presidency again, or does he not? On one hand it is contended that he is engrossed in business; that he has come to be convinced that he could not win the election even if he received the nomination; that he is having his own troubles with Tammany leaders who would deprive him of the New York delegation, and that he is merely awaiting the opportune moment to declare himself for Gov. Roosevelt.

However, on the other hand it is asserted that Smith is convinced that the Democratic party owes him another chance; that he believes he could beat Herbert Hoover on account of the tendency of voters to blame the administration for hard times, and because of the growth of wet sentiment throughout the country; that he is biding his time to put Gov. Roosevelt out of the running by taking the New York delegation away from him, and that the equally mute Raskob is for him, first, last and all the time.

In a statement made public following his departure for Europe, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South said that Alfred E. Smith would in all probability be the Democratic presidential nominee next year. He also said that "dry" Democrats would not support either Mr. Smith or Governor Roosevelt. Bishop Cannon is anything but silent. Prejudiced political prognosticators rarely are.

In the meantime, is it to be said of Smith and Raskob that "Silent men like silent waters are deep and dangerous?

The noise in the star chambers of the publicity bureaus of both of the great parties would not disturb the cat-nap of a victim of insomnia. Of course, these ancient enemies are making faces at each other and giving vent to scarcely audible growls over the question of tariff revision, but when it comes to such outstanding issues as making political capital out of President Hoover's proposal of a war-debt payment vacation; his suggestion that the Farm Board sell wheat and cotton to Germany on long-time credit; the uncertainty of the ultimate outcome of these propositions and their effect upon business depression and unemployment in this country; our foreign relations generally, and the seeming procrastination in connection with the taking of active steps in the direction of drought, grasshopper and other relief, the silence of the proverbial oyster is outclassed on both sides.

Franklin D. Roosevelt has been heard from but not on the subject of his candidacy. However, in his case it is taken for granted that "silence gives consent." Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic leader in Pennsylvania, James A. Farley, chairman of the New York Democratic State Committee, Mayor Anthony Cermak, of Chicago, James Walsh, former chairman of the Connecticut Democratic State Central Committee and a leader of the "Old Guard" in his party, and many other partisan non-aspirants to executive chieftainship have been exercising their vocal organs—some with the assistance of megaphones—but all have so far failed to dispel the trepidation of an electorate in the present seign of Silence. Maybe it is, as the English poet Shelly tells us:

"A deep silence like the fearful calm
That slumbers in the storm's portentous pause."

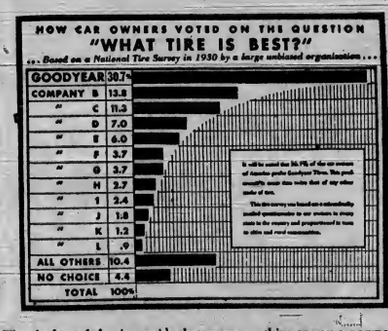
Let's cut through this welter of words

WHEN you set out to buy tires, don't you really want the most miles and the utmost in safety at the lowest possible price.

That being your objective, which tire should you buy?

If the experience of 20,000,000 motorists means anything, you should certainly buy Goodyears.



But if you try to puzzle through the welter of statistics on thicknesses, weights and diameters you lose the main issue and are as much at sea as ever.

The one and only reliable guide for you to follow is the seasoned preference of the public.

And that preference is overwhelmingly for Goodyear.

This fact expressed year after year by Goodyear's great leadership is concretely told again in the findings of an impartial investigation made by an unbiased dependable institution that asked 205,000 car owners this simple question:

QUESTION: "Regardless of price, convenience, etc., what make of tire do you consider the BEST tire made?"

There's the only buying guide that means anything to you car owners.

GOODYEAR ALL-WEATHER

The last word in style, mileage, value!

With Goodyear quality priced so low, why not avail yourself of the long mileage, safety and the good looks that have made Goodyear reputation?

THE FAMILY DOCTOR

JOHN JOSEPH GAINES, M.D.

"POISONED HEARTS"

My readers, I feel sure, will pardon this bit of personal history, since it might concern many thousands of people who are past middle age—at a time when we watch our common enemy from every possible angle of attack, life grows precious as years advance.

Possibly nine years ago, I began to get sudden, vague, alarming symptoms—a feeling that I was about to drop and "pass out." It was far from pleasing, I assure you. I had never paused to take an inventory of myself. These "spells" came suddenly, anywhere, and without warning—the immediate symptom, a rapidly weakening heart. Being a smoker, I at once thought of tobacco.

From one of these attacks I staggered into the office of a neighbor physician. After some examination he said, "you've got a poisoned heart, doctor—I don't think it is tobacco; on the other hand, I don't see at this moment just what it is; you need a heart tonic, and need it right away, till further investigation."

Well . . . "investigation" revealed poisoning by a substance known as "Indicon." Its cause PUTREACTION OF THE CONTENT OF THE COLON. Not decomposition, mind you; PUTREFACTION, going on inside of my digestive canal. It had been going on a long time, creeping on, as my bodily indolence grew more chronic.

I set about to clean house, and at once. This indican, in large amounts within the body, will, in time, weaken the entire cardiovascular system, until death may result; then, the newspapers say "victim of heart attack." So many these days. Possibly hundreds of sudden deaths caused by indican poisoning—simply because we neglect to look up evidence in that direction!

To test for this poison is easy. Two 1st tubes required. In one, put equal parts of the patient's urine, chloroform, and pure hydrochloric acid; add a few drops of hydrogen peroxide; shake the mixture, and pour from one tube to the other a half-dozen times; if indican is present, a heavy blue color will appear in the mixture, varying with the quantity of the poison. Then, clean out and keep cleaned out! Not once, but for a year!

Invents New Process

T. M. RECTOR, chemical engineer of General Foods Corporation, has been credited with the invention of the new vita-fresh process of packing coffee in an almost perfect vacuum. By excluding air from the can, the new process keeps coffee fresh for many months. The vita-fresh method has been termed "the most important advance in years in the coffee industry." Rector's home is in Rutherford, N. J.

CHICAGO AS A DISPENSER OF JUSTICE

It is not only ironical that a fifteen-year old Chicago child should be sentenced to eighteen years in the State penitentiary. It is an American tragedy. And one grotesque enough to cause an onlooking world to wonder just what sort of an act the largest city in the underworld will put on next.

An illiterate mayor takes the stage to blatantly denounce the British race, while behind the scenes he nurses rackets and gangdom, the greatest menaces to America today. School teachers go without their pay, while the city magnificently subscribes for the World's Fair. Federal officers compete against the corruptness of the city courts, while an indifferent citizenry looks on with passive amusement.

There were 312 gang murders in Chicago last year and not a single conviction, yet last week a mere child was given eighteen years because he killed one policeman.

Chicago newspapers will point to Indiana as one of the slightly backward states. But if the great city of Chicago is symbolical of the proper form of constructive progress and government, we must say that we prefer the methods of the Hoosier State.—The Lawrenceburg (Ind.,) Press.

Days of the Week

The week consisting of seven days is a unit of time which dates from prehistoric antiquity. Each of the seven days corresponds to one of the seven moving heavenly bodies then known. Sunday and Monday are named after the sun and moon; Tuesday was named for Mars (Tues in Norse) day; Wednesday, Mercury's (Wodan's) day; Thursday, Jupiter's (Thor's) day; Friday, Venus' (Freia's) day, and Saturday, Saturn's day.

Freed From Pain After Suffering Two Years

"For two long years I was in agony, the pains were so severe I lost much sleep and became very nervous, my limbs were swollen—I carefully followed advice rendered me by people who were supposed to know. I took medicine daily, but none seemed to affect my condition.

"As time went on I became desperate, my kidneys were bothering me more than ever, my bladder had become weak, and I was compelled to arise many times during the night. Karnak was recommended and I decided to find out just what it would do. I have used several bottles and just what a glorious change, no one can ever realize. I have no pain whatsoever, my system is gradually becoming normal and I feel better than I have in years. I shall always praise and advise Karnak to anyone suffering from rheumatism."

Kentucky Boys to Visit Detroit as Winners in Coach Competition

EDWARD WIENTJES

H. MAC HUFFMAN

Edward Wientjes and H. Mac Huffman of Newport, are preparing for a three-day visit in Detroit, as guests of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild, representing Kentucky at the first annual meeting of Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild winners. The meeting will be held in the automobile capital this month.

Wientjes and Huffman qualified for the honor, which is limited to two boys in each state, by constructing the best miniature Napoleonic coaches in the $50,000 competition sponsored by the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild. At the judging held recently in Louisville, the were awarded the trip, $50 each in gold, and the right to have their models judged in the national competition for four university scholarships of four years each.

Two other Kentucky boys, Jack Hoover, of Paducah, and Vola L. Sharpe, of Corbin, will also have their models judged in the scholarship competition, and receive $50 each as winners of second awards.

The Detroit meeting, to be held August 24, 25 and 26, will be filled with entertainment and instruction, says advice from Guild headquarters. It will include visits to industrial plants, a day at the General Motors Proving Ground, a dinner, a boat trip, and a big league ball game, to mention only a few of the features.

The entire Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild program is to be repeated next year, the same list of awards being offered for outstanding coach models.

BIG BONE.

Those on the sick list are Mrs. Mary Noell, two children of Ray Sparks and Richard Dudgeon.

Mrs. H. E. Miller visited Mrs. Mary Noel one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Yelton entertained several for dinner Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Lou Miller and Bertha Newberry have gone on their annual fishing trip. Will be gone two weeks. Mrs. H. F. Jones, of Erlanger, has charge of the store during their absence.

Willie Moore and Elmer Waters of Walton, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Ryle Saturday.

Bobbie Carroll has a very bad foot. He cut it an a piece of glass. It is better at this writing.

Delbert Carpenter, of Ohio, was the guest of his mother Mrs. Wayne Adams, Saturday and Sunday.

Apparently Bagged Had Found Rare Profit...le

The New Yorker thought he had apprehended every form of panhandling extant. Recently, however, he visited Washington and learned a new wrinkle in extracting money from the pockets of the public.

Walking through a public square in the afternoon with one of the natives who lives in the capital, a man approached, in his arms was a baby; at his side was his wife and walking in front were two more children not over six years old.

Holding a half-dollar up between his thumb and thumb, the man with the baby muttered to the New Yorker as he passed: "Won't you help me pay my rent?"

The visitor dug into his pocket for a quarter, but the judge stopped him.

"You don't know if this man is worth helping," he said. "We have a community chest in Washington to take care of such cases."

As the New Yorker argued the point with the judge, the man and his family disappeared.

A few minutes later a taxicab swept past and as the New Yorker jumped back to avoid it he saw, comfortably driving home, the man who had pleaded for assistance with his rent, and the whole family accompanying him.—New York Sun.

People of Asia Minor First to Breed Mules?

The mule, which is the product of a cross between a mare and a male ass, has been bred as a beast of burden since early times. The inhabitants of Mysia, Paphlagonia and Capadocia, ancient countries in Asia Minor, are said to have been the first people to raise mules. This, while not definitely established, is borne out by Homeric tradition. Mules were bred in large numbers by both the ancient Greeks and Romans. The Jews were forbidden to breed mules by Leviticus 19:19, which declares, "Thou shalt not let thy cattle gender with a diverse kind." Evidently, however, the Israelites either imported the hybrids or broke the law, because early in their history they possessed large numbers of mules, which in a hilly country like Palestine were preferable to horses and asses for many purposes. It is probable that in some cases "mule" is employed in English translations of the Bible when "ass" would be the proper word.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Islands Now American

Wake island was acquired by the United States in 1898, as a result of the Spanish-American war, and was ceded to this country by Spain under the treaty of Paris, which ended the war. Midway islands are now a part of the Hawaiian group, and under the jurisdiction of the Hawaiian government. They were discovered by Capt. U. C. Brooks in the ship Gambier on July 5, 1859, and officially taken possession of in the name of the United States on August 28, 1867, by Captain Reynolds of the U.'S. S. Lackawanna. Baker island was taken possession of in the name of the United States in 1839 by an American named Michael Baker, who first discovered it in 1832. Howland island was discovered by George E. Netcher in 1842, and officially possessed in the name of the United States in 1857.

In Old Celtic Lands

Of all the interesting trips in France, Brittany should be included, especially the south coast, with its seresorts. This is the land of the "Pardons," those semireligious and semipagan festivals, when the villagers don the costumes and play the ceremonies which go back to the days of the dolmen and menhir of their wild moorlands. Paris—Nantes—Savenay—St. Nazaire is the route to follow and the great Pardon centers are at Auray, St. Malo, Quiberon, Quimper, Daoulas, Plougastel and St. Anne-la-Palud, where the most important Pardon in Brittany is held on the last Saturday and Sunday in August. These old Celtic lands of France have a fascination different from the rest of France.

And He Fled

A golfer who has devoted the better part of the last five summers to the pursuit of the little white sphere was the happy recipient on his birthday of a set of expensive matched clubs. The first thing he did was to summon a companion in the sport and gloat (as only golfers know how to gloat over such an acquisition) openly before him.

"Ah," exclaimed the friend tartly, "that's a wonderful set of clubs. Now all you have to do is to learn how to play the game." And he fled from the house followed by a flood of epithets (pronounced as only golfers know how to pronounce them).—Burlington Union.

Chemists of Olden Days

The Egyptians appear to have possessed greater knowledge of chemistry than any other of the ancient nations. For one thing, it takes unusual skill to preserve a corpse for centuries in such perfect condition as the ancient mummies unearthed in Egypt happen to be. These people stood very high in the production of medicines and dyes as well as toilet soap, vinegar, metals, alloys, salts, glass and enamel. The Arabs, Greeks and Romans all obtained their knowledge of chemistry from the Egyptians without being able to add anything of importance to this knowledge.

Five Thousand Dollar Verdict Returned In Railway Damage Suit

MRS. IDA ENGLISH SUCCESSFUL IN CLAIM FOR DEATH OF HUSBAND—RAILROAD ATTORNEYS WILL TAKE APPEAL

A jury in circuit court here Wednesday morning returned a verdict for five thousand dollars in favor of Mrs. Ida English, administrator of the estate of John English, deceased, against the Louisville and Nashville Railway.

The suit was the outgrowth of a well remembered accident which occurred on that road at Walton on October 24th, 1929, and in which Mr. English lost his life. It was shortly after nine o'clock on that morning that a south bound passenger train struck a truck belonging to the Mayhugh Lumber Company, driven by Mr. English, at what is known as the Nicholson crossing at the north edge of the town of Walton.

The engine and several cars were derailed and hurled several yards from the track, while the truck was entirely demolished. The fireman and engineer also were killed.

The plaintiff, represesnted by Attorney O. M. Rogers and son, James C. Rogers, claimed that the railroad company was negligent in that, according to their claim, the wig-wag signal at the crossing was not working at the time, that there was a dangerous curve just north of the point of the accident and that the train was running at an excessive speed.

The company, represented by Judge N. E. Riddell and Woodward, Hamilton and Lewis, of Louisville, based their defense on a claim of contributory negligence on the [illegible] was to it.

The company claimed that Mr. English could and should have seen the train approaching, that he could and should have heard the signals given by the operators of the train before reaching the crossing. They also claimed that their wig-wag signal was in operation at the time of the accident.

The trial occupied all of Monday and Tuesday, the jury being held until late Tuesday night in what apparently was a futile effort to reach an agreement. The court, however, dismissed them for the night and at approximately ten o'clock Wednesday morning the verdict was returned.

Defense counsel announced immediately after the verdict that an appeal would be taken from the verdict and judgment.

W. M. U. NOTES

W. M. U. of Big Bone met and held their regular meeting Thursday August 13th, at the home of Misses Mary and Emma Glore. 32 were present, as it was also a birthday dinner in honor of Miss Mary who is to be 90 years of age in a few days. After our society met everyone enjoyed the day just to see how she enjoyed it at her age. No doubt she has been a member for many years not knowing exactly how long.

The birthday cakes of Angel Food were furnished by Mrs. K. M. Aylor, Mrs. Paul Aylor and Mrs. Eunice Pettit, which were decorated with 90 candles.

We overlooked last month to state our new member of which we are proud to mention Mrs. Lizzie Schwanke and also two this month, Mrs. Eunice Pettit and Mrs. Lillie Young. Our next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Frank Sebree on Saturday Sept., 9th. Hoping each member will be present.

The Big Bone revival will begin next Sunday morning August 23rd, under the wonderful voice of Rev. Wayman. No doubt many of the Radio listeners are well acquainted with this speaker. Everyone is urged to attend these services.

JOINT COUNCIL MEETING

The semi-annual meeting of the Joint Council of Florence Parish of Lutheran churches will be held next Saturday at the Hebron church. The officers' wives and all members of the Ladies Aid Societies are also invited for a social meeting with the ladies of the Hebron church.

HOPE DIES

FOR BELLEVIEW WHEN WALTON TEAM GOES ON HITTING SPREE — LATTER TEAM TO CLASH WITH PETERSBURG FOR COUNTY TITLE

The Belleview ball club, which has shown improved strength during the second half, saw its last chance for a part in the titular series go down under an avalanche of Walton base hits at the Walton park last Saturday afternoon. The final tabulation revealed a Walton victory by the overwhelming score of 14 to 1.

It was purely a case of too much power in the Walton attack, a no better one than which is possessed by any amateur club in this entire section. The loss knocked Belleview out of its mathematical chance because of the fact that Petersburg registered a ninth inning victory over Hebron. Had Belleview been able to win against a Petersburg loss they would have had a chance to tie for first place by defeating Petersburg this week on their home grounds.

Norman was on the hill for Walton and pitched a careful and clever game, allowing but six well scattered bingles, as against some nineteen off of the combined box work of Rogers and Brady. Rogers went the first five innings and allowed nine hits and six runs, Brady finishing and allowing ten hits and eight runs in those three innings.

Peculiarly enough Belleview, although scoring but one run, was leading for a space of a few brief moments in the second inning. Ryle led off with a triple to right on the first ball pitched and Brady, who started the game in right, knocked him home with a sharp base hit. Norman, who had started using fast ones against Belleview, suddenly changed his tactics with the result that he slow balled them to a canter for the remainder of the contest.

Facing a one run lead Walton began to "shoot" the works in their half and from then on it was simply a question of how many. Since it's a hot, weary afternoon we won't go into detail as to the scoring, but will mention a few brief achievements of the home team.

They scored two in the second, two in the third then skipped the fourth. They continued with two more in the fifth and opened on Joe Brady with three in the sixth. They again let up for a spell, counting none in the seventh, but came back for a noble thrust of five artistic tallies in the eighth, which served merely as ornamental black marks on the score sheet.

The feature of the game was the crashing of the gate to the Hall of Fame by Bobby Ross, clever Walton short fielder, who made no less than five clean blows in as many excursions to the rubber. When Bobby was waiting his turn at bat in the eighth with two out and two on he was pulling for Laws, his immediate predecessor in the line-up, to finish the game so that he would not have to take a chance on spoiling a perfect day. But Laws walked and Ross simply dug his right spike in the soil and plastered out his fifth sock of the afternoon. Hensley, Belleview third sacker, missed by inches a perfect afternoon of three when Dudgeon pulled down his long drive to left in the second. He later made two hits in as many times up.

Belleview will play at home next Saturday afternoon as the hosts to Petersburg, second half champs, while Walton, first half victors will entertain Hebron.

CORNCRACKER CLUB

Quite a few of the members of the Corncracker Club attended the 4-H camp at Camp Ernst on Gunpowder creek last week.

The week was spent playing games and swimming. All had a fine time.

NEW HIGHWAY

TO CUMBERLAND FALLS WILL BE OPENED ON LABOR DAY—COMPLETES IMPORTANT LINK IN PARK-TO-PARK ROAD

Corbin, Ky., Aug. 20—Plans for the observing the opening of the new grade boulevard highway from Corbin to Cumberland Falls on Labor Day, September 7th are almost completed. The gigantic celebration is being sponsored by the Corbin Chamber of Commerce and other civic organizations.

The new highway is one of the greatest scenic roads in the state and is an important link in the newly created Eastern National Park-to-Park Highway. It will make accessible Cumberland Falls, the greatest waterfall east of the Mississippi exclusive of Niagara.

The celebration here on Labor Day is expected to attract thousands of visitors from all over Kentucky and neighboring states. Word has been received here that the Chattanooga, Tenn., Automobile Club is planning a motorcade to the opening. Other cities are urged to be represented by motorcades.

Plans for the day include dedicatory services at Corbin in the morning, with speeches by distinguished men who have been instrumental in presenting Cumberland Falls to Kentucky for park purposes, band concerts, amusements and plenty of food and refreshments. In the afternoon the road will be thrown open, permitting the crowd to visit Cumberland Falls over the new highway.

The program will begin at 11 a. m., at Corbin, Labor Day, September 7th.

GRANT R. D.

WILL BE SERVED FROM UNION AND BURLINGTON R. D. TWO

Notice of very important and drastic changes of the distribution of mail west and south of Burlington was received by Postmaster Everett Hickman here this week.

The change, which will become effective on September 1st, directs that Grant rural route be discontinued and that the delivery of mail to the present patrons of that route be made by Alfred Jones, on Burlington route two, and Leslie Sullivan, Union rural route carrier. The change will necessitate the coverage of 41.1 miles per day by Mr. Jones, whereas he, formerly covered 25.33 miles per day.

No order was received relative to any change in the delivery of the mail over Grant Star route, which is covered by T. B. Gason. The change will materially increase the salaries of both Mr. Jones and Mr. Sullivan.

Only last week examinations were held to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Robert A. Brady on the Grant route, which vacancy has been filled temporarily by William Rogers. Thus it will be seen that the decision of the Department is a comparatively late one and in line with the recent order to cut expenses to the bone in each governmental department.

All patrons of routes affected by the recent order are urged by the Department to make box changes in accordance with postal regulations, which information will be supplied by your new carrier upon inquiry.

The new route of Mr. Jones will be as follows:

Starting at Burlington Postoffice, the carrier will go southwest on Grant-Burlington pike to Grant Postoffice; south on River Road to McVille, East to Waterloo; East to Huston corner; southerly on Ryle Hill road and retrace; south on East Bend pike to Kelly corner; southerly to Stevens and retrace; Southwest on Union Grade Road to Walter Ryle corner; Northeast on Union Grade road to Smith corner and return, retrace from Walter Ryle corner to Kelly corner west of Ferry Road to Rabbit Hash; north on River Road to McVille; east to Waterloo; Northwest to Rice corner; South to Locust Grove; South east and retrace; Northeast and east to Conner corner; North to Rice corner; Southwest and retrace; Northeast and north on East Bend pike to Postoffice.

FLORENCE FAIR

MAKING PREPARATIONS FOR ANNUAL MEETING—WILL BE ONE OF FEW SUCH INSTITUTIONS TO "BEAT DEPRESSION"

North Kentucky Fair is slipping up on all of us. It starts next Wednesday. This is one of the few fairs that is being held this year. Let's render it our full support.

The Fair is a most excellent place to study the best in agricultural products. The breeder of purebred stock and the producer of market stock should look forward to the fair as a place to secure the best in type and breeding. Many leading sheep, hog and cattle breeders are planning to exhibit this year. They will have good breeding stock that can likely be purchased reasonable.

Thursday, August 27th is 4-H Club Day at Florence Fair. 4-H Community Club Exhibits, girls sewing work, poultry, Holstein cattle, lamb club, rabbits, crops projects, judging contests and special club events are all entered on this day.

A special feature of the fair this year will be a 4-H dairy calf showmanship contest. The winner of the contest will receive a $5.00 premium. The dairy champion will also be selected to represent the county in competition for the Cooperative Pure Milk Association prize heifer awarded to the district champion. All 4-H members will be eligible to compete in the poultry judging contest held on club day.

LET'S DON'T FORGET—FLORENCE FAIR BEGINS NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Officers of the association are: C. F. Blankenbeker, President; R. B. Rouse, Vice-President; Hubert Conner, Secretary; Florence Deposit Bank, Treasurer. Other directors are: A. B. Ronde, Schuyler L. [illegible] C. Hicks, Union.

LARGE CROWDS AT FLORENCE

Such large crowds have been coming to the Florence Fair Grounds dance pavillion each Saturday night that it has become necessary for the management to open the dance hall on Thursday nights and Sunday nights as well. The management urges that patrons do not forget that a free show is on tap each Thursday, Saturday and Sunday evening with the Chicago night Club entertainers. Jule Burnett's Royal Cavaliers furnish the music at the modern dance hall, while Johnny Gadd and his old time fiddlers always are on hand at the lower hall for the old time dancers. Burnett's Orchestra spent fourteen week's last summer in Europe.

BREACH WIDENS

AS CONTEST SUITS ARE FILED BY PETTY WING AGAINST MAYOR HARRISON FACTION IN LOUISVILLE

Twenty-four election suits have been filed in the city of Louisville, which contest the election of the Harrison wing of the Republican party in the August primary over the Petty-Ryans wing of the same organization.

The suits, it is said, will serve to widen the breach between these two factions until it will be well nigh unhealable before the day of the November state election in which Mayor Harrison will be a candidate for Governor and in which he must carry his city and county by an overwhelming majority if he is to win.

The suits allege that irregularities practiced in 379 out of 633 precincts and was "by far the greatest steal of any kind of an election in the history of Louisville, even worse than 1903, or before or since."

The filing of the suits was the truculent answer to numerous overtures of peace made by the Harrison wing to the Petty wing a little over a week ago.

Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Beck, of Campaign, Illinois, were visitors at the home of Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Heibert on Monday and Tuesday of last week.

Circuit Court Enters Decree Against Town In Annexation Suit

ELSMERE PERMANENTLY ENJOINED FROM TAKING ON BOONE COUNTY PROPERTY—CITIZENS OF NONPARIEL PARK RELIEVED BY ORDER

Judgment was entered in a suit in the Boone Circuit Court this week, which has been causing considerable comment and which is of vital importance to a great many citizens of NonPariel Park, a subdivision located in Boone county and near Florence and the Kenton county line. Judgment was entered by Judge J. G. Vallandingham in favor of the plaintiff, Mrs. Henrietta Tanner, who had brought suit against the Town of Elsmere, which the plaintiff's petition states lies wholly within Kenton county.

The suit, which was filed by Attorneys B. H. Riley and John L. Vest on March 24th, 1930, stated that Mrs. Tanner's property had been annexed to the Town of Elsmere and that a tax amounted to approximately twenty-three dollars and that subsequently and upon her final refusal to pay same that a penalty of some thirteen dollars had been added. A number of other property holders in Nonpariel Park were interested in the suit in that their property had been annexed likewise and against their consent.

Monday Judge Vallandingham entered a judgment which set out in substance that a town, located entirely and wholly within one county, could not annex and levy a tax against property lying wholly and entirely within the borders of another county. The decision clears up a difficulty that has been the subject of great [illegible] was represented by Stanley Chrisman, has not announced whether or not it will take an appeal

4-H CAMP IS SUCCESSFUL

The largest and most successful 4-H Club Camp ever held in Northern Kentucky closed last Saturday morning at Camp Ernst in Boone county. Six counties, Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant, Gallatin, Owen and Grant took part with representatives from each county doing their full share in the displaying their 4-H Head, Health, Heart and Hand spirit that made the camp not only instructive but enjoyable to all attending.

One hundred and forty-seven boys and girls and approximately twenty-eight adult leaders, special instructors, county health nurses and county agents attended the full camp program. The Y. M. C. A. camp officials also rendered full cooperation throughout the camp. The members returned home Saturday morning tired out but with the spirit that showed they had enjoyed the week. The list of star and medal campers will be published at a later date.

CLUB MEMBERS ENCAMP

Boone, Kenton, Campbell, Grant, Gallatin and Owen county club members were encamping at Camp Ernst Tuesday afternoon. It will be a big week for all members attending. Camp is the reward for club members who have faithfully and satisfactorily carried on their project work and have their record books up-to-date.

While the exact number of enrollment by counties was not available at this writing County Agent H. R. Forkner reported that there was a big increase in the number of Boone county members sending in camp reservations at the last minute than was expected.

The camp program began in full swing at 6:00 o'clock Wednesday morning. The getting up whistle blew at 6:00 a. m., with a half hour to dress, wash and clean up bunks. Six thirty, the sitting up exercise whistle blew for a snappy line-up and breakfast was served at seven. The morning programs were devoted to agricultural, home ecoomics, health and handcraft instruction, the afternoon programs to athletic contests and the night programs to vesper services and entertainment.

Plenty of watermelons on the local market now. Most of them are not up to standard.

CINCHED BY THE PETERSBURG TEAM WHEN PITCHER HITS HOMER WITH THREE ON—HEBRON PITCHER HURLS GOOD GAME

With three mates aboard and the score tied at four-up Geo. Boehler, who, incidentally, utilizes his spare time in the box, delivered a home run Saturday that meant victory for his team.

It was a mighty wallop which cleared the fence in right center and, as it fell from view behind the hedge fence that skirts the Hebron outer gardens, it carried with it the last possible semblance of doubt as to a lot of things. Chief of said doubts of course was the Petersburg championship hope and a few minor claims, such as thatt Boehler is a whopsome clubber, as well as a mighty pitcher and that he means a lot to the Petersburg club. Hebron fans who felt his sting Saturday even are claiming that he is about 80 per cent of that team. However, as a matter of course, there are many down-the-river fans who will dispute this vigorously, in spite of their fond-admiration for Big George.

As stated above that home run of Boehler's in that ninth put an end to the last doubt that Petersburg was going to win the second half and, incidentally, broke up a nice ball game. Braun, as predicted in these columns last week, hurled a good game against Petersburg but [illegible] ing [illegible] ing [illegible] ing

THE GREATEST MAN OF HIS TIME

Sixty years ago a young telegraph operator named Thomas A. Edison invented a method of sending messages in both directions at once on a telegraph wire. It was the most marvelous human invention up to that time. The young man got $100,000 for his patent, which was a fortune in those days.

He began experimenting with other electrical inventions, and before the Centennial of 1876 his name was a household word all over the world. He invented, among other things, the waxed paper in which the package groceries you buy are wrapped. He invented the mimeograph, the first successful duplicating process. Sholes, first inventor of the typewriter, came to Edison with his crude model and Edison taught him how to make it work. Professor Bell had the idea of talking over a wire; Edison's invention of the carbon transmitter made the telephone a success. Dr. Brush invented the electric arc light; Edison conceived the idea of putting electric light in small units into bottles, and invented the incandescent lamp. In the course of his telephone experiments he invented the phonograph. A little later he invented the movies. In between he invented new and economical methods of producing cement and developed the electric storage battery.

It is not too much to say of Edison that his inventions have revolutionized the world. They have changed our manner of living, our habits of thought, our whole scheme of things within one man's lifetime. His active brain never stopped working.

The great electrical wizard's serious illness at 84 has again focused the eyes of the world upon him. We hope that he will recover his health and keep on working until he is a hundred. The world cannot afford to lose Thomas A. Edison.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR

(The Carlisle Mercury)

Last week this writer had the pleasure of meeting for the first time the Democratic nominee for Governor of Kentucky, Judge Ruby Laffoon, of Madisonville. We like him. We are convinced that the people of Kentucky are going to like him immensely; that they are going to see in him, as this writer believes he saw, a man of rugged honesty, of undoubted sincerity, plentifully endowed with that rarest of gifts, common sense, and combining in his nature the uncommon attributes of practical business sagacity and a kindly heart.

The day had been hot, the journey long, the nominee had sat in political conference most of the preceding night. It was not, we thought, a happy combination of circumstances for a first meeting. But once we fell under the spell of an easy geniality of greeting, with which men are born and which is seldom acquired, and under the charm of a modulation of voice that is typically Kentuckian. Immediately we felt at home.

This writer was reared in that section of Kentucky peculiarly favored by the Almighty in the luxuriance of its carpeting and the fertility of its limestone soil. We of this section, like that God smiled upon it in its making and, truly, it is a region of beauty. So, there lingers with us yet some of that provincial naivete and pride of section— a hangover, so to speak, of the horse and buggy days—which constrains one to regard a journey of some two hundred miles toward any point of the compass as quite a whit out of "God's Country." Long ago we have learned the artlessness of that attitude of mind; repeatedly we have seen it proven that sons as typical of those hardy woodsmen sires, who followed Boone through the Gap from Virginia and the Carolinas, are to be found in every county of Kentucky, from the tip of the Purchase to the Breaks of the Sandy.

So it was that as Judge Laffoon began to speak to a little group assembled about a supper table in Madisonville, the thought came to us that a Kentuckian might have been brought to that town and table blindfolded and he would have known that he was among his own people. We have heard such voices hail the visitor riding up to old stile-blocks in other days, voices bearing an indefinable quality of welcome, an easy courtesy, as typical of Kentucky as is the cordial hail of "light, stranger!" from some mountain cabin in its misty cove.

We thought, as he spoke, here is a man who will not need to be introduced to Kentuckians. They will know he is of them and feel akin to him. We observed the expression in his eyes when he said: "I have no riches to leave to my family, to my children and grand-children; certainly I wish to leave them a good name." He was not making a campaign speech, but addressing informally a gathering of friends. The expression in his eyes was soft. There speaks a tender heart, we thought. We liked him the better for that, as we shall always like any man who is not ashamed to wear a bit of his heart on his sleeve. And we not only liked him, but admired him, when he said: "If I am elected Governor, I want every Kentuckian to feel free to come to me, to advise with me, with assurance of my sympathy, my interest, my willingness to hear advice—but, gentlemen, if I am elected Governor of Kentucky, I shall be its Governor." The eyes that can be soft, can light up and snap with determination too.

Back at home, with time to recall our impressions of Judge Laffoon, we would bring you this picture of the Democratic candidate for Governor. You will find him, when he comes to your county, as he will do at some time during the campaign, to be a man that you know. You will, we are sure, be impressed by his evident sincerity, his highly practical and calmly judicial type of mind. You will know that he is a man who has tthought much and constructively of the problems that confront Kentucky; a candidate, who—to use his own words—will not attempt "to paint the stars" in perfervid and meaningless oratory, nor mouth promises of impossible performance, but will bring to you the frank-hearted message of one who knows the vexed questions of State government, nor minimizes the labor and difficulty of their best solution.

You will find him a likable man, a plain man. He has served with distinction on the bench, yet he has escaped that aura of stilted dignity of which many eminent jurists are too painfully aware in dealings with their fellow men. Him you will know as a man who has stood on plowed ground; who has a sympathy, born of understanding, for the struggles and heartbreak of the man who wrests, by his own hysical efforts, his living and the sustenance of his family from the soil. You will find him imbued with the idea of making Kentucky a good Governor as his sole reward of office and with no further political ambitions to foster. You will like Judge Ruby Laffoon, we believe, as we like him. And, knowing him, we feel sure that Kentuckians will elect him Governor of Kentucky in November.

WE ALL KNOW HOW IT IS

(Letter of a retail merchant to his wholesaler in answer to a dun:)

My Dear Friend:

I beg leave to inform you that the present shattered condition of my bank account makes it impossible for me to send you a check in response to your request for fund for the "Aged and Decrepit Army Worms."

The state of my present financial condition is due to the effects of Federal laws, State laws, County laws, Corporation laws, By-laws, Sister-in-laws, Brother-in-laws, Mother-in-laws and outlaws, that have been foisted upon an unsuspecting public. Through these various laws, I have been held down, held up, walked on, sat on, sandbagged, flattened and squeezed until I do not know where I am, what I am, who I am, or why I am.

These laws compel me to pay a merchant tax, capital tax, capital stock tax, excess profit tax, income tax, real estate tax, city auto tax, gas tax, water tax, light tax, amusement tax, cigar tax, cigarette tax, street tax, road tax, school tax, surtax, syntax and carpet tacks.

In addition to paying these taxes I am requested and required to contribute to every society and organization that the inventive mind of man can organize. To the society of St. John the Baptist, The Women's Relief, The Navy League, The Children's Home Fund, the Policeman's Benefit, The Dorcas Society, The Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Boy Scouts, The Jewish Relief, The Belgium Relief, The Near East Relief, The Gold Diggers Home. Also, every hospital and every charitable institution in town. The Red Cross, The Black Cross, The White Cross, The Purple Cross and the Double Cross.

The government has so governed my business that I do not know who owns it. I am suspected, expected, inspected, disrespected, examined, reexamined, informed required, commanded and compelled until all I know is that I am supposed to provide an inexhaustible supply of money for every known need, desire or hope of the human race and because I refuse to donate all I have and go out and beg, borrow and steal money to give away, I am cussed, discussed, boycotted, talked to, talked about, lied to, lied about, held up, held down and robbed until I am nearly ruined, so the only reason I am clinging to life is to see what in the H——is coming next.—Sylvania (Ga.,) Telephone.

The Family Garden

VEGETABLE STORAGE

(Concluded)

Last week, we discussed the general specifications for vegetable storage structures; this week, specific hints will be given to enable gardeners to transform storage space they now have, with very little expense.

The details of the partition necessary between the warm crops in the same cellar has been discussed, but the subject of ventilating and warming the room, when necessary, has just been intimated.

In order to have complete ventilation the current of air must be directed, taking advantage of the natural movement of air which is that warm, moist air rises.

Supposing there is a three-light cellar window that leads from the storage room, the rest is simple. All that is necessary is to remove two lights and replace with sheets of tin, in the center of which round holes 6 inches across have been cut. One of these is to serve as the outlet for warm air, hence it should be fitted with a stovepipe elbow on the outside, and pointing up. It may be of advantage to connect one length or possibly two of stovepipe to serve as a stack to induce draught. In the other hole another 6-inch stovepipe elbow should be fitted, inside, and pointing down. To it and extending to within a few inches of the cellar floor, lengths of stovepipe may be attached, or a tube made of muslin may be substituted. Through this, cool air from the outside will fall, to replace the air that is drawn out by the ventilating stack.

Cool Storage Management

If the storage room fitted with this device is intended for cool vegetables, and if it is desired to lower the temperature both intake and escape vents are opened at night, but closed by day. If the outside temperature is severe, as in the winter, air should be admitted only for a short time, preferably in the day, whenever any "sweating" is apparent. In short, the ventilation system should be so managed that a temperature of 40 degrees is maintained, although temporary drops to 30 will do no serious damage. In severe cases it may be necessary to keep a fire; a coal oil stove, for example.

Warm Storage Management

If it is intended to store warm crops, the storage temperature for which is 50 degrees, firing is needed. The stove should be located at the intake for the cool outside air so that it is warmed and dried as it passes by. Just after the vegetables are stored, firing should be done, both vents left open, so as to drive off moisture and "cure" the crops. This improves the keeping quality, and prevents "sweating" later on. The temperature during the "curing" interval should be 75 or 80 degrees. After ten days, firing may be reduced, or stopped altogether. The vents should both be closed, and the temperature kept at 50 degrees. In case of severe temperature drops it will be necessary to fire if the storage cools below 50. In case of "sweating," as sometimes occurs, the vents should be partly open and a fire should be kept until all is dry again.

Perhaps these hints may point out the causes for failure properly to store vegetables in the past, and the cellar may be made to serve more satisfactorily.

COLLEGE TO STRESS LIVE-AT-HOME IN ITS STATE FAIR EXHIBITS

The live-at-home program will be featuredin the exhibits of the College of Agricul ture, University of Kentucky, at the Kentucky State Fair. The importance of farmers growing more of their own food and canning a liberal supply for winter will be stressed.

One booth will contain two houses built of food products. One will be constructed of fruits and vegetables conducive to good health, every one of which can be grown in Kentucky. The other house will be made of foods more or less dangerous to health, and strange to say all must be imported from other regions.

Another booth will extoll the virtues of the cow, showing how she contributes to the family welfare in milk to drink, cream for outter, and cheese and other products.

Other exhibits by the College of Agriculture will have to do with poultry and swine raising, marketing, farm management, vegetable gardening, fruit growing, pure seeds, tobacco growing and entomology. The 4-H club exhibit will contain canned vegetables and fruits, baked foods, clothing made by club girls, and room improvement demonstrations.

The College's exhibits will be in the Grandstand building in charge of L. C. Brewer.

A Guernsey cow owned by Bonnie Lynn Miller, a Jefferson county 4-H club boy, produced 4,503 pounds of milk and 226 pounds of fat in six months.

Fifty or more farmers in Oldham, Shelby, Jefferson, Henry and Warren counties have formed a pool to market orchard grass seed. Yields have been exceptionally good in many parts of the state this year. Buttorff Bros., in Oldham county received an average of 56 bushels to the acre from 20 acres. Walter Mansfield of Warren county had an average yield of thirty-three bushels from 70 acres. Warren county farmers produced a total of 15,000 bushels of orchard grass seed.

Three good crops of alfalfa have been cut in Fulton county, and in many instances another crop will be ready early in September.

The Pet Milk Co., at Mayfield, has been receiving 100,000 pounds of milk daily.

QUIT THIN LAND AND SCRUB STOCK SUGGESTS COLLEGE

The suggestion is made by the farm economics department of the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, that this may be a good time to stop cultivating thinner lands and to quit raising scrub stock.

"The present economic situation," says a statement by this department, "with prices of farm products on a low level, as compared with prices of items which the farmer must purchase in the operation of his farm, calls for the elimination from cultivation of the thinner land on many farms. In many cases this thin land could be more profitably devoted to sweet clover, lespedeza and gross for grazing. In other cases it may be set to black locust or some other fast growing trees for posts and farm wood.

"Periods of low prices for farm products offer a good opportunity for the recuperation of tired fields by keeping them in grass and clovers until prices become readjusted and their cultivation again becomes profitable. Farmers who have followed such practices in the past have ca'shed-in' on the increased yields they secured from these rested fields at times when it was not so imperative that operation costs be kept low.

"Costs can also be reduced by cultivating the medium fertile land less intensively, growing hay, small grain and corn instead of the more intensive crops such as tobacco, strawberries, and truck crops. This means reducing the acreage of the intensive crops and confining them to the more fertile land on the farm. Such a program will not only enable the individual farm to relieve the general condition of over-production of farm products which prevails at the present time. With a reduced cropping program more time will be left to make needed farm improvements, such as repairing buildings, improving fences and the like with the regular farm labor at a minimum cost.

Heavy hay and clover crops are being reported in Taylor county, especially where marl and good seed were used. Sam Coppock cut two and a half tons of hay to the acre where he spread marl last fall. Similar land not marled cut less than a ton. N. A. McKinley cut two tons of clover hay an acre from a 10-acre field sown with an adapted strain of red clover, while seed of unknown origin produced half of a ton to the acre. Korean lespedeza is expected to cut two to three tons of hay to the acre.

"The present season may also be opportune for the dairyman to cull out his poorer cows and replace them with better and younger animals on a low cost basis. Then when prices advance, his herd and plant will be in prime condition for the most profitable production. The same principle applies to other livestock enterprises for which the price outlook is unfavorable. It is not too early to begin thinking about your livestock program for next year."

The largest wheat crop in the history of Washington county was worth 46 to 48 cents a bushel at Harvest time.

Logan county wheat averaged 25 bushels to the acre, it is estimated Many farmers are interested in feeding wheat.

A GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN
Acts 11:1-18
Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.

Here is a lesson with an unusual amount of action. The Bible is far from being a dull book. To test this read from Acts 10:1 to 11:26 for the entire setting of the narrative. You will need your map in following Caesarea, Joppa and Jerusalem.

Cornelius is a Roman centurion who had found the emptiness of the Roman mythology for purposes of religion and had developed faith in Jehovah as the only God. He was making practical use of his religion through prayer and practice. The knowledge that he gained made him eager for a fuller understanding of spiritual truths. In the midst of a certain prayer season he was directed to send messengers to Joppa and get Peter as a teacher of still larger spiritual conceptions.

Now Peter was a devout Hebrew as well as a growing Christian. National customs were part of his very life. He was strict in maintaining kosher diet. While awaiting summons for dinner he had a vision of various animals let down from heaven in a sheet, and was told to kill and eat. At once his Hebrew training asserted itself as he declared that some of the animals were unclean. He was told that what God cleansed could not be unclean and the teaching of the vision was applied to those who at that very time were knocking at the gate. The messengers from Cornelius were admitted and next day Peter went to the home of a Gentile that he might preach there and have full fellowship with them.

When Peter preached the full gospel as it is in Jesus Christ there was a renewal of the outpouring of the Holy Spirit, as on the day of Pentecost. The same spiritual forces were released and without hesitation the evangelist proceeded to baptize the many believers.

BIG CASH PRIZES

Six hundred dollars, appropriated by the Kentucky Legislature, will be distributed in cash prizes on dairy cattle at the 4-H Club District Fair to be held in Lexington August 24-25. There will be classes and rings for Jerseys, Holsteins and Guernseys. Cash awards $52.50 to $25 will be made for the best groups of dairy cattle exhibited by counties.

Liberal cash prizes will be awarded on swine, beef cattle, poultry, sheep and other 4-H club exhibits. Stunts and other entertainments will be features of the two-day fair, which will be one of the largest events of its kind attempted in the United States. Five thousand farm boys and girls, members of 4-H Clubs in 24 central counties, will take part. Entries are being made to J. Ed. Parker, farm agent in Fayette county.

INTEREST GROWS IN TRENCH SILOS

Inquiries received at the College of Agriculture, University of Kentucky, indicate a growing interest in trench silos. This type of silos was tested by farmers in Fulton and other counties last year, and found satisfactory.

According to the agricultural engineering section of the College, the trench silo offers the cheapest method of storing ensilage. One can be constructed with little or no cash outlay, the farmer digging it with teams, plows and scrapers. A trench 12 feet wide at the top, 8 feet wide at the bottom, 8 feet deep and 43 feet long will hold enough ensilage for 16 cows for 180 days.

Farmers interested in the trench silo should see their county agent or write to the College of Agriculture for information about the details of their construction.

KENTUCKY FARM RADIO PROGRAM

The College of Agriculture will broadcast the following farm radio program from the University of Kentucky extension studios of W-H-A-S the week of August 12th. Each program will begin at 12:45, central standard time.

August 24—Is your poultry paying?—J. E. Humphrey.

Firing tobacco, Russell Hunt.

August 26—Timely topics on nutrition—Miss Statie Erikson.

Our insect friends—Miss Mary L. Didlake.

August 28—What farm folks are asking—L. C. Brewer.

Breathitt county's corn crop is said to be the best ever grown in that region.

Federal "Dole" By Congress Predicted For Next Session

(BY FRED HOLMES)
Washington Correspondent for The Boone County Recorder

Now that it is as certain as anything in politics can be a year ahead of the national conventions that Mr. Hoover will be nominated to succeed himself, that the Republican platform will take the dry side of the prohibition question and for the rest the usual pabulum with pride and viewing with alarm, that in all human probability the Democratic nomination will go to Franklin D. Roosevelt and the Democratic platform be mildly wet or noncommittal on the subject of prohibition, about all that remains to interest the general public in next year's conventions is the Vice-Presidential nominations, and in this neck of the woods, so far as can be noticed, nobody is losing any sleep over Vice-Presidential problems.

That being the case, interest here for the past week has been divided between the uncertainty of the organization of the next Senate and House and the certainty that unless public opinion calls a halt a Federal dole to the unemployed—voluntary and involuntary—will pass Congress during the coming session.

Both the Senate and the House are divided politically with unprecedented and trouble-breeding equality. The Republicans have merely a paper majority of one, and that only obtained by counting sixteen Progressives or Insurgents none of whom is tractable to caucus rule or amenable to the party whip. However, it has been taken self-interest. Several important chairmanships are now held by Progressive Senators, and every Senator loves his committee chairmanship better than his life. If the Democrats were permitted to organize the Senate, in the absence of a deal of such magnitude and portent as to be foredoomed, it would undoubtedly mean the replacement of every Republican chairman of a committee—Progressive as well as Regulars—with a Democrat.

It is by no means out of the question that if the Senate were under the necessity of electing a president pro tem in the next session in December—a rather empty honor, at best—Senator George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, the present incumbent, might be defeated. Several Republican Senators, not all of them Progressives, think the wise-cracking George ought to be disciplined. Somebody is always going to discipline the Granite State Senator, but nobody as yet has seemed to cover the post of disciplinarian.

However, unlike the House, the Senate is a continuing body. There will be no necessity for the election of a new president pro tem, nor any occasion for such election until the Democrats have a clean majority in the Senate. It is reported that Senator Nye is heading a movement to depose Senator Moses as President pro tem and elect in his place Senator Key Pittman, Democrat, of Nevada. While a motion to that effect would be almost, if not quite, unprecedented—and therefore not likely to be offered—and while, if offered, it is by no means certain that it could be carried, there is that possibility. But it is to be observed that Senator Moses and his adherents are not helpless in the event Nye should carry out his threat, nor without means of retaliation exceedingly unpalatable to the Progressives who joined in any such movement.

Senator Nye has the chairmanship of the Committee on Public Lands, Senator Borah has Foreign Relations, Senator Norris has Judiciary, Senator Couzens has Inter-State Commerce, Senator LaFollette has Manufactures. Is it to be doubted that the influence of all these Senators would be exerted against any action that would invite almost sure retaliation?

The question of organization of the next House has been confusing enough, with a membership comprising 214 Republicans, 212 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite, and eight vacancies evenly divided politically. But it became more confused when Representative O. B. Lovette, the independent Republican from Tennessee, reiterating that he did not know with which side he would affiliate when the House assembled. Mr. Lovette is credited with a similar statement, made just after he was elected in November to succeed B. Carroll Reece, whose views on government operation of hydroelectric power plants are said to have cost him the primary contest. Furthermore, both Democrats and Republicans have hopes of capturing the First Ohio District, which was Represented by Speaker Longworth. It is thought that John R. Hollister, a Cincinnati lawyer, will be the Republican candidate and will be opposed by State Senator David Lohrbach, Democrat. Both are outspoken anti-prohibitionists.

And therein reside the absorbing uncertainities.

So far as the Federal dole is concerned, signs of the forthcoming Treasury raids are many and unmistakable. Even Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the Republican National Committee, who had a conference with President Hoover a few days ago on the unemployment situation, is of the opinion that the Federal Government will give direct aid for purposes of relief to the hungry and unemployed this winter if it is found necessary to prevent suffering. Senator Fess declared that the President would have a "concrete plan."

However, while Senator Fess avers that direct government aid will be given as a last resort, he expressed the hope that it would not be found necessary and that the States and localities would meet the situation. But politicians seeking votes are planning ingenious schemes to saddle upon the Government the task of feeding workless people. Certain governors seem willing to prostitute their States to obtain Federal alms and Mayors of cities are joining in the march upon the Treasury. Instead of meeting the emergency by local and State organization, increasing numbers of citizens are now planning to shirk their duty.

On one hand it is set forth that one of the most dangerous aspects of this subversion movement is the willingness of fairly well-informed and patriotic citizens to destroy the fiber of American manhood. It is alleged that they close their eyes to the outrage that is to be perpetrated against the American system of governmnt. Rather than perform a heavy task they would wreck the government and debauch the people. They say that these respectable citizens are standing behind unscrupulous legislators who are preparing the legislation that will misappropriate the money these citizens themselves have paid and still must pay in taxes.

On the other hand it is asserted that if by a "dole" is meant the handing out of sums of money to people who don't work, not a corporal's guard be marshalled for it in Congress. But if by a "dole" is meant handing out food and clothing, just as was done, not matter by what name it is called.

But the consensus of opinion among those who think is that once the dole has been established, millions of defectives and degenerates will fasten themselves upon the government, idleness and perjury will be encouraged, and weak sisters of both sexes will yield to the temptation to live off the government without working. A vast Bureau cracy would be required to enumerate, classify and pay off these offscourings of the population. The workers, the self-respecting and the self-reliant would foot the enormous bill, thus increasing the burden which is already so heavy.

If the President is supported by the people, he may be able to block the movement for a Federal dole. At the present moment, however, it looks like a certainty.

Rev. Sproles is assisting in an interesting protracted meeting at Walton. There has been several additions.

The grand jurors were paid off as soon as they were discharged, each receiving $10.00 for five day's services.

A large copper head snake was killed in F. A. Hall's yard last Friday. Mrs. Hall discovered the reptile and called O. J. Ryle, who dispatched it in short order. It had but recently shed its old coat and was as bright as a new polished piece of copper.

The colored people have the timber ready to frame their new church building.

O. P. Conner has opened the new road in the Locust Grove neighborhood, and there is now and there is now a good road from Burlington to Rabbit Hash.

Jailer Adams had the court house bell rope changed so that it now comes down through the center of the circuit court room, making it much more convenient, and easier to ring.

The Directors of the Harvest Home are hustling up exhibits for their exhibition on September 14. They have advertised liberally and expect a good show, regardless of the ravages of the drought.

It is claimed on account of the drought that "a good mess of roasting ears cannot be obtained off of 500 acres of land in the bottoms," and that corn stalks will be worthless for fodder, as they contain no moisture. On the other hand there is said to be some very nice growing corn in some certain parts of the valley where rain chanced to fall.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Mr. W. T. Smith's theory is that for every fog there is in the month of August there will be one snow in the following winter. There has been one fog for this month, consequently he is certain there will be one snow next winter.

Hubert Gaines was in town Sunday morning driving his fleet-footed young horse.

Henry Quick, of Hebron, rendered his first jury service last week. He says that owing to the uncertainty of getting home every night to see the baby, he does not like to serve on a jury at a regular term.

Mrs. Laura Martin returned to her post of duty at Lakeland, last week.

R. B. Huey, of Belleview neighborhood, is talking of moving to Burlington to send his children to school this winter.

Atty. P. E. Cason was in the city yesterday.

Mrs. W. E. Piper, of Dayton, was visiting her relatives here the first of the week.

NEW TEST FOR SMOKING POINT OF COOKING FATS

A successful, rapid and comparatively simple method of determining point of cooking fats has been developed by John M. McCoy, a chemist in the meat-inspection laboratory of the United States Department of Agriculture.

The smoking point of fats has a practical application in the kitchen. Fats with a relatively high smoking point produce less smoke and there is less waste because such fats can be used over and over again for frying.

A relatively high smoking point is preferred in practically all deep-fat frying, and some consumers consider this as an evidence of superior quality, says Mr. McCoy. Some dealers are already using the smoking point as an index of quality. It is therefore obvious that the accurate determination of the smoking point has commercial significance.

In his efforts to develop suitable equipment for the test it was first necessary to select a satisfactory method of heating a definite quantity of method and filtered fat to determine the proper size of samples and containers, and to control other details.

In the test developed the samples are heated on an electric stove which is controlled by a rheostat to insure a proper rate of heating, which becomes very slow as the smoking point is approached. The containers are standard round-bottom flasks of 100 c. c. capacity. A black screen behind the flasks makes the smoke more readily distinguishable. The smoke is observed under artificial light of controlled intensity, since natural light was found to be too variable. The entire apparatus is protected against drafts too give further assurance of accuracy.

The smoking point is determined by taking the exact temperature at which the first wisp of smoke rises from the flask. In duplicate tests of the same samples the apparatus has given results to within 2 C., which is considered a satisfactory check on the dependability of the method, especially in view of the high temperature at which most cooking fats begin to smoke.

Beautiful Attic Sculpture

The so-called "Victory of Samothrace" is the "Goddess of Victory," excavated by French archeologists who were at work between 1863-67. The "Goddess of Victory" was represented by the Greeks as having wings. Her name was Nike. This statue, which was the great prize of the French archeologists, is a beautiful example of the Fourth century Attic sculpture. It was first set up by Demetrius Poliorcetes about 305 B. C.

Alaska's Old Capital

Sitka, Alaska, was the old Russian capital of Russian Alaska, and remained the capital of the new territory of Alaska when the Americans took possession on October 18, 1867. There was very little government in Alaska for some time after its acquisition, and it was not until the act of August 24, 1912, that the territory was organized and the capital officially established at Juneau.

CHAIN, GROUP AND BRANCH BANKING

Bankers' Commission Describes Differences Among Various Kinds of Multi-Office Banks.

The Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association has made the following statement on various types of banking systems operating through more than one office:

"We find that there are recognized in the banking world three types of multiple banking organizations, namely, chain bank systems, group bank systems and branch bank systems. They are alike solely in respect to the fact that each embraces under some form of common control or influence two or more banking places, but here the similarity stops since there are essential differences in organization and administration, especially as between branch banking and the chain and group forms.

"Chain banking is recognized as probably the least definite form of multiple banking organization. Generally speaking, this term refers to merely a string of individual separately chartered banks owned or controlled through stock holdings by one or more common individuals, sometimes without public knowledge of the common ownership. Frequently the controlled banks are not administered as a coherent whole under the guidance of a central, publicly known head office, but rather each bank is run as a separate unit bank in accord with the wishes of the dominant interest. In some cases, however, there is a central, publicly known control with a head office that formally supervises the operations of all the banks controlled, and this is perhaps the more desirable arrangement. It lacks, however, the definite legal responsibility that a corporate head organization would have. Each bank in a chain system operates under its own capital and there is ordinarily no binding relation among members of the string.

Group Responsibility

"Group banking, on the other hand, is a system in which, while the member banks are separately chartered and operate as individual units with their own capital, control is exercised through a publicly known corporate organization under the direction of a responsible head office. It openly holds stock control of the member banks and is morally and legally responsible as the chief stockholder for their administration and the statutory share of their liabilities. An essential feature is the fact that an organization of this kind is publicly known, which creates a large degree of responsiveness to public opinion. This is true because anything of an undesirable nature developing in one member of the group would create public distrust of the whole group. Therefore its sense of self-preservation as a group, if nothing else, tends to make it enforce standards of conduct throughout the members of the group and to assume responsibilities for them beyond what mere legal responsibilities would bring about.

"Branch banking is completely distinct from the two foregoing forms of multiple organization in that it does not consist of a string, chain or group of independent banks, for there is only one chartered bank in a branch organization and the extensions from it are all in the form of sub-offices without separate capital or corporate existence. For everything that is done through these offices the bank itself is just as responsible legally and in every other sense of the word as though it were done over its own counters at its head office."

Bankers Help

In a report on banker-farmer work, H. Lane Young, Chairman Agricultural Commission, American Bankers Association, shows that during the past year there were 409 meetings reported in 38 states, with a total attendance of 38,578. County key bankers numbering 2,541 were appointed in 39 states. Thirty-four states reported an expenditure by banks of $105,926 for developing better agricultural practices.

Special banker-farmer activities engaged in by banks in 27 states numbered 8,493, while 7,140 projects or farm programs were carried on by rural people through the influence of bankers.

For three years the Agricultural Commission has given special recognition to the state reporting the highest record of accomplishments and this year Georgia achieved first place with its banker-farmer agricultural program. Representatives of the Georgia State College and officials of the Georgia Bankers Association developed the methods and policies which made it possible for Georgia to carry out an effective program which emphasized "directed credit from banks for producing crops on the live-at-home basis."

Appreciation for the cooperation received from local bankers was recently expressed by County Agent R. E. Bodley of Gallatine County, Montana, who said: "My personal experience has been that the average banker will go more than half way with the county agent, providing the latter has demonstrated that his work is constructive and conservative, that he is a man capable of handling confidential information and treating it as such, and one who can 'keep his feet on the ground'."
